"One of the best signs of the times is that since January 1, when this law became effective there has been a steady growth of sentiment in favor of the measure." The governor also expressed the belief that "The saloon has gone forever from the State and that the time is coming when no liquor will be shipped into it."

After two and one-half months of prohibition in Washington, the jail in Clallam county is empty. Not a prisoner to care for! A pay roll of $65,000 per month, and everybody happy, writes a correspondent from Port Angeles.

It was expected that after closing the saloons in Spokane (Wash.) at least 150 of the downtown business locations would be thrown on the market at reduced rentals, but very soon the larger realty offices reported a vigorous demand for good business locations and closed more leases than at any similar period in two or three years. It is stated that readjustment is being completed with far more rapidity than was anticipated.

The cost of Spokane county, Washington, of caring for its poor and keeping its prisoners in February, 1916, was $7,660, or $11,409 less than in February a year ago.

"Spokane courts, peace officers and prosecutors alike have shown a laudable desire to make the prohibition statute one to be feared," says the Spokane (Wash.) Chronicle. "The result is plain. A half-dozen inflictions of good stiff penalties in the police court and a conviction or two like that secured before the superior bench recently are proving a decided discouragement to bootlegger and blind pig proprietors. A $250 fine and a season behind an iron grating will take both profit and pleasure out of the business of almost any man or woman who feels inclined to treat the statute lightly."

MEXICO CHIEFS WARN PERSHING

Serious Trouble Threatens Further Advance.

CARRANZISTAS MENACING.

Funston Throws 2,300 More Troops Over Border, Is Report—German Situation Said to Be Influencing Attitude of Administration—May Accept Story of Villa's Death.

Washington, April 19.—A warning has been served upon Brigadier General Pershing, commander of the American forces in Mexico, by the Carranza military authorities in southern Chihuahua that any attempt on the part of the American expedition to proceed further south will lead to serious trouble.

Major General Funston, forwarding the Pershing report, is understood to have described as threatening the attitude of the Carranzistas and to have asked for further instructions. He is said to have added that in view of the information in his possession he has already thrown 2,300 additional troops across the border to guard the line of communication.

There was no confirmation of press reports from the border of fresh attacks by Carranzistas on General Pershing's forces.

Secretary of War Baker, following the receipt of the Funston dispatch, carried it personally to the office of Secretary of State Lansing.

The two conferred some time concerning it, following which the secretary of war got into communication with the White House and made an appointment to confer with the president. Mr. Baker was with the president about an hour, but declined to comment on the object of his visit. Before seeing the president Secretary Baker said:

"We have given no orders to General Funston that change in any way the character of the expedition or its movements."

German Situation Enters.

Despite this announcement there is growing anxiety in official circles, and while officials continue skeptical concerning the reports of Villa's death, members of the president's cabinet are said to be urging that arrangements be made to withdraw the expedition, particularly in view of the German situation.

The argument is finding favor in certain official quarters that the administration accept the word of the Carranza government if the latter asserts that Villa is dead. The White House, however, is insisting that only the most definite proofs of the bandit's death, backed by the testimony of Americans in position to identify him, would cause the expedition to be withdrawn.

Both the state and war departments refused to comment on a report understood to have been received here from General Pershing to the effect that the German consul at Parral had been one of the prime instigators of the attack there on the American troops under Major Frank Tompkins, in which attack two Americans were killed, six wounded and one reported as missing.

According to the report which General Pershing is said to have sent, the German representative was a conspicuous figure on the streets during the attack and appeared to be actively inciting the Mexicans.

The representations which the state department has sent to General Carranza concerning the Parral incident have served to enable the American government to delay a response to the formal note of Carranza calling on the United States to treat with his government on the subject of withdrawing the American forces from Mexico.

In presenting a synopsis of General Pershing's report to General Carranza it was learned that Special Agent James Linn Rodgers at Mexico City was instructed not only to emphasize the statement of General Pershing that Major Tompkins and his troops were practically invited into the town, but to question the assertion by Carranza that in approaching the town without permission Major Tompkins was violating his instructions.

Reminder For Carranza.

Mr. Rodgers was instructed to remind General Carranza that the American government never agreed, as Carranza assumes, that the troops should not enter or pass through towns and that the only instructions given the American commanders were that they should not attempt to occupy towns or cities.

At the same time Mr. Rodgers was told to call attention to the fact that Major Tompkins was met at the outskirts of Parral by the mayor of the city and the Mexican military commander, Colonel Lazano, both of whom cordially welcomed him and gave him to understand that the presence of the American forces was not objectionable.

For this reason, Mr. Rodgers was instructed to say, the United States government cannot agree with the statement that Major Tompkins was to blame for what followed. On the contrary, emphasis is to be laid on the statement of the American officer that the moment it appeared that trouble would develop the American troops at once began to withdraw and were attacked when leaving.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

Boxing promoters are a strange crew. When Jess Willard, a real diamond in the rough, tried to break into the game four years ago, they laughed at him and it was only by chance that he obtained a match, being called upon to substitute for another man. For his first bout he received 7 per cent. of the receipts, his end amounting to less than $250. He recevied but a few dollars more for his second appearance, although he won the first bout handily. Now comes Fred Fulton, whose short record shows him to be a rank quitter, and who has yet to meet a good second rater, and the press agent would have the public believe that he will be paid $6,000 for meeting another third-rater. On the strength of this yarn the fans will be called to pay fancy prices to see a bout that cannot be anything but a farce.

Wiseacres have decreed that baseball umpires are blessed with the most thankless job being handed around these modern times, but whosoever believes in this has never stopped to consider the duties and returns of a bowling league secretary. Compiling alley averages is genuine labor for a thirty-second degree statisician and the individual who accepts this office for an organization may expect nothing but grumblings from individuals and criticism from the general public for even the most insignificant slip-up. No man is perfect, even in sport doings, and as it would require a perfect man to please every bowler and the "bawling" public we're inclined to believe that the calibre of individual who would accept the responsibilities of an alley league secretary is going to become extinct in the very near future.

Few people realize what a task it is to make a success out of a baseball league and right here it might be said that a greater degree of co-operation between managers, players and officials will be needed during the coming season to make the City Baseball League the same calibre circuit it was in 1915. The newness has worn off and the 1915 drones will have to put their shoulder to the wheel if the want to insure jobs for themselves next spring. Plainfield fans are willing to support a legitimate league but they will have to be shown this year that the city organization is up to par or they are going to shake it and clamor for independent "pro" sport.

Now that Frank Bruggy, the former Plainfield baseball player, has left for the "bushers" we can resume the regular summer sport routine. Nobody around these parts would be sure it was time for baseball if the annual Bruggy report didn't come through. Frank has been cavorting in the minors ever since he cut loose from his Bound Brook associates and besides being a clever baseball player he is recognized as one of the best basketball performers in the State. When Charlie Newhouse taught Frank the fine points of baseball he groomed him as a catcher but the big fellow has since shifted his playing depot to the base lines.

If these big league managers would only ship some of this surplus spring talent to Mexico or Europe it would relieve certain scribes of a whole lot of worry. A number of pencil pushers grinding out diamond dust spend considerable time at this season of the year in disposing of "excursionists" to spring training camps who never had an idea of making an honest living at baseball and are perfectly contented to let by-gones be by-gones. Let 'em rest in peace or we'll have the same outfit back with us again next March when the leaguers begin to flock to milder climes.

It 's high time someone started the ball rolling toward another Union County High School athletic meeting at Parker Field Decoration Day. The entertainment visiting athletes were accorded last year makes the local playground the popular selection for such an event and we have every reason to believe that the competition would prove even better than in the successful initial attempt last spring. Decoration Day is the logical date for a high school athletic tournament and there is just about enough time remaining in which to organize the program.

If you detest golf you detest it with your whole soul—until, succumbing to some vagrant temptation, you find, as is the way with novices, that the thing is absurdly easy and not an impossible way of spending an afternoon. Then you are doomed, for the next essay is sure to end in humiliating failure. Your pride is piqued. You are determined not to be beaten by so absurdly simple a game. You take lessons, find more unexpected difficulties, and before long your real purpose in life is golf.

Bowling enthusiasts are overstepping the rules of sportdom when they persist in butting in on the baseball season. Not a day goes by but what we are handed the results of alley matches played the night previous and indications point to a summer "edition" of the indoor pastime this year. Certain it is, however, that any prospective baseball candidate who has been throwing the wooden balls all winter is in fine fettle to handle the horsehide.

PLAINFIELD HAS A THIRTY-SECOND DEGREE CUBAN BASEBALL ENTHUSIAST WHO MAY PROVE TO BE ANOTHER GREAT MARSANS

Strange as it may seem, one of Plainfield's most ardent admirers of baseball is a Cuban. Oscar Beatencourt, recently of Havana, Cuba, is the fan, and since he located in this city he has spent many odd moments acquainting himself with the status of the national pastime in this section. Bits of stray baseball gossip have been gobbled up by this enthusiastic sport student, until he is now in full possession of a stock of information that would do credit to any American sand-lot product.

When the environment under which Oscar has lived is taken into consideration, however, one can easily see how he acquired "baseballology," for it is a well-known fact that American baseball managers, particularly Johnny McGraw and Connie Mack, look upon Havana as one of the best stopping-off places that could be selected for an exhibition tour. He has cavorted on the same field with the youngsters groomed by McGraw and Mack, and has witnessed a number of red-hot clashes on Cuban soil between the dark-skinned athletes of his home land and those sporting regalia made in Uncle Sam's factories.

Asked to contrast or compare American baseball with that staged in Cuba, Oscar shook his head and declared regretfully that the United States game had it on the Cuban sport in sixty different ways. According to Oscar, everybody wants to be a pitcher in Cuba, or he won't play; and that may be taken as one of the reasons for the number of olive-complexioned hurlers that have come into public prominence of late years.

Oscar takes pride in relating the details of a 9 to 0 licking Mendez, the Christy Mathewson of Cuba, administereed to McGraw's "Big Six" in an exhibition combat there three years ago, and the shutout verdict the Cuban idol tallied at the expense of "Chief" Bender the same year. Expressing it in his inimitable way, Oscar says that he went home without his hat after both games, meaning that he is in the same class with the American bleacherite, who will linger in the shadow of Coogan's Bluff until the chimes begin to ring for prayer meeting. As an evidence of his loyalty to his home ballists, Oscar claims that, with the calibre of management given American teams, the Cuban aggregations could vanquish anything the big leagues could turn out.

One of Oscar's other credentials for enlistment in the Society of American Fans is the fact that he gave the world's tourists the once-over in Havana during the trip several years ago. He says both McGraw, who is known to Cubans as the Mona Amiull (meaning "yellow monkey") and Connie Mack have plenty of followers in that country and a crowd is always assured every time they are slated to come there.

Oscar is anxious to get into the game and thinks he can keep up with the best there is in the field hereabouts. He hasn't had a chance to get acclimated to the American game as yet, but has the idea that it is enough like his home pastime to warrant an attempt. He will no doubt find it easy to hook up with some City League outfit ere the season opens, and who knows but what he may be another Marsans!

Beatoncourt lives at 126 Watchung avenue, and is employed as an expert cleaner in the Keller Cleaning Company's establishment on North avenue. During his short stay in America he has gained a wonderful knowledge of the English language and can now converse fluently with any born-and-bred American. He has also learned to read and write, and outside of his studies he likes baseball better than anything else.

P. H. S. GETS POLE IN CARNIVAL CLASS

Plainfield High School corralled the vantage mark in Class 8, of the New Jersey entries in the University of Pennsylvania relay race carnival, at the drawings for positions yesterday. The list is interesting, not only because it gives the position of the different schools from the pole, but because it gives some idea of the immensity of the exhibition. In all, there are entered 116 high school teams and 53 preparatory and academy teams, in addition to nearly 100 grammar and parochial schools.

Central High School of Newark drew the pole in the one mile high school championship of America, the premier feature of the high school card. East Orange will start fourth from the pole in the same event. The other two entries, Washington Central and Birmingham Central, drew second and third positions, respectively.

Newark Academy had luck just as good, drawing the pole in Class 5 of the preparatory schools' division. Peddie Institute of Hightstown, also drew the pole. The Peddies entered in Class 1 of the preparatory school division, and are asked to meet such teams as the Brooklyn Poly Prep, Haverford, Bethlehem, Penn Charter and Tome School.

Blair Academy, entered in Class 3, drew fourth position, and St. Benedict's, in Class 4, the eighth mark. Three of the six teams in Class 3 of the high school division are from New Jersey. East Orange will start from third position, Trenton, fourth, and Atlantic City, sixth. Bayonne will start second from the pole in Class 4. South Side of Newark will start last from the pole in the same division.

Vineland secured the pole and Camden last from the mark in Class 6 of the high schools.

M'KENZIE TAKES FIVE OUT OF SIX CONTESTS

Rolling on Gates' alleys last night, McKenzie took three in a row from Connolly in the first series and two out of three in the second series from Voorhees. McKenzie established a 246 in the third game, with Connolly and Voorhees set up a 203 in his first time out last night.

The scores:

Connolly	173	163	169
McKenzie	183	202	246
McKenzie	171	165	179
Voorhees	203	148	174

DAME MISFORTUNE ON TRAIL OF SCHOOL NINE

Old "Hard Luck" seems to be camping on the trail of Plainfield High School's baseball squad this season for fair. Starting off with Mills getting a bad cut on his hand, Coudray and Butler were shortly afterwards declared ineligible to play. Now comes the announcement of Victorson being out for the rest of the season. "Vic." has been doing the pitching so far this year and was the only one that seemed to have the goods, but the work has been too much of a strain, coming as it does after an operation last year. With the loss of Butler and Victorson, 't leaves only Hutchcroft, a southpaw, to do the twirling, unless Coach Patch happens to produce a phenomenon pretty quick.

"Vic." was on the mound in both games so far, winning from the Trenton Deaf Mutes easily and losing to Trenton High School. McDowell, who has some ability, may be utilized, and possibly Linke will also take another shot at it.

SPORTING NOTES

JIM EMERY SIGNS WITH RAHWAY CLUB

Plainfield Boy Hooks up With Speedy Clan of Ballists for the Summer.

Jimmy Emery, a born-and-bred Plainfield baseball player, who has starred on many semi-pro. and professional ball fields in the past ten years, has signed to play this season with the Rahway baseball club, holding down second base. When performing in a Plainfield Pet uniform, Emery cavorted about third base, making a great success of the difficult corner both for the old Clinton avenue club, of which he was one of the charter members; and for the Plainfield Central New Jersey League outfit.

He is one of the last of the old clan of Clinton avenue stars, among whom were Norman Barnes, Adam Scott, Jack and Britt Martin, Jimmy Montross and a host of other well-knowns. The Rahway season will open Memorial Day on the Riverside Park grounds.

Here's the team: Alfred (Johnny) Brooks, right field; Erxleben, center field; Fritzie Boettner, left field; Captain David Armstrong on the initial sack, with Ed Durand as his understudy; J. Emery from the Queen City, second base; Tommy Mullins, short; "Bub" Durand, third; Fred Olde in the pitcher's box, with Arthur (Monk) Armstrong as assistant.

The catcher will be "Billy" MacGuire of New York. Billy will be a surprise party. He has a record. Elmer (Doc) Armstrong will be his assistant. John J. Hall of Elizabeth will be the official umpire.

The opening game will be with the Meadow Brook team of Newark. The remainder of the schedule, as announced last night: June 3, Richmond Hills of Brooklyn, N. Y.; June 10, Chathams of Brooklyn; June 17, In-Er-Seals of New York; July 1, the Y. M. C. of Garwood; July 8, the Ridgewoods of Brooklyn; July 15, the In-Er-Seals; July 22, the Sunset A. C. of Brooklyn.

TWENTY-ONE GIRL ATHLETES ASPIRE TO BASEBALL HONORS AT N. P. H. S.

Miss Theresa McCullough Elected Captain—Will Practice Every Day in Bloomers and Middy Blouses—Expect to Challenge Male Teams—Carroll Taylor Coaching—May Form Three-Cornered League Witth Y. W. C. A. and Plainfield High School—Miss McCullough a Pitching Star of No Mean Merit.

Twenty-one pink-cheeked models of superior-type American sportswomen answered to the call for candidates for the North Plainfield High School feminine baseball team on Hyde Oval yesterday afternoon, Miss Theresa McCullough, who was elected captain, putting them through a stiff workout preparatory to selecting a set of "regulars" and "seconds." Miss McCullough will be assisted in shaping the raw recruits by Carroll Taylor, a former North Plainfield schoolboy player who recently returned from the Colorado School of Mines, where he is pursuing a course of study.

Speaking of the organization plans in an enthusiastic vein last night, Miss McCullough declared that the talent was even better than she had anticipated, and that she expected to "clean up" with every male combine connected with the institution.

Miss McCullough is known to be a twirler of rare merit, having demonstrated her ability to the Plainfield public on Parker Field last fall, when she twirled the first inning of the Business Men-Doctors' benefit game for the former aggregation. She is also the holder of a record for distance throwing with a regulation baseball, having hurled the sphere 151 feet at the feminine athletic meet here last September. Her versatility extends to all branches of sportdom, particularly basketball, she having been the star of the borough school sextet this past season.

That it would be necessary to use a male catcher for the girls' games was the opinion of those promoting the idea prior to yesterday's practice, but it is now probable that a suitable candidate will be chosen from the two feminine catchers who appeared on the scene yesterday. Naomi Wisch and Eleanor Walsh are the two who aspire to catch Miss McCullough's speedy shots, and with a little training, both may develop into good receivers.

The girls will appear in bloomers and middies, similar to those worn in basketball competition, and that the contests for position will be keen is a foregone conclusion. It is possible that Plainfield High School girls and those representing the Y. W. C. A. will also adopt the baseball idea, and a three-cornered league, the first of its kind in the country, may be formed. Those who reported yesterday were:

FORMER PLAINFIELD PET WILL RETURN TO SPORT

Harry Jennings, the lanky baseball hurler who twirled for Ernie Dorflinger's Plainfield Pets in 1912 and 1913, will return to the sport on April 29, when he is slated to pitch for Rutgers Alumni in the annual clash with the undergraduate forces. Jennings was a student in New Brunswick while playing here, taking part in the semi-pro. pastime during the summer months. He sustained a severe injury while at work in a New Brunswick factory last summer and, as a consequence, had to quit college. He has so far improved, however, that he intends to return in the fall and resume his studies.

With the return of Jennings, Rutgers will have one of the best pitchers in the game next year. He has a world of speed and one of the finest assortments of curves ever exhibited on a local diamond. Although he is not yet a graduate, the collegians will permit him to work during three or four innings of the game on April 29.

Ex-Athletics May Beat Old Partners.

Players who were discovered and developed by Connie Mack will oppose the new Athletics in four American league cities this year. Whenever his team is slammed through the efforts of these old stars Mack's only solace will be the money he has received for some of their releases.

The White Sox will present four former Mack men in their lineup—Eddie Collins, Eddie Murphy, Jack Lapp and Joe Jackson. The New Yorks have Bob Shawkey and J. Franklin Baker. Eddie Plank will be one of the St. Louis Browns' leading pitchers, while Jack Barry will help the Red Sox at the middle bag.

LEWIS M. BIRD IS EIGHTY-THREE TODAY

Prominent Borough Resident Mentioned by Neighbors as Being "Years Young."

Neighbors and close friends of Lewis M. Bird, of Mountain avenue, are today remarking that the respected old gentleman is "eighty-three years young," for every one of them know that April 19 is his birthday. They refer to him as "young" because he is anything but what a man of eighty-three years is supposed to be in a constitutional way. He is not only the possessor of vigorous health befitting one almost a quarter of a century his junior, but sees and hears like a youth and can argue politics, European war, North Plainfield's civic doings, the prospects for an early summer or any other of the important subjects of the day. He is making no special observance of his natal anniversary. He arose as usual this morning at 5:30 and provided he finishes some business matters early this afternoon, will drive to Liberty Corner to renew old acquaintances—a custom he has always maintained as each milestone in life is passed.

Mr. Bird is in the truck-gardening business, and keeps active every day in his work. He was born in Mt. Bethel April 19, 1833, and was the son of Elias and Mary Trimmer Bird. For years his father carried on a farm and lumber mill, and handled the lumber from thousands of acres in Somerset county. He is the last survivor of ten children.

Mr. Bird came to Plainfield forty-one years ago, and has lived an active life since then. He has long been a member of the First Baptist church. He keeps posted on all the current events of the day, and reads the papers with a keen interest.

He is related to most of the families of Bird in this vicinity, being a cousin of many, one of whom is former Postmaster Elias H. Bird, of Sandford avenue.

He has been a life-long Democrat, casting his first vote for James Buchanan for president, in 1856. He broke away once, and voted for Abraham Lincoln, Republican, in November, 1860.

He recalls vividly the visit of President Andrew Johnson, Lincoln's vice-president and successor, who came on a campaign tour to New Jersey and spoke from a car on the Jersey Central, in Scotch Plains. Then the railroad had a station in Scotch Plains, and ran along the present Midway avenue from there to Plainfield, before the road was moved over from Third street.

Mr. Bird has three children: Contractor George W. Bird, with whom he lives; Mrs. C. B. Pope, and Lewis R. Bird, all living here.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

CLASSIS SELECTS SYNOD DELEGATES

ADOPT CONSTITUTION

Resolutions Congratulating Netherwood Reformed Church on Progress of New Edifice are Adopted—Next Meeting in Newark, May 18.

The nomination of delegates to the General Synod which meets in Grand Rapids, Michigan, in June, and the election of delegates to the Particular Synod which convenes in Philadelphia on May 2, was the chief business transacted at the afternoon meeting of the spring session of the Classis of Newark held in Trinity Reformed church yesterday. The delegates chosen to represent the Classis at Grand Rapids have to be approved by the Particular Synod, while the representatives to the latter assemblage are chosen here.

Rev. J. Y. Broek and T. R. Van Zandt were elected secundus delegates to the General Synod, while Mr. Broek and Edgar F. Sheppard were chosen as secundus delegates to the Particular Synod.

These delegates were nominated to the General Synod:

Primarius—Rev. O. M. Trousdale, Newark; Rev. George Hauser, Plainfield; Rev. C. H. Stewart and Rev. A. T. Broek, Newark; secundus—Rev. Uriah Mc Clinchie, Irvington; Rev. C. B. Condit, Newark; Rev. W. K. Giles, Orange; Rev. J. Y. Broek, Plainfield; elders—primarius — Roman Thoenig, David Kay, F. J. Henry and Giles Van Muyne, Newark; secundus—A. R. Corbet, Linden; Edgar F. Sheppard, Plainfield; J. J. Garrabrant, and J. H. McCroskery, Newark.

These delegates were elected to the Particular Synod:

Primarius—Rev. Uriah McClinchie, Irvington; Rev. C. B. Condit and Rev. O. M. Trousdale, Newark, Rev. W. W. Giles, Oranges; secundus—Rev. A. T. Broek, Newark; Rev. J. Y. Broek, Plainfield; Rev. C. E. Waldron, Brookdale; Rev. G. E. Hulst, Newark; elders—primarius—F. J. Henry, J. J. Garrabrant and Daniel Kay, Newark; A. R. Corbet, Linden; secundus—J. H. McCroskery, Newark; Stephen Cueman, Nutley; T. R. Van Zandt and Phillip Geise, Plainfield.

Other business of the afternoon was the adoption of the new constitution, which provides among other things that a minister shall be a member of the church of which he is pastor, or, when without a charge, he shall become a member of the church of his choice by the regular process of dismissal. The minister as an officer in the church is a member of his Classis and amenable solely thereto.

Resolutions were adopted congratulating the Netherwood Reformed church upon the excellent progress with its new edifice and thanking its members for yesterday's entertainment, as well as Trinity church for the use of its edifice in which to hold the session of Classis, and the owners of automobiles who loaned their machines to take the delegates about the city.

The Classis will meet again at the North Reformed church, Newark, May 18, when Harold W. Schenck, of this city, will be examined for ordination and installation to the ministry. He expects to become pastor of the Franklin church at Nutley, a call from that church being presented to him yesterday through Classis. The matter was laid on the table pending Mr. Schenck's examination and ordination. Mr. Schenck is the son of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, of West Front street, his father having been pastor of Trinity church for many years. He is now pastor-emeritus. Mr. Schenck will be graduated from the New Brunswick Seminary in June.

CARRIERS' FUND NOW TOTALS $750

Senator Martine and Congressman Capstick Are Among the Latest Contributors.

United States Senator James E. Martine and Congressman John H. Capstick are among the latest contributors to the letter-carriers' fund for the entertainment of the State convention here on May 30. The fund now totals about $750 and as much more is needed to provide the proper entertainment. The committee in charge sent out five hundred letters yesterday making a personal appeal for subscriptions. The committee issued the following today:

"The letter-carriers' convention will be of an advantage to the city of Plainfield. Conventions are valuable to the community—they are good for business and for the town. The great metropolis—New York—makes a specialty of conventions—their helpfulness is generally recognized.

"As a result of three years' work by the convention bureau of the Merchants' Association of New York, that city is today the leading convention city of the country, since the organization of the convention bureau and up to January 1, 1,102 conventions have been held in New York.

"It is estimated that for the year 1916, 500 conventions will bring 375,000 visitors to New York, giving a patronage to the merchants amounting to about $17,000,000. If that work is good for New York, why should not similar work be good for Plainfield?

"Let all citizens get back of the proposition, put their shoulders to the wheel so that the letter-carriers' convention in Plainfield will be a booming success.

"Let us resolve that every visitor to Plainfield will feel that he is cordially welcome; that he will leave town with an expression of hearty good will and with anticipations of a future return. Such a result will be one of the best methods of booming Plainfield. The citizens' committee has also received the following communication:

"'The city of Asbury Park, N. J., extends its very cordial greetings to the members of your organization and has the pleasure to invite them to hold their next business session in this beautiful City by the Sea. Asbury Park is best known as the 'Town Without a Frown,' which is sufficient assurance of a most hearty welcome.'"

A. B. CONLIN RETIRES AS EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Honored by Students as He Leaves Daily Spectator Board at Columbia.

Alan Bruce Conlin, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Westfield, who is a Senior at Columbia University, was among the students who attended the annual dinner at Hotel Martinique, New York City, Wednesday night, when he resigned as editor-in-chief of the Columbia Daily Spectator, the University's eight-page publication. At that time the Spectator passed into the hands of the 1917 board, Herbert A. Schwartz, of New York, succeeding Mr. Conlin.

Mr. Conlin was graduated from Plainfield High School in 1912, where he played on the football team in 1910-11. While in school here he was elected best actor and had "most school spirit," by vote of the class. He managed the Commencement Day "Oracle" in 1912. He is now editor-in-chief of senior class book at Columbia. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity, The Blue Pencil Society, Philolexian Society, the Senior Society of Sachems and Pi Delta Epsilon. He is in first year law school at Columbia and will receive B. S. degree in June. He will spend two more years there to complete the course. Mr. Conlin is the law school representative in the association cabinet, and one of the six men in university to receive gold King's Crown non-athletic insignia, the highest non-athletic honor at Columbia.

Abraham Lincoln Chapter, I. C. S., Fraternity of the World, will hold its annual meeting tonight, at which time officers will be elected.

FAILS TO BRING FORD FACTORY HERE

David T. Kenney Informed That Company Will Build on Newark Meadows.

Although David T. Kenney, as president of the Chamber of Commerce, made a hard and determined effort to bring Henry Ford's new Eastern automobile factory to Plainfield or Union county, his efforts were not rewarded. He received a letter today from F. L. Klingensmith, vice-president and treasurer of the Ford Company, that a suitable tract of land had been purchased adjacent to Newark, where the building is to be erected. The first structure, it is said, will be between 1,000 and 2,000 feet long. The site chosen is on the Newark meadows.

When Mr. Kenney heard that the Ford concern was to locate a factory in the East, he immediately got in touch with the officials and learned that an eighty-acre tract was desired, and it must be easy of access to both railroad and waterway. Mr. Kenney then personally visited various place in Union county, also Bound Brook, Dunellen and adjoining points, including Elizabeth. The last named city was the only one that had an available eighty-acre tract.

Mr. Kenney also had real estate agents assisting him in trying to locate a suitable site for the company. He even went so far as to send the company maps and data concerning Union county, with its increasing population, and while he did not succeed in his purpose, what he did is appreciated by the members of the Chamber of Commerce and others interested in Plainfield.

PLENTY OF FUN AT AMATEUR REVIVAL

A capacity audience at the Plainfield Theatre last night enjoyed a revival of "amateur night," the occasion on which aspiring vaudeville performers allow their friends to see what they can do. Seven acts were on the program arranged by Manager Shannon, and with one exception all were meritorious and enjoyable. George Goakinn, who rehearsed his act in Westfield and allowed the people there to "kid" him into believing he had talent, was the unfortunate who got the "hook." It was just as well that he did because the expectant crowd howled with delight when he was unceremoniously jerked away from the footlights.

Miss Hazel Stewart and Paul Pope, a local musical team, were awarded first prize. They gave a series of well rendered selections on the piano and mandolin. Second prize went to "Baby" Glaentzer, a five-year-old tot who sang popular songs in a manner worthy of one many times her senior. Joseph P. Doaks, a whistler and bird imitator, carried off third money, and fourth went to Charles Blueberry, a near-expert on minstrel bones made from spoons and a sad voiced soloist who made strong men weep with his rendition of "Sail On Silvery Moon."

If there had been a fifth prize it would undoubtedly have gone to "Hank" Justin, whose home is in Scranton, Pa., but who comes to Plainfield regularly via the underground route. He presented his original monologue entitled, "Rosewood Raglans," which he claims is a riot in every town he has visited. The fact that he had lots of friends in the audience saved him from being "'Hillsided" in one of the "Raglans" he told about. Harry Gilbert, who was entered from Dunellen, did quite well with a song and dance but a sleight-of-hand performer and a piccolo soloist scheduled to go on got "cold feet" when they saw what happened to the luckless George Goakinn.

"Amateur night" was one of the biggest theatrical events of each week a few years ago and Manager Shannon believes the time is ripe for revival. The attendance last night bore him out in this and he is now arranging for a bigger and better program for next week. All aspiring artists who believe they are cut out for vaudeville acting are invited to take part. The names and style of act can be left with Dave Rogers, the house treasurer, at the box office.

STOPPED FROM SOLICITING FOR BELGIUM RELIEF FUND

Mrs. Flora Etshevirria, of 295 West 147th street, New York, and Miss Minnie Morse, of the same address, were stopped from soliciting money and clothing in Plainfield yesterday by the local police. The women were soliciting for the Red Cross and Belgium relief fund. Captain Flynn stopped them late yesterday afternoon, telling them that local organizations were taking care of contributions to these funds here. The women went back to New York.

VON BERNSTORFF STILL SEES HOPE

BRYAN WILL BUTT IN

Berlin Papers Review Note Respectfully—Wilson Believes Germany Will Accede to U. S. Demands and Stop U-Boat Warfare.

Washington, April 20.—Germany still seeks a compromise. Even after the emphatic note of President Wilson, which was wired yesterday, Ambassador Von Bernstorff asked for a conference with Secretary Lansing, the purpose of which is believed to have been to discuss some sort of a curtailing of the activity of German submarines on the high seas. The conference was held this morning, but no statement was given out.

President Wilson's ultimatum left no room for diplomatic quibbling, and it is not believed that Secretary Lansing discussed the situation with Von Bernstorff at length. The issue is put squarely up to the Imperial German Government in the official communication, which said frankly that unless "present methods" in making war on enemy and neutral vessels were abandoned, the United States could no longer maintain friendly relations with the foreign nation.

Von Bernstorff is still hopeful that a way may be found to avert a severance of diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States, according to his friends; but he refuses to discuss the crisis with newspaper men. Count Von Bernstorff and Secretary Lansing also discussed the Von Igel case this morning. What agreement was reached on this is not known.

President Wilson believes that Germany will swallow its pride and accede to the firm demands of the United States, thus abandoning the submarine warfare. This opinion has been freely expressed by his associates in Washington since he appeared before a joint session of Congress at 1 o'clock yesterday. It is shared by a majority of members of both houses, who stand squarely behind the President in his position.

Bryan to Mix In.

News more alarming to friends of President Wilson than any that has come from Germany, reached here from Terra Haute today in a telegram that Mr. Bryan felt his "presence was required in Washington" and was on his way. It is not known who sent for the official custodian of the Dove of Peace; but it was probably some of the pacifists in Congress who look upon the new German note as a possible step to war and who intend to fight President Wilson every minute of the crisis.

German Listens Respectfully.

Berlin, April 20.—Germany will not allow President Wilson to define for its benefit the expression "principles of humanity," according to the frank editorial comment on the new note that has appeared. It was in the "Frankfurter Zeitung." The editorial said that Germany would listen respectfully to any protest of the United States concerning the loss of American lives as a result of submarine warfare, as to make inquiry in such cases was not an assumption of inquisitorial powers or an attempt to sit in judgment on the method of German warfare at sea.

J. T. VAIL HAS AN AD MAN ARRESTED

Charges Publishing Agent With Obtaining Money Under False Pretenses.

George A. Parker, agent of the Commercial Publishing Company, of Newark, was arrested there this morning and brought to Plainfield on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. Complaint against him was made by J. T. Vail, real estate dealer on North avenue, in this city.

Parker is locked up in the police station here. He is a well dressed man of business appearance. He insists he is innocent of any intent to commit a fraud.

Some time ago Mr. Vail, according to his complaint, gave Parker $15 for an advertisement in "The House-seekers' Guide," which was to have been published by the Commercial Publishing Company. He made his check out to the company but Mr. Vail says it was countersigned and cashed by Mr. Parker. Mr. Vail did not receive a copy of the publication and says Mr. Parker has refused to answer any letters concerning the advertisement. He even sent a special delivery which he says was signed for at the Parker home and, receiving no answer, he asked for the arrest of Parker. Chief Kiely forwarded the complaint to Newark, where the man was arrested this morning. He will be tried tomorrow morning before Judge De Meza.

$2,000 BLAZE ON FITZSIMMONS' FARM

Outbuilding Destroyed—Local Firemen Saved Valuable Residence.

Dewey Park had a $2,000 blaze last night when a conflagration started by a grass fire destroyed all but two of the outbuildings of the "Bob" Fitzsimmons place, now owned by Joseph Hendicks, of Hoboken. The destroyed buildings, out of which everything of value was removed, were a chicken coop 150 feet long, a cow barn, a large barn and a garage. Good work on the part of the Plainfield fire department, which was called, saved the house and other buildings.

E. R. Smalley, Joseph Gallagher, Edward Daniels and Thomas Briskey, of Dunellen, who stayed on the roof of the house while the big barn was burning fifty feet away. The heat was intense there and Smalley and his companions were congratulated for sticking in the manner in which they did. The Dunellen department would not send its apparatus because this would have left the town unprotected.

The fire was discovered by C. C. Hendricks, and Frank Farrell, of Dunellen, who smelt smoke as they were sitting on the front porch. The Lincoln fire department responded. The nearest hydrant was fully 700 feet away and their hose did not stretch far enough. The fire rapidly spread from the chicken to the barns. Under the direction of Chief Doane, hose of the Plainfield department was fastened to the hose of the Lincoln department and the city laddies shortly had a stream on the blaze.

The entire loss is understood to be covered by insurance.

LOCOMOTIVE PICKS UP AND DESTROYS MAIL BAG

A mail bag thrown from the Washington express passing through this city at 7:38 this morning landed on the eastbound freight track opposite the North avenue station this morning, and before it was seen by anyone, had been run over by a local passenger train. The pouch became entangled in the running gear of the engine, and in this way was carried to Westfield before it was noticed. At Richmond street the bag was partially ripped open, scattering the contents all along the track bed until just before Westfield was reached.

The first intimation the local post office received of what had happened was when railroad employes began picking up letters and delivering them at the nearest station. An immediate investigation was made, explained the cause of the trouble. A thorough search was made of the tracts between here and Westfield, and practically all the mail matter was recovered. Much of it had been mutilated or soiled, and this explains to local residents receiving some of it what was the matter. The delivery in most instances was behind schedule. The pouch contained first class matter from points below Philadelphia as far south as Richmond, Va. As is done every morning, it was thrown toward the station platform. Neither the engineer of the local train or any of the employes nearby saw the bag as it lay in front of the approaching engine.

DR. BIEDERWOLF ENDS SERMONS FOR PROFESSING CHRISTIANS; THIS WILL BE PATROITIC NIGHT

MILITARY ORGANIZATION TO BE PRESENT—BANDS WILL PLAY AND BANNERS FLY—"MAC" TO PRESENT HUMAN FLAG.

ATTENDANCE WAS 4,000; COLLECTION $141.23

Evangelist Preached Last Night on "No Man Cared for My Soul," and He Criticized Christians for Their Careless Attitude Toward Friends and Loved Ones Not Yet Saved.

"What's the matter with the world today is that there is too much of the spirit of looking out for number one and letting the other fellow go to the Devil in his own sweet way," said the Rev. William E. Biederwolf in his sermon at the Tabernacle last night. So strongly did he appeal to his audience of 4,000 people in preaching on the text, "No Man Cared for My Soul," that more than one hundred penitents came forward to pledge a better life, and almost a hundred mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers walked the sawdust aisle to kneel in prayer for the salvation of loved ones.

Dr. Biederwolf announced last night that he had finished his sermons to the professing Christian—the church member. He will now preach to "all people," he said, no matter whether they are church members, drunkards, gamblers or just plain-living citizens.

The evangelist impressed upon his hearers the responsibility of a Christian for the saving of the soul of his brother. He said that all men and women were too careless of their influence on others.

"There are a lot of farmers nowadays who think more about getting their hogs into market than they do about getting their children into Heaven," he said. "And there is a lot of women in the church of God, too, who care more about the prize at the coming card party than they do whether their own offsprings go to Heaven or to Hell when they die. God pity you!"

"'Oh,' you say, 'Mr. Biederwolf that's too hard.' But listen: I have no other way to judge than by the way you live, but the things you talk about and by the things you give yourself to. Here they are all around you, living under the same roof, looking into your face three times a day across the table, the best and dearest that you have, going Christless through life and Christless down to the grave, and Christless out into eternity, and you have talked to them about everything else under God's sun, but not a word about Christ, and some of you haven't even cared enough to shed a tear over them. God pity you!"

When Dr. Biederwolf, at the close of his sermon, announced that there would be a prayer for the unsaved and asked all who wanted a loved one included to stand up and speak, from every part of the house there came a chorus of voices, "Pray for my son." "Pray for my father." "My boys." One wife asked prayers for her whole family, another for her husband and two sons, and one young man stood up and asked that they pray for his father and mother. While "Mac" led the choir in softly singing "For You I Am Praying," the mothers, fathers and others who asked for prayer came and knelt down in front of the platform. Dr. Biederwolf then asked for men and women who wanted prayer for themselves, and more than one hundred came up.

All church members in the audience last night were organized into working corps for the purpose of seeing all those not affiliated with any religious body whose names were taken at the recent canvass of Plainfield. It was church night at the Tabernacle, and a large number of those there were active members, although the representation of some of the local bodies did not please Dr. Biederwolf. Under the direction of Mr. Heaton and the pastors the church people were given names of men and women that have evidenced an interest, and they will attempt to bring them to the Tabernacle meetings.

Mr. Roberts is yet unable to sing, and the music was furnished by Mr. Heaton and Mr. Sluyter, with a solo by "Mac."

Dr. Biederwolf expressed his appreciation of the thoughtfulness of Watchung Troop in postponing a dance that conflicted with the Tabernacle meetings. He said this was the spirit that should be shown by all local organizations. While he wished that the dance had been postponed forever, instead of for only a short time, he wanted to thank those in charge for their action.

In asking for the collection Chairman W. D. Murray said that Plainfield was doing well in taking care of expenses, but he wanted to get all that is necessary at once, so that no more collections would be needed.

Mrs. Brake, Miss Boals, Mr. Heaton, Mr. McEwan, Mr. Bachemeyer and Mr. Sluyter sang a clever verse and chorus that was received with applause.

STRAINAGE SYSTEM PUBLIC NUISANCE

Property of Residents Flooded When Water Backs Up.

Residents of the western end of the borough, along Paterson road and Midway and Farley avenues, are heralding their annual protest against the drainage conditions in that section. The matter has been brought to the attention of the Borough Council annually for some years and been threshed out each time, but the borough fathers have not been able to give any relief. The affair is really one that should be handled by the county authorities, and it now seems likely that they will do something.

The natural slope of the land runs in that direction, and as a result there are several streams that drain the borough and run through that section, across the borough line at Terrill road, and into Plainfield. Property owners living on the Plainfield side have in some cases stopped up the brooks, and in other places changed their course so they will not continue on to Green Brook as the drainage point. This causes the water to back up and practically flood the property of residents after each storm. The street department has done what it could to make conditions better, but have no power to go outside of the borough limits, and so that is why the County Board of Freeholders is considering taking action.

Town Topics

Announcement has been made that the Parish House is to remain open but a few weeks longer, closing April 30 until after warm weather is over. With the closing of that popular pleasure center for young people much of the social atmosphere is lost and other sources of amusement have to be found. After being closed for two years residents were surprised when they found how much it was missed and when it was re-opened in December through the efforts of the Rev. J. Madison Hare large numbers patronized it and for the first time since it was opened as a pleasure resort it has been run without a financial loss.

Cleanup week is a plan that is hitting a great number of the progressive and growing towns about the country nowadays and in practically all cases it results in a decided improvement. It cannot be said that the township and borough present an untidy appearance, but at the same time there would be no harm in having one right among ourselves. Nearly everyone would be willing to make his property look a little better, but everybody is laying back for the next fellow to start something.

Scotch Plains has been largely represented at the Biederwolf services in Plainfield so far, but tomorrow night it is expected that well over a hundred people will attend the services in a body. The Methodist church has taken an especial interest in the affair and a committee headed by the Rev. Raymond E. Marshal has chartered a special trolley car to leave the Park avenue corner at a few minutes past 7 o'clock. There will be no prayer meeting in the Methodist church, and one section of the Tabernacle will be reserved entirely for the local delegation.

With the advent of warmer weather residents of both the township and borough are again experiencing the annual nuisance, and sometimes danger, of forest fires. At this time of year they cannot be laid to the hunter, but to the carelessness and ofttimes maliciousness of persons who start brush or rubbish fires and do not trouble to extinguish them. Besides being a breaking of the State laws, the setting of any fire within the limits of the township or borough is contrary to the ordinances of both places unless permission has been gained from the proper authorities. The enforcing of these ordinances by the two governing bodies might have a tendency to stop a nuisance that if continued may cause property damage of a large amount.

Where have the several hundred and odd copies of the borough ordinances that were printed several weeks ago gone to? That is a question that is mystifying many borough people, but the solution does not seem to be forthcoming. They were printed to be distributed to each resident so that they might familiarize themselves with them, but there are so few of them about that even the police have none. With automobilists going through town at a break-neck speed and the violation of the newly made ordinances quite probable the police cannot be expected to know when to make arrests when they do not know how much ground the various ordinances cover.

ELECTED BANK OFFICERS.

Miss Katherine Hann and Miss Gertrude Kaulfman, two local young girls attending Westfield High School, have been honored by being elected book-keepers in the school bank by the student body.

TRANSFERRED TO TEXAS.

Lewis Beeken, a former resident, and son of A. D. Beeken, of North avenue, has been transferred to Dallas, Texas, by the Pittsburgh Steel Company,, with which he is connected.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM FOR ANNUAL SESSION

New Jersey Baptist Association Will Convene in Baptist Church Parlors.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Women's Home Missions of the East New Jersey Baptist Association will be held in the lecture room of the Baptist church tomorrow, and Mrs. Alfred D. Beeken has announced an excellent program for the occasion. The morning session will start at 10:30 and continue until noon, when a luncheon will be served, to which all are invited. The afternoon session will start at 1:45.

In the morning the Rev. John Moore, of New York, will be the speaker, and in the afternoon Miss Susan Mendenhall, connected with the Baptist educational work of the United States and Canada, will lecture, as will Miss Freda Koeker, a missionary of the New York Central Park Baptist church. The installation of the new State director will also take place. All members are urged to be present, as the meeting is of great importance.

GATHERED AT RANDOM.

A regular business session of the Township Committee is scheduled to be held in Excelsior Hall tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Sewing Circle of the Willow Grove chapel was held in the chapel yesterday afternoon. About twenty women were present and a profitable time was spent in sewing.

There will be a dance in the Fanwood firehouse next Thursday night tendered the young women from this place, Plainfield and Westfield, who gave a leap year dance to about twenty young men from the same places last week.

The Parish House boys' basketball team is working overtime nowadays and will keep the court pastime popular for a few more days. Tonight a Rahway combination will appear on the local court for a return game, and another game will likely be played Saturday night.

John Southard, of Montague avenue, has successfully passed the examinations to become a station agent on the C. R. R. of N. J. and is now stationed at Bayonne.

Attorney Augustus Nash, of Plainfield, has succeeded in having the appeal of his client, Walter H. Tavernor, of Westfield, placed on the calendar of the May session of the Court of Errors and Appeals at Elizabeth. In a charge made by Louis Sutterline of reckless driving, Recorder Charles Sheelen found him guilty in local court several weeks ago. A damage suit is also pending in the district court.

The couuple left immediately after for a several weeks' wedding tour, and after May 1 will be at home on Tilliston road, Fanwood.

The local schools will reopen after the spring vacation on Tuesday morning. Having a vacation this week the students do not have the extra day caused by Good Friday, and so Monday has been granted them.

SCOTT IS SENT TO THE BORDER

Chief of Staff to Probe Mexican Situation.

FUNSTON STILL COMMANDS

General, Deputed as War Secretary's "Eyes," Will Report on General Conditions—Findings May Determine Withdrawal of American Forces. Complaint Made Villareal Plans Revolution.

Washington, April 20.—Unless there are new outbreaks against the forces in Mexico to compel immediate action it is not expected that any decision will be made for a week or ten days as to withdrawal of American troops from Mexico.

This was made clear when Secretary Baker dispatched Major General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff, to the border as his personal representative to make a complete report on the military problems confronting General Funston.

The administration's final action on General Carranza's suggestion that the expedition be recalled probably will be based largely on what is shown in this report. General Scott hardly will be able to make the round trip and complete his observation in less than ten days.

Secretary Baker described General Scott's mission as being to asser[illegible] complete information about the [illegible] situation for the use of the [illegible]ment. He also will estab[illegible] sonal touch with that st[illegible] secretary, which Mr [illegible] need of in advising [illegible] of the military as[illegible] question.

Not[illegible]

General [illegible] that he wo[illegible] secretary" [illegible]panied by his a[illegible]el Robert E. L. Mi[illegible]al staff, he will reach [illegible]on's headquarters at San [illegible]ex., Friday evening. He said h[illegible] no present intention of going beyond the border.

Mr. Baker laid stress on his announcement on the fact that General Funston still was in the supreme command of the border situation and expeditionary forces and would remain so. He said the department fully approved every step General Funston had taken and that General Scott was going only because it had seemed desirable to get a clearer view than was possible by means of official reports.

Reassuring News Received.

The only messages received, the substance of which was made public, were of a reassuring nature. A consular dispatch said General Pershing's desire to change the location of his most advanced base near Parral had met with no opposition by the Carranza military authorities. General Pershing is understood to have desired to establish his new base at such a point that communication with the rear would be less difficult.

Formal protest against the organization on American territory of a new revolution against the Carranza government of Mexico was lodged with Secretary of State Lansing by Eliso Arredondo, Mexican ambassador designate to the United States.

Mr. Arredondo told the secretary that he had been directed by his government to inform the United States that Antonio Villareal, ex-Villista general, is at present at Laredo, Tex., organizing a force of ex-Villistas and Huertistas to invade Mexico and seek to overthrow the de facto government.

Villareal, who was arrested several months ago by federal authorities in connection with border troubles, was released ten days ago at San Antonio, Tex., under $1,000 bond pending trial.

Mr. Arredondo was informed that the matter would be looked into at once and if found to be as stated steps would be taken to break up the conspiracy.

BRYAN RUSHES EAST.

Will Try to Prevent the United States From Getting Into War.

St. Louis, April 19.—William J. Bryan, who arrived here on his way to New Orleans to address a teachers' convention, changed his plans suddenly and departed for the east, where, he said, he was going to try to prevent the United States from getting into the European war.

Bryan said he had formulated no plan of action in Washington, but that he felt it was his duty as a patriotic citizen to go there and do everything he could to prevent the United States from getting into a war with Germany.

GERMANY IS CALM AS CRISIS NEARS

To Strike at Britain if Rupture Results.

Berlin, April 20.—Official Germany is quietly awaiting President Wilson's note. The newspapers carry reports that the note has been finished, but there is no news at the American embassy here of its arrival.

The impression prevails at the foreign office that complications are not expected unless Mr. Wilson demands a change in the conduct of the submarine warfare involving further concessions by Germany.

If President Wilson's demands are such that they cannot be met by the German government and a break in diplomatic relations occurs it will be followed by an intensified submarine warfare. There is reason to believe that certain circles in Germany which have always been opposed to war on commerce now think that Great Britain really is effectively hampered as a result of the submarine activity, so that what opposition there formerly was against this kind of warfare has practically disappeared.

So long as the United States and Germany remain on friendly terms the government will meet American wishes, but if diplomatic relations are ended Germany will feel free to strike at Britain with full force.

Greek Ex-Premier Defies King of the Hellenes.

Ex-Premier Venizelos of Greece has created a sensation by coming out openly in opposition to King Constantine personally. Heretofore the head of the so called "war party" has based his antagonism to the Greek government on questions of policy only.

CHARLOTTE ADDS NEW STUNTS TO ACT

Will Shine at Hippodrome on Monday, May 1, When Plainfielders See Show.

"Why didn't you do that before?" everybody was asking Charlotte up at the Hippodrome after the 300th performance on Wednesday night. For the little skating star of Charles Dillingham's "Flirting at St. Moritz" certainly exhibited a new novelty to the audience and to the expert skaters. Nothing more remarkable has been seen on the ice during this ice-mad season.

"NEW JERSEY" GIRL IN SOUSA'S BALLET OF THE STATES
NEW YORK HIPPODROME

Charlotte will repeat the act which is described here when she appears at the Hippodrome on Monday night, May 1, at which time a large delegation of Plainfielders will be present because of the big theatre party from this city and vicinity which the Plainfield Daily Press has arranged. A special train has been engaged to take the party to New York, and tickets will be placed on sale on Monday, April 24, at 11 a. m. The price will be $1.75, including railroad fare and a $1.50 reserved seat to be selected from a Hippodrome chart at the Press office. The regular price for this would be $2.55. Dunellen persons who wish to go on the trip will pay $1.80 because of the slight increase in railroad fare. The big advertisement on another page gives further details as to the train.

Unless you had been very sure of yourself, you would not have believed that it was Charlotte. First, the costume would have deceived you. It was so unlike anything you had seen her wear before. White satin blouse, cut in lines of Russian or Bulgarian style, and fluffy, diaphanous, silk pantaloons very Turkish in cut, concealing somewhat the most graceful and useful pair of legs the stage has offered for American approval these long years. A tiny little twin-feather headdress as daring and original as anything Gaby Deslys ever constructed. "Can that be Charlotte?" everybody asked. And the costume had the curious effect of greatly increasing the height as well as the slenderness of the skating star.

Her performance was as unusual and as different as her costume. For reasons best known to herself and to Mr. Dillingham, her skating act has not been changed at all since it was first given in the fall. It caught the fancy of the best theatrical experts, set a fad for the nation and packed the house. What more could be asked for any unheralded star. Maybe Charlotte herself, realizing that the Hippodrome had set a nation skating, wanted to illustrate the fact that she could not merely give a sensational theatrical skating exhibition, but that she could also make the most intricate and difficult skating figures so beautiful and so interesting that they would pull the enthusiasm of four thousand people who knew nothing about the technique of skating. Who knows? Mr. Burnside is silent. Charlotte speaks very little English and never complicates matters. There you are.

However, certain it is that the skating star demonstrated this past week that strict skating, such as would get prize medals from any judges in any skating center of the world, makes a wonderfully beautiful picture; that theatrical skating is merely a development of the sport beautiful; that no stage entertainment has ever been offered the American which is so full of novelty and so inexhaustible in its varied beauty as ice skating in costume. First she dashed on the ice at top speed and poised her lithe body in immense curves on both edges forward and backward. Then she offered the contrasts of toe-jumps, which are dance steps, interspersed between long, deliberate, flowing curves, which are skating strokes. Her odd and charming costume added to the effect of height when she straightened up after some spectacular bending of the skating knee had brought her face almost to the level of the ice. She spun on one foot, on toe-points, on both feet; all the while the twin-feathers were spinning around her head like snow-ball governors in a bit of whirling machinery. The clinging nature of her unusual costume seemed to accentuate the weird Russian whirls into which she threw herself.

Then she imitated her friend Pavlowa in a series of Russian dance steps which have never been seen in skating here before. Bending down until she almost sat on the heel of one skate, she executed a series of Russian steps facing the audience and kicking out one foot after the other to the time of a superb bit of Russian music composed for the occasion by Raymond Hubbell.

Four pretty little ice-ballet girls then placed sixteen electric candles on the ice in the form of a diamond. Through and among and between them skated the wonderful Charlotte. On one foot she circled the entire group of lights, stopping merely to leave a series of ringlets about the end lights of some in the center. Then she skated among them backward, on one foot, circling every light and interspersing her movements among the lights with threes, changes of edge, brackets, rockers and counters. The expert skaters in the audience said that it was as if the little wonder wanted to comprise into five minutes of time enough to demonstrate that she is, without question, the greatest skater in the world. And so far as they were concerned they were unanimous in saying that she has no equal anywhere skates are used. Flower patterns of intricate and varied beauty were traced all about the lights until the dainty figure in dazzling white garments seemed a will-o'-the-wisp, flickering among the lilies of a wayside pool.

Her original number ended with a flying dash at the string of lights, on one foot, waving it among them between the rows of candles, yet never touching one of them. There were very many in the audience who felt that this exhibition was the finest skating scene Charlotte has contributed to the craze of the day since she started that craze away back in October.

RECITAL AND TEA.

Since by vote of the Monday Afternoon Club the usual evening entertainment to the members and their friends has been given up this year, the meeting of the art department on Monday afternoon, April 24, at 3 o'clock, in the parish house of the Congregational church, has been given the privilege of inviting guests.

OFFICER "BOTHERED" THEM, JUDGE DID WORSE THAN THAT

Albert Vail, arraigned in police court this morning charged with being disorderly by hanging around on Second street, was fined $10. He was one of a gang that Patrolman Hendershot broke up last night. After four of five young men had been told to move on by the officer because, he charged, they cursed and otherwise annoyed women who passed, they met him on North avenue and demanded to know why he had "bothered them." H told them to move on again and when they refused he caught Vail. The others got away, but Pattrick Finnerty was arrested later and today the police are looking for the remaining members of the band. Finnerty and any others that are arrested will be arraigned tomorrow morning.

NEW MARKET BAPTISTS PLAN CHURCH ADDITIONS

At a recent meeting of the trustees and deacons of the First Baptist church, the building committee, composed of Harry J. Piddington, William Giles and Walter Nelson, submitted plans for the addition to the church. These plans are a duplication of a one-story addition made recently to the church at Monmouth Junction visited by the committee on Sunday. The trustees and deacons thought well of the plans, but they thought that the addition should be two stories high if it wouldn't cost too much. The committee will submit figures showing what the additional cost will be at a meeting to be held in two weeks. The purpose of the addition, the dimensions of which are 20 by 52, is to provide a meeting place, besides the main church, for the Sunday-school, and to give the Ladies' Aid Society a kitchen.

LEASE DWELLING.

Mr. and Mrs. Corwin Apgar and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Benson, who reside in the Alvah Gray apartment at the corner of Washington and North avenues, have rented the double house of Michael T. Moynihan, on Front street, near Lincoln avenue, and will take possession about May 1.

WILL ATTEND DANCE.

A number from Dunellen are making arrangements to attend the dance of the Dramatic Club, of Plainfield, in Columbus Hall, on Easter Monday evening.

RALPH ECKERT INJURED.

Ralph Eckert was injured about the face yesterday while doing construction work for the Middlesex Aniline Company, at Lincoln, when he stepped on a board in such a manner as to cause it to come up and strike him. It was necessary for a physician to take two stitches in his lip.

Miss Nora Bird has accepted a position in the Plainfield department store of the Woodhull & Martin Company.

Miss Anna Alberti is making her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Alberti, of Hudson, N. Y., a two weeks' visit.

TO REMOVE MAY 15

W. J. Smith, who is residing in the house on Third street, which H. B. Eckert recently sold to Karl Marx, will move about May 15 to the house at the corner of Washington avenue and Third street, owned by J. H. Schneidler. Mr. Schneidler is at present residing there. He will move into a house which he owns on Front street. This place was vacated several months ago by A. D. George and family, who moved out of town.

AMPUTATE FINGER.

Drs. Platt and Longbothum amputated the finger of DeWitt Fulton, which was effected with blood poisoning Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Helman, who have been ill for the past few days, are better.

Mrs. William Vance has been entertaining her mother from Bound Brook.

Edward J. Boice has been very sick for the past few days.

LOOKING FOR WORK.

Julius Saber, of Easterly, Ohio, was given a susended sentence of ninety days by Magistrate David S. Campbell, in the borough court, yesterday morning, when arraigned on charges of vagrancy and drunkenness. The charges were preferred by Chief Owen Mohan, who arrested Saber near Taylor's Hotel, Tuesday evening. In explaining to the court why he was so far from home, the prisoner said that he was looking for work. "You don't have to go far from home to get work these days," the court replied. The man was given the suspended sentence on condition that he leave town for good.

"LIMOUSINE" WRECKED.

Webber's "limousine" collapsed on North avenue yesterday afternoon when a front wheel went to pieces as the vehicle was crossing the trolley tracks at an angle. William Yoemans, who was driving the horse at a walk, was gently deposited in a soft cushion of mud. Otis M. Webber, who was also in the wagon, managed to keep his seat. The wagon was loaded with lead pipe. This was removed and the remains of the vehicle dragged to the blacksmith shop of Isaac J. Stites, where repairs were made.

PATIENT DOING WELL.

Charles Williams, who on Tuesday submitted to a second operation for gangrene, in which he had his leg amputated just below the knee, is doing as well as can be expected, according to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Reynolds, who visited him at the Muhlenberg Hospital last evening.

RETURN TO THE BOROUGH.

W. R. H. Hardingham and family, who have been boarding at Truell Inn, Plainfield, since they sold their property on Myrtle avenue, Plainfield, six months ago, are to move to this borough. They will occupy one of the row of houses which Mr. Hardingham owns on Mountainview Terrace.

TO BUILD ADDITION.

George Richter is planning a two-story addition to his home on Prospect avenue, just north of the railroad tracks. According to plans which have been drawn the addition will be built plumb to the front of the house and will extend to the Prospect avenue line. If Mr. Richter puts his plans through he will transfer his business to the ground floor of the addition. The second floor will be cut up into six lodging rooms.

A birthday surprise party was given in honor of William Koch last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Vogel. Guests were present from Elizabeth, Plainfield, Bound Brook and other nearby places. Games, music and dancing were enjoyed throughout the evening. Refreshments were served at midnight, after which the guests departed wishing Mr. Koch many more happy birthdays.

More Dutch Mail Seized.

The Hague, April 20.—Protests by Holland against the seizure of mails on Dutch ships have again been disregarded. The government was notified today that the Dutch steamer Hollandia, which arrived at Amsterdam on Monday from Buenos Aires had been forced by the British naval authorities to leave its mails at Falmouth for examination.

No Reply for Ten Days.

Washington, April 20.—Ambassador Bernstorff told Secretary Lansing today that it would be impossible for Germany to make a reply to the American note in less than ten days. He pointed out the fact that tomorrow was Good Friday and that practically all official activity in Berlin would be suspended until next Tuesday. Even the newspapers would suspend publication during that period, he said. Ambassador Bernstorff indicated that to him the note was ambiguous and that he did not know whether Germany was called upon to abandon submarine warfare altogether against vessels of commerce, or merely to modify the present methods of submarine warfare. He discussed the situation with Mr. Lansing for more than twenty-five minutes.

Conscript Crisis Settled.

London, April 20.—The recruiting crisis has been settled, it was announced on official authority today. It was further stated that there would be no resignations from the Cabinet. The Cabinet meeting lasted two hours. It was reported following adjournment that a statement would soon be issued setting forth the terms upon which the differences over conscription had been settled.

Danish Vessels Restricted.

London, April 20.—A despatch from Copenhagen says that Danish shipowners have been notified that Great Britain will not permit Danish vessels to make contracts for carrying oil unless sanctioned by British authorities in advance. Failure to comply with the rule will result in a refusal by England to supply coal. Certificates giving the required permission must be signed by British Consuls.

Russian Soldiers to Fight in France.

Paris, April 20.—Russian troops will soon be on the firing line in France, fighting shoulder to shoulder with the French and British against the German armies. General Joffre announced today that a strong Russian contingent consisted of selected officers and soldiers had already arrived at Marseilles. The official announcement from the French Commander-in-Chief furnished one of the greatest sensations of the war. It is taken here as evidence that the Al-

DESCRIBES BEAUTY OF "THE MYSTIC ROSE"

R. P. Skilling, Composer, Gives Interesting Interview Concerning Comic Opera.

Because of the fact that over three hundred children are to take part in the "Flower and Butterfly" ballet of "The Mystic Rose" comic opera, which is to be presented in the Plainfield Theatre under the auspices of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 1, 2 and 3, many inquiries are heard as to what the nature of the ballet is and how it is possible to use so many children. Robert P. Skilling, the composer and prooducer, when questioned about the matter today, said:

"The children's ballet in 'The Mystic Rose' is quite unlike the usual conception of juvenile entertainment. While all children's performances are attractive, this one does not depend on that fact, nor even on the individual cleverness of the little performers, though many of those in this cast are unusually clever singers and dancers.

"The ballet of the flowers and butterflies, as it is called, is essentially a spectacular illusion, and its overpowering effect upon an audience is a study for the psychologist. I have seen many people—both men and women—in tears at its completion, certainly not tears of sorrow and pain, but tears resulting from emotional feelings caused by the beautiful spectacle which turned the thoughts of those effected to the wonder and purity of childhood and its relation to the beauties of nature.

"At the opening of the ballet the curtain rises on a scene at early dawn, very dimly showing a terraced hillside. The flowers, which, as may be guessed, are living flowers, are all sleeping and nothing is heard but the singing of the birds. As the red glow of morning begins, the queen of the fairies, who sleeps in a bower-like throne away on the summit of the hill, awakens and waves her magic wand over the fairies and nymphs who lie before her, and they awaken. She arouses the queens of the flowers in the same mystic fashion and they in turn wave their little hands gently over the sleeping flowers, and gradually they begin to move. As they arise and open their sleep-laden eyes, the glorious sun pours upon them the full stream of his morning radiance.

"All of the scores of little performers sing in beautiful harmony. There is a different dance for every group of flowers, and only those who personate a certain flower, dance the dance of that particular flower, but during this time the entire essemble sings. Now while the words help to tell the story and the bewildering dances help to illustrate it, the wonder of its greatness is impressed through the medium of the stage setting, stage picture effects, light effects, the galaxy of rainbow colors and in the beautiful and expressive faces of the little ones, but most of all in that last indefinable quality which I express as the life and perrsonality of the aggregate, which is projected across the space between the living picture and the spectator.

"At any rate, it becomes a real picture, a real illusion, not simply proscenium arch, wood wings, drops, paint and paper and cloth, but real fairyland which is in the mind and eye of everyone who sees the illusion. I have observed, strangely enough, that the disinterested spectator, the blase theatregoer, if you will, is affected by this wonderful spectacle equally with those who are personally interested in the children; that the individualities are lost in the grandeur, beauty and thrilling effects of the spectacle as a whole.

"Both Mrs. Skilling, who collaborated with me in staging this ballet, and I consider that we are really doing a great good in each city where we put this ballet before the public, in addition to the pleasure it gives those who witness it. Certainly the instruction it gives to the children taking part is of great value to them.

"I beg to refer you to the following criticisms by such newspapers as the Newark, N. J., Star, and Seattle, Wash., Times. From the Seattle Times: 'The opera opened with the 'Ballet of Flowers and Butterflies,' an unusual and unexpected spectacle, in which more than 250 little girls, all in wondrous, dainty cotumes of vari-colored hue, performed in a way that caused last night's audience first to gasp in wonder, and then literally to shout its approval.' From the Newark Star: 'Thou mayest well be proud. Few things more beautiful can be imagined that the ballet scene in the opera. Word fails to describe it. The mind fails to comprehend its reality. It is indescribably beautiful.'"

P. H. S. TO BE REPRESENTED IN PENN RELAY CARNIVAL

Coach John Noll announced today his selections for the relay team that will represent Plainfield High School in the Penn Relay Carnival at Philadelphia the latter part of the month. Plainfield drew the poll for the position the other day and it is now practically certain that the Red and Blue oufit will get a place in the finals, even though the best schools all over the country are entered.

Alpaugh, Daniels, Field, Hand, Trowbridge and O'Donnell will be the six to make the trip, but it is not given out which four will start, as all are fast men. Accompanied by a large bunch of rooters, the fellows will leave the local station at 9:02 on the morning of April 29.

P. H. S. TEAM PRACTICE.

The Plainfield High School baseball artists will have a practice game on Parker Field tomorrow morning at 10:30 when a combination of Plainfield bank clerks will line up against them. It is intended to act as a workout in preparation for the New Brunswick game on Saturday at New Brunswick. During Easter vacation the team will play, besides New Brunswick, South Side at Parker Field next Monday, Battin at Elizabeth on Thursday and West Hoboken at Parker Field the following Saturday.

DOES PROHIBITION PROHIBIT? THEY DOUBT IT IN BIRMINGHAM!

A photograph of the "Thirst Line" outside the express office at Birmingham, Ala., seems to answer the question: "Does the Alabama brand of prohibition prohibit?" The people in the line are waiting for their consignments of various sorts of booze.

No liquor advertisements are permitted to appear in any Alabama papers, so "publicity" cannot be blamed for it. The State law against liquor advertising is now being tested.

While it is evident that prohibition is not prohibiting in Birmingham, says the New York World, there is no question as to the city's loss in revenue.

"This city of 150,000 people," says the Survey, "has discontinued its street sprinkling and garbage collection. It has dispensed with its health officer, city physician and milk inspector, extinguished half the city lights, cut the school session from nine to seven months and reduced by 10 per cent all teachers' salaries over $75 a month. It has withdrawn all appropriation to its library. It has dismissed a third of its police force and put the remainder on a twelve-hour shift. It has closed several fire stations. It has abolished its recreation department, with playgrounds and indoor gymnasium. Twenty thousand dollars has been withdrawn from institutional charities. The anti-tuberculosis campaign will suffer a reduction of $3,800. Altogether, the cuts total $340,000. It costs Birmingham $1,228,629 a year to operate and only $896,556 is available for the coming twelve months."

"UNCLE JIMMY" A STICKER.

Having taken James E. Martine into his bosom five years ago, President Wilson ought not to be so anxious to get rid of him now. He is a great admirer of the President and will probably work in his talkative way for his re-election. He has not approved of two or three of the President's less important policies, but he should be forgiven for that.

In spite of the administration's desperate efforts to shake "Uncle Jimmy" off, he is sticking like a leech, and bids fair to come loping under the wire on primary day several laps ahead of his competitors.

President Wilson's willing workers have done their best to shove two or three deserving Democrats into the race against Mr. Martine, but after looking the situation over and taking "Uncle Jimmy's" measure, they have quickly reached the conclusion that his stride is too long for them and that they have business that will keep them busy at home.

Among those who scored and then went to the stables are Congressman Scully, of Middlesex county; Commissioner of Banking and Insurance La Monte and Judge Nelson Y. Dungan, all very good citizens, and, it appears, very wise men.

In past years, since he came into politics, Mr. Wilson has been extremely successful in turning down men after he had made all possible use of them, but Mr. Martine won't be turned down, and he is going to take his case directly to the people. And there seems to be little doubt at this time that Mr. Martine will be nominated to succeed himself. But, then, of course, he will have to get himself elected. That is another proposition.—Trenton State Gazette.

THE MYSTERY IN MEXICO.

The censorship that lightens the news accounts from the European battlefields is an open book compared to the censorship that is burying the news of what is happening in Mexico. Apparently nobody knows anything that is worth knowing, while everybody knows more rumors and gossip than all of us know what to do with.

President Wilson's blundering is covered up by more mystery than has been cast over the greatest military maneuvers in Europe. Nobody knows where Villa is, while the American army force is pursuing him. Nobody knows where the army is. Villa disappears and the soldiers fade away.

Villa is alternately surrounded and escaping so rapidly that it is bewildering to keep track of all the yarns. Villa is at the head of a large and growing army of peons and Yaquis, and is dying and finally dead of wounds. Our army officers don't know where their army is, and the army can't get into touch with its commanders.

Aviators start to learn something and get lost in the deserts and mountains. Guns don't shoot and gasoline doesn't burn. Powder refuses to explode and aeroplanes to fly. Nobody knows anything about anything. Nobody is doing anything about anything. If ever there was a worse blunder and then monumental blundering and childish lying to accentuate the blundering, the fact has been kept well concealed.

While the small Board of Freeholders should by all means be adopted for Union county, there is one feature which is objectionable to many of the voters. They believe that, in order to get the greatest efficiency in the Board, the members should be elected by districts, and not by the county at large. It is maintained that if the law is not changed in a county like Union, where a majority of the voters live in two larger cities, the members of the Board would probably be selected from those cities, and the smaller places would be without representation. To back up this assertion, attention is called to the fact that when a vote was taken a few years ago for a Board of seven men, five were elected from Elizabeth and the other two from Plainfield, and the rest of the county was without a representative. That election was upset in the courts because of a flaw in the law, so that Union county continues to be governed by a large board. But the lack of district representation should not be enough to stop the people from voting in favor of the small board this year. They can authorize the change at the election, and then, before the first Board is elected, which would not be until November, 1917, an act could be put through the Legislature, providing for the district representation.

The paper situation in this country becomes worse as time goes on, and the Daily Bulletins, issued by the Department of Commerce at Washington, frequently contain suggestions, the following of which by the people can help to relieve the situation. Here is the latest one:

"In the campaign for saving and utilizing waste paper, valuable assistance can be given by charitable organizations which have made the collection of waste papers one feature of their work. Co-operation between these organizations and the chambers of commerce in the different towns and cities would no doubt result in the saving of much material that is not now collected through other agencies. It is suggested that, in the absence of regular buyers and collectors of waste paper, or in those cases where it is found that the amount of waste material that can be collected is not sufficient to justify a regular buyer to call, it would be advisable to get into touch with the local charitable or other organization making waste-paper collection a regular part of their work."

No one can doubt that President Wilson means business, after reading what he had to say yesterday to Congress about the German attitude in the submarine issue. While many criticise his delay, and the former notes he has written to Germany, all commend the stand he has at last taken in the matter. The people of the country are ready to back the President in this situation, regardless of the way they have felt toward him before.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

The Literary Maid.

She's long on conversations
About the ancient Greeks,
And humbles the relations
Most every time she speaks.
Her talk is very witty
With repartee that takes,
But dad says it's a pity
She can't make buckwheat cakes.

It's fifteen years or better
Since she came home from school,
And all the boys have met her
And liked her, as a rule;
But still there's nothing doing
And dad has one regret
That keeps him always stewing,
No, Sis ain't married yet.

Uncle Abner

I see that a specialist out in Kansas City says that men with blue eyes make the most onreliable husbands, but I have seen a good many reliable husbands with eyes that were black and blue.

A fellow who indulges in the insidious habit of playin' a slide trombone can't be too careful. Mr. Amry Hicks of our village who plays the sliphorn with the Silver Cornet Band, was bangin' away on "The Stars and Stripes Forever," the other evening during a concert, and when he reached a low note and shot his arm out the end of the slide on a $40 bunnit on the head of Mrs. Lemuel Higgins, who was sitting in the first row, and yanked it from her head, also about half a bushel of store hair. When Lem got through with Amry 19 folding chairs were laid up for repairs and the artistic atmosphere of the concert was entirely broken up.

Hints to Good Cooks.

There is always one sure way to tell when an egg is bad. Boil it soft and then open it with a common case knife or a spoon. If it is bad you will not be left long in doubt.

A very good substitute for macaroni when company comes unexpectedly is white clothes line. It can be cut up into any lengths desired and boiled until quite tender. Then pour on the melted cheese and the tomato sauce and nine out of ten guests who have eaten home cooked macaroni before will not know the difference.

Salad dressing can be made of almost anything, but the best imitation of the genuine can be manufactured by taking two teacups full of gasoline, a pint of ammoni, three tablespoons of cod liver oil and a jigger of axle grease. It would take an expert to detect the fact that it was an imitation.

Corned beef and cabbage make a dainty lunch for an afternoon tea. The boiling cabbage gives the house a homelike atmosphere and will prevent the guests from staying too long.

Making Him Happy.

(A school has been established in Chicago, the purpose of which is to teach young wives how to make their husbands happy. It is not a very difficult matter, and the course of instruction should be short.)

How to make the husband happy?
That seems really like a cinch.
Shun all conversation scrappy,
Always yield when in a pinch.
Do not e'er attempt to cross him. Let him think he's in the right.
'Tis no use to try to boss him. Flatter him from morn till night.
Do not make him out a sinner. Don't abuse him fit to kill.
Let him sit down to his dinner in his shirt sleeves if he will.

Let him smoke whe'er he wishes, and wear just what he desires.
Do not make him wipe the dishes or start early morning fires.
Let him and his gang play poker in the parlor every night.
Do not interrupt the smoker if they stay till broad daylight.
Let him have his own way ever in all matters great and small.
Make the man unhappy never. It's quite simple, after all.

Plainfield Theatre.

Somebody who knew said long ago that, "Variety is the spice of life," and Manager Shannon, of the Plainfield Theatre, heartily seconds the motion. That's why he has secured a wide variety of acts for the new bill at the Second street playhouse commencing today. The list is headed by "Kola," briefly described as "a scenic novelty," absolutely different from anything else. This is supplemented by Wesley and Richmond, offering their own idea of the variety stage under the title of "In Vaudeville;" the comedy playlet, "Pickles," a positive scream as put across by Harrigan and Company; Cushman and Wilcox, novelty dancers; LeRoy and LeVan, in a nonsensical novelty, "Officers On Duty;" and "The Wonder Kettle," a scientific conception which turns nature topsy-turvy and producing amazing and astounding results, one of the most puzzling seen when water is boiled on a cake of ice.

The amateur numbers offered in conjunction with last night's numbers registered an emphatic hit. Another one is now being arranged for next week. In the meantime Manager Shannon and his first assistant, Dave Rogers, lose no opportunity to give the public the best in the moving picture world. Every performance at the Plainfield Theatre has something new in this line. Today's feature is the eighth episode of the serial film, "The Iron Claw." Tomorrow the ninth episode of "The Strange Case of Mary Page" will be on the screen witness stand and Saturday another of those educating and interesting Pathe semi-weekly will be displayed.

Proctor's Theatre

The management of Proctor's local photoplay theatre provide their patrons with a stupendous program of wonderful features today which includes Robert Edeson's tensely dramatic photoplay entitled "Big Jim Garrity," which was adapted to the screen by the famous Pathe Company from the noted stage success of the same name. "Big Jim Garrity" is a picture made up of all essentials that go to form a stirring masterpiece, and its tensely dramatic situations are enlightened by subtle bits of comedy introduced here and there that fit in admirably. The director has also used splendid judgment in the selection of locations and backgrounds, and the scenic and tinting effects are a delight to the eye. In addition today another massive five part feature appears at Proctor's in the form of the latest Triangle production entitled, "The Moral Fabric," and featuring Frank Mills. This story is a novel one indeed and contains a theme never before exploited upon the stage or screen, and it is bound to prove a big sensation to the many admirers of Thomas H. Ince's sterling photoplay productions. Variety is provided by Charles Murray in a side splitting Keystone called "The Love Riot." Friday Blanche Sweet, the famous Paramount star, will appear in a strong emotional and sympathetic drama entitled, "The Secret Sin," while in addition to other attractions the third chapter of "The Social Pirates" will be shown. Saturday will prove a gala day for both young and old for then Marguerite Snow appears at the head of a wonderful cast of capable screen stars in "Rosemary," one of the most successful of the Metro features, Charlie Chaplin will delight by his comic capers in "The Knockout," Harry Watson will be seen as "Musty Suffer," and good old Mutt and Jeff will produce uproarious laughter in a cartoon comedy entitled "The Submarine." Next week, Easter week, will be known among local amusement seekers as Theda Bara week at Proctor's, for starting Monday, Miss Bara will appear in a different one of her great successes each day, in addition to the regular program of remarkable photoplays making a big double feature program throughout the entire week.

SPEND MILLIONS TO PUT SOLDIERS ON FARMS

J. S. DENNIS, ASSISTANT TO LORD SHAUGHNESSY

The providing of employment for returned soldiers is a question that is demanding much attention, and it has been with great satisfaction that Canadians learned that the Canadian Pacific railway is to take action in this regard.

J. S. Dennis, assistant to the president of the Canadian Pacific, makes this statement:

"The decision of Lord Shaughnessy to provide farm homes for returned soldiers is a further proof of his willingness to devote his great energy and ability, and the resources of the company, to the solution of the problems facing Canada.

"The task of preparing 1,000 farms involves building 1,000 houses and 1,000 barns, constructing 1,300 miles of fence, digging 1,000 wells, breaking and cultivating 50,000 acres. The buildings will require 20,000,000 feet of lumber; preparation of the farms will entail an expenditure of $3,500,000.

"One thousand farms will provide for an extremely small proportion of returned soldiers, and the government must adopt some general policy of providing these homes.

"The enlistment of 250,000 additional men called for by the government will double the number to be taken care of after the war. The western provinces have responded nobly to the call of the empire and already there is a shortage of labor of all kinds. In the effort to meet this shortage, the government is now advertising in 4,000 papers in the United States for 50,000 laborers. They find there is no chance of getting this number of men, and have announced that from 3,000 to 5,000 is the greatest number that can be obtained.

"The recognition of this shortage and the efforts of the government to meet the situation by bringing men from the United States is a contradiction of the statement at a meeting in Montreal a short time ago by Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, minister of militia, that the enlistment in the west was not causing any shortage of labor.

"Every true Canadian realizes that Canada must ultimately send her last man and spend her last dollar to enable the empire and her allies to bring the war to a victorious termination, but why enlist men before they can be used?

"It is now recognized that under the most favorable circumstances it will be the end of the year before all the men now enlisted can be transported across the Atlantic, and after that only 10,000 men a month can be sent. Many of the battalions now authorized are much below full strength, and it will be months before they will enlist their full quota.

"Of the men already enlisted, western Canada has provided more than its share on the basis of population. We are proud of that fact, but why drive a willing horse off its feet?"

Everybody Laughed and Mocked Her.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

SOON as Jack and Evelyn finished their supper daddy told them this story: "Once a king made his daughter marry a poor fiddler to cure her of her pride. Then because she did not know how to do any kind of useful work her husband made her sell pots and pans in the market place. She did not want to die of hunger, so the proud princess stood in the market and sold wares, and because she was beautiful people paid money for her dishes and forgot to take them away. So she and her fiddler husband lived on her sales, and when she had sold everything her husband got her some more. These she put on a street corner. Soon a drunken soldier rode his horse right through them and broke them into a thousand pieces. When she told her husband he said: 'How silly you were to put things that break on a street corner! Now stop crying. You aren't fit for this work. I'll take you to the king's palace and ask if he needs a kitchen maid.'

"So the proud princess helped cook and did the dirtiest kitchen work, and after awhile she heard that the king's son was going to be married that day. So she went to the window and looked out in the courtyard, where all was pomp and gladness, and she was sorry that her pride had brought her to kitchen work. One of the servants gave her some meat to take home, and as she was going out, in came the king's son in golden clothes. When he saw a beautiful woman in the door he took her by the hand and said she must be his partner in the dance. But she feared and trembled, for she saw the king's son was King Grizzle Beard, whom she had once refused to marry. She knew he was making fun of her now. She tried to pull away from him, but he held her and led her into the palace. The cover of her basket fell off, and out tumbled the meat a servant had given her. Then everybody laughed and mocked her, and she was so ashamed that she wished she was a thousand feet under the earth. She sprang to the door to get away, but on the steps Grizzle Beard overtook her and brought her back. 'Fear not,' he said; 'I am the fiddler, and I brought you here because I really loved you. I am the soldier who upset your wares. I did all this to cure you of your silly pride and show you how foolishly you have treated me. Now you have learned wisdom, and all is ended. It is time for our marriage feast. Come!'

"So the chamberlain came with most beautiful robes for her. Her father and his court were already there to welcome her home. The feast was grand, they all danced and sang, joy was in every heart, and the proud princess and her husband lived happily ever after," daddy finished.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. A easier way is to get a 50 cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

THE SWEETEST LIVES.

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small
Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells,
The Book of Life the shining record tells.
Thy love shall cant its own beatitudes
After its own life-working. A child's kiss
Set on thy sighing lips shall make thee glad:
A poor man served by thee shall make thee rich;
A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong;
Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense
Of service which thou renderest.
—Elizabeth Barret Browning.

Plainfield Mothers' Association.

The program prepared for next year's work is an attractive one. There will be eight meetings during the year on the second Wednesday of each month, with a speaker on diet and nutrition, at the first; physical health, at the second; moral training, at the third; pets and gardening, at the fourth, and first aid at the fifth. The April meeting is always the annual meeting, and the May meeting will be social.

Proper Preparedness.

If the country wishes to carry out a well-planned and balanced program of preparation for defense, it should be remembered that the human side of preparedness is just as important as the mechanical side, and that human beings do not escape disease and grow to perfection under present conditions of living without proper attention. If the National Government is to take care of the mechanical side of preparations for defense and leave to the States and local communities largely the care of the human side of such preparations, it is incumbent upon each State and local community in this country to assume full responsibility for the human element by providing ample funds for health-protective measures.

So long as one-third of the raw human material is wasted before reaching the age of usefulness, one-third of the useful material is wasted during the period of greatest usefulness, and three-fifths of the remainder is wasted before its usefulness ceases, satisfactory preparedness on the human side cannot be fully accomplished. This side of preparedness has the great merit that it is just as important for pursuits of peace as for war.

An Inspiring Thought.

"It has remained for two of the lesser nations of the earth to give mankind the most beautiful example of all time. In 1900 the adjoining republics of Chile and Argentina were on the brink of war. In the endeavor to calm the passions of the hour, Bishop Benavente, of Argentina, in a memorable appeal on Easter Sunday, pointed the angry peoples to the example of the Galilean, and urged the erection of a statue of Christ on the frontier uniting the two countries. The appeal was not in vain. Both countries joined in the erection of a colossal statue of Christ on the loftiest summit of the mutual boundary line that traverses the crest of the Andes. The statue was made of bronze and melted cannon."—The Messenger.

Child Labor Bill.

The Keating bill was reported favorably by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce on April 5. Will you write your Senators at once, asking them not only to vote for the bill, but to hurry its passage There is no time to lose; if other measures from the House come before the Senate before this bill, it may be shelved. The general purpose of the bill is to prevent the employment of children under the age of sixteen in quarries and mines, and in industrial establishments or factories, under the age of fourteen. The New Jersey Senators are William Hughes and James E. Martine. Address, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

COUPLE WEDDED AT NUTLEY KNOWN HERE

Friends in this city received cards today announcing the marriage of Miss Marjorie Blum, daughter of former Mayor Abram Blum, of Nutley, to Norman I. Dannewitz, also of Nutley. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home yesterday in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. The couple will be at home after May 15, at 116 Shanley avenue, Newark.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Dannewitz are well known in Plainfield. The former makes regular visits to this city as representative of a New York concern. Mrs. Dannewitz has been a summer resident at Lake Hopatcong for the past ten years, during which she came in contact with many Plainfielders. For several years she and her sisters have been among the most popular young women of the Halsey Island colony, being especially proficient in swimming, canoeing and other aquatic sports.

CHORUS MEMBERS WANTED.

Persons wishing to join the chorus for the Memorial Day exercises to be held under the auspices of the Grand Army, are requested to meet Mrs. John Manley, at Reform Hall, next Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock and Thursday afternoon at the same hour.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

Again Plainfield comes to the fore as a pace setter. How many other cities of this size can boast of a set of girl enthusiasts of the calibre lurking around the Borough High School? Plans have been drawn on that side of the brook for a feminine baseball team, and it is not unlikely that the girl athletes of Plainfield High School and the Y. W. C. A. will follow in the wake. We've got the makings of a first-class feminine league and there appears to be talent a-plenty for the formation of three representative forces. Plainfield comes in for its share of advertising through a novelty of this kind and we'd like nothing better than to see a tri-cornered girls' league organized.

Swimming is an art with which every individual should form an acquaintance. No better opportunity has ever been offered to Plainfielders than that one which now presents itself. A weekly schedule of evenings has been provided by the Recreation Committee for the promotion of aquatics in the Plainfield High School swimming tank and a competent instructor is always in attendance to teach the rudiments of the art. Why not help to make the work a success by adding your name to the roll and at the same time you'll be taking advantage of an excellent chance to learn to swim or to better yourself if you have already mastered one or two strokes.

Knockers, knockers, everywhere! Uptown, downtown, here again;
Ever-ready, nimble knockers, slamming out with might and main.
Knockers, knockers, petty knockers, yelp along in chorus loud.

According to Joe Albert, all that is necessary to insure Sunday baseball at Scotch Plains is a playing field. Joe has cross-questioned every field owner in the suburb without success, each one being a little leary of enlisting as a party to baseball on the Sabbath. Joe says the talent is more plentiful than ever before, and the fans are hounding him day and night to get the thing started.

It's so long since Plainfield has had a representative playing big league baseball that we've forgotten how it would feel to be watching box scores of the big leaguers each morning for a local John Hancock. Jack Martin was our delegate to the big mill, but he has since been relegated to the minors and seems to like them enough to stick there. Like other baseball players, Martin has found that the financial end of the pastime is just as satisfying in the bushes as it is on the big circuits, and although he doesn't reap quite so much glory from it, he'd rather stay where sticking is good.

The popularity of trap-shooting in this vicinity recently has been soaring by leaps and bounds until now we have at least a trio of weekly shoots every time seven days roll by. All of the trapshooters' organizations bear the outward appearances of prosperous bodies and that the sport has gained a healthy footing is certain. More and more interest is being manifested each day and enough prestige may be gathered here within the next few years to warrant making a bid for some big attraction.

METHUCHEN SHOOTERS WILL CONDUCT SWEEPSTAKES

The Metuchen Rod and Gun Club will hold its "second annual spring sweepstakes" this coming Saturday afternoon beginning at 2:30 o'clock sharp. There will be five 15 target events at 65 cents entrance (including targets) per event. The "Rose system" of division will be used and a silver loving cup mounted on ebony base will be awarded to "high gun" of the entire program.

At last year's spring sweepstakes there were about twenty shooters, and four professionals as follows: Neaf Apgar, Hays Keller, G. Zollinger, and Carl Von Lengerke.

It is thought that this year's shoot will be much better attended as most of the members of the Climax Gun Club are coming over, and shooters from New Brunswick, Milltown, Perth Amboy, Dayton, Pluckemin, and Metuchen have promised to be on hand when the first gun is fired.

PRINCETON VS. HARVARD.

Princeton, April 20.—The Harvard and Princeton crews will clash today for the first time in three years, over the two-mile course on Lake Carnegie. The last time that these two crews came together was in 1913, when Princeton won out over both Harvard and Pennsylvania on the Charles River. Dr. John Spaeth has the Tigers in prime condition for the race today, and Head Coach Robert F. Herrick, of Harvard, claims he has men in fine fettle despite the handicaps of hard New England weather this spring.

JERSEY SHORE TITLE SHOOT ON ASBURY PARK GROUNDS

The annual Jersey Shore Championship shoot will be held at the grounds of the Asbury Park Gun Club Saturday afternoon. The shoot will consist of two 25-bird events and it will begin at 3:30 o'clock. The winner will be presented with a loving cup emblematic of the event. This event was formerly won by E. A. Springer in 1913, Alvert L. Ivins in 1914 and I. R. Taylor in 1915. The entrance fee will be $1.

At 2 o'clock on the same afternoon, the regular weekly shoot of the club will be held. This shoot will consist of five 10-bird events and the entrance fee will also be $1. Large entries in both events are anticipated.

LINKS AT BALTUSROL WILL BE REMODELED

Expert's Criticism Points Out a Number of Needed Improvements.

As the result of certain adverse criticism of portions of the Baltusrol Golf Club's links, the greens committee has decided upon certain changes that will lengthen the course and at the same time eliminate the objectionable features which have to do with the eighth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth holes.

The following criticism and information regarding the proposed changes and the reasons for making them were issued by Louis Kelier, secretary:

Similarity of length of the eighth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth holes; the fact that a brassie cannot be used after the seventh hole until the fifteenth; the congestion caused by the proximity of the eleventh and eighth greens, and the objection to climbing the hill a second time.

The greens committee believe that all these objections can be corrected by substituting for the tenth, eleventh and twelfth holes the new following layout: New No. 10, 410 yards along the foothills, practically a continuation of the present No. 9, with tee near No. 9 green and playing lengthwise over the pond; new No. 11, 135 yards, at right angles down to small foothill; new No. 12, Dog's Leg Hole, 500 yards back to the present No. 12 green, the fair green skirting the red barn.

These changes, with the lengthening of No. 2 twenty yards, No. 3 thirty-two yards, No. 4 twenty yards and No. 7 twenty yards, would add 188 yards to the course, making it 6,400 yards long.

1. To replace the present tenth and twelfth holes, which are easy par four, by two holes, each of which will be over four hundred and twenty yards and by trapping same will be made very hard par four holes. On both of these it will benecessary to use a brassie for the second shot, whereas on the present course the brassie is not needed between the seventh and fifteenth. The chief criticism of the course, and almost the only one during the open championship in June last, was that the consecutive holes from the eighth to the thirteenth were far too easy and too much alike in the shots required.

2. To eliminate water hazards, concerning which there has been a great deal of criticims on account of the loss of balls or delay caused by retrieving them.

3. To do away with the second climb up the hill to the present eleventh green.

4. To cut out one of the greatest danger spots in the course, that is, the present twelfth tee, where the players are exposed to a pulled shot of any one playing to the eighth green, and any players coming to the eleventh green are exposed by a sliced shot from the present twelfth tee.

It is understood that there has been some opposition to doing away with the present tenth hole, but it is believed that this is mainly sentimental, because, as a matter of fact, although picturesque, the tenth is not a good golf hole, and it is intended to replace it with a much better one. It is believed that the changes as contemplated will to a certain extent decrease the congestion of the play, and will undoubtedly raise the standard of the course.

MERE SLIP OF A BOY WINS BOSTON MARATHON

Boston, April 20.—Arthur V. Roth, of the Dorchester Club, a youth of slight build, but with rare speed and stamina, won the American Marathon road race over the twenty-five mile course from Ashland to this city, yesterday, from a field of three-score of the sturdiest distance runners of this country and Canada.

Roth's time was 2 hours 27 minutes, 16 2-5 seconds, eleven minutes behind the record for the race.

COIN CHANGERS WILL TRY THEIR HAND AT BASEBALL

Baseball stars representing the local banks will lineup against the Plainfield High School nine on Parker Field tomorrow morning at 9:45. The following bankers will be on the field: Blume, catcher; D. Denny, pitcher; F. Mills, third base; D. Lawton, shortstop; H. Egan, second base; Waller, first base; Davis, left field; Ricketts, center field; and Doeringer, right field.

ONE ARMED MEN TO ORGANIZE BASEBALL TEAM IN WATERTOWN, ME.

Watertown, Me., may be the only city in the country which will boast of a team of one armed ball players. Louis Johnson, a one armed lad and former captain of the high school nine of that place, is organizing a team.

He has three boys already and by the time the summer comes is confident that he will have a completed roster. When at high school Johnson was rated as one of the best in the school and much better than many boys who had two arms.

BASEBALL PROSPECTS ROSY FOR THE TABS

Jim Scott Lining up Some Good Talent for City League Duty.

Very little has been heard of the T. A. B. S. baseball team as yet, but the outfit is practicing diligently and hopes to carry off not only the City League banner but also the city Sunday championship. This year the team is under the guidance of Jim Scott, the first baseman. Jim has lined up his men and is pleased with the prospects.

With one or two exceptions the team will be the same as it was last year, although it is likely that the Sunday team will be made up of men who play with other outfits in the league games. The pitching staff has always been the Tabs' greatest fortified spot and much is expected of it this season. With Jack and Tone Denny working regularly and with Dick Lawton and Frank Brennan ready in an emergency, it looks as though ambitious aspirants for the individual batting honors, and incidentally the cup that goes with the honors, will suffer severe jolts when then stack up against the Abstainers' moundmen.

The infield will remain practically the same as it was last year, with Scott performing at first, Geary at second, Brennan at short and McCarthy at third. The catching department will be re-enforced at the close of the High School season by the addition of Art Kyle. At present Winters is the only backstop in the Tab stables. The outfield problem is a rather perplexing one, although there is a wealth of material to be had. Dick Lawton, when not pitching, will perform in one garden, while the other outer posts will be taken care of by Jack Denny and a recruit. The various positions have not been cinched by any means and each of the aspirants to berths will have to hustle to insure his permanent occpancy of the position.

Negotiations are under way whereby the Tabs will perform on Avon Oval on Sundays. The field has not been secured as yet but it is understood that the Abstainers have first claim to it.

COULDN'T HOLD UP AFTER WINNING OPENING MATCH

Pinning on the T. A. B. alleys last night, Regan and McAfee captured two out of three House Tournament contests from the Cullen-Winzenreid duo. The latter combine came out ahead by 46 pins in the opener, but could not stand the going and lost out by eighteen in the second and twenty in the third.

Cullen rolled the high individual score of the eveing, his 210 in the opener being largely responsible for his team's victory.

RED AND BLUE BASEBALL PLAYERS NOSED OUT A VICTORY OVER WESTFIELD CLAN

In a game that offered both teams numerous chances to take the decision the Plainfield High School nine pulled out a 12 to 11 victory over Westfield High School on Parker Field yesterday afternoon. The locals had a five-run lead on Westfield at the start of the fourth, but then the visitors braced up and the lead see-sawed back and forth until Pearson struck out in the first half of the ninth with the bags all populated.

Plainfield started off the first inning badly by striking our in order, while Westfield shoved men as far as third base. The locals got their first counter in the second when Apgar walked, went to second on a sacrifice and came home on Lewis' fly after McDowell's easy grounder was fumbled. Four more were sent across in the next frames without a single safe hit being made, errors, walks and one sacrifice being responsible for all.

After Martin walked in the fifth session Gilmartin made the first safe blow and started a flurry that netted four runs, although only the one hit was made. P. H. S. grabbed two in their half, but the Mt. Ararat crew took the lead in the sixth when they garnered five runs, making four of their seven hits in doing it. Kyle got one back in the seventh when he got on by an error, but when the visitors took two more counters in that frame also it looked bad for the homesters. With the bases full and a tie score, Davidson replaced Hutchcroft on the High School mound and after two runs were scored on him had the Westfielders in hand for the rest of the time. Marenghi also took Dixie's place on the visiting firing line, while Cairns went behind the bat in his place, and before the pair had settled down Plainfield grabbed four runs and obtained a one run lead.

SQUEAKING GOLF BALL.

The heartless inventor of new wrinkles in golf is as busy as ever, but unless he gets bunkered pretty soon those to whom traditions of the game are dear will be driven to distraction. What seems to be the limit in the way of novelty is a golf ball that squeaks. It hasn't arrived as yet—that is, no squeaks have been reported, though we are told the inventor expects to have it ready shortly. It has not been explained how the sound is produced, but presumably the ball will lift up its voice when hit. When badly topped it might groan. Such a ball ought to be helpful to the forgetful man, who, turning to his caddie, might say, "Was that 6 I took for that hole?" Reply, "I heard eight squeaks, sir." The possibilities are unlimited.

No Man Cared for My Soul

"NO MAN CARED FOR MY SOUL." Psalms 142:4.

You won't find any sadder words than these in the Bible if you hunt it through from Genesis to Revelation. It's pretty tough, I tell you, when a fellow has to feel like that. It wouldn't be so bad to be like some Robinson Crusoe out on a lonely island all by yourself. But even he had his Friday. But to live in a world where men and women are elbowing you on every side and yet give you the cold shoulder and the frozen face, and don't seem to care a continental whether you go to heaven or hell or what becomes of you, that's about all a fellow wants to stand under. I tell you it's a thought sad enough to make an angel weep.

And that's what's the matter with the world today. There's too much of the spirit of looking out for number one and letting the other fellow go to hell in his own sweet way.

David was in hard lines. He had a Godless ingrate of a son by the name of Absolam. He had rebelled against his father and led the people away. And David had to beat it out of the palace and hotfoot it through the woods. And old Saul, jealous of his success, chased him like a wild hare up and down the land, and like Acteon, pursued by his own dogs, David was compelled at last to seek shelter in a cave, and, crouching down in his dismal retreat, and feeling that nobody cared for him, whether he lived or whether he died, his great heart was wrung with unspeakable grief, and from his lips there fell these words which have come ringing down through all the centuries, the words of the text, "No man cared for my soul."

Of couse, I'm going to apply this in a spiritual way. We're always on the job in a jiffy when it comes to physical disaster. When the waters of the Gulf of Mexico, lashed into fury by the black storm-cloud, struck Galveston, Texas, and nearly wiped it off the map, and when that terrible, growling earthquake of 1905 laid beautiful San Francisco in ruins, and when the rivers of lower Ohio went on a rampage and swept ruin and death through Dayton and Hamilton we wern't slow to respond. But our hands went down in our pockets up to our elbows and a ceaseless stream of money and provisions flowed to our stricken countrymen, and we were pround then that we were Americans and knew how to care for our stricken brothers.

People Want You to Care.

But God pity us! we don't seem to realize that people have souls as well as bodies. "No man cared for my soul."

Don't get an idea that people don't want you to care. They do.

I remember a big policeman down in Louisville, Ky. And, by the way, some of the finest speciments of manhood on God's earth you will find on the police force. Of course, some of them are corrupt; but some other people are corrupt too, But there is no class of people for whom the public has less charity, and it's pretty tough when a policeman's child can't go to school without being asked by other children what graft their father is working now. But I always like to put in the good word for the big fellow with the blue coat and the brass buttons, and I'll tell you this that it has been said by public educators that the children of policemen are the best disciplined and the best trained kids we've got.

But this policeman I was telling you about stood back in the rear of the building and nobody said a word to him. And I can remember yet when the big strapping fellow came down the aisle and took my hand and I saw tears in his eyes and he said, "I guess they think a policeman hasn't got any soul, but I want to be a Christian."

Yes, they do want you to care, and there are thousands of people today, and Plainfield is full of them, who are living in sin, and some of them just in indifference, who could be wooed from their sin and won for God if only you Christian people cared a little more than you do, and I want to suggest three reasons why we don't care more than we do for the souls of other people.

We're Entirely Too Busy.

1. We're too busy caring for other things. We're putting too much emphasis on the material side of life. Of course, nobody with half sense believes in the philosophy of materialism—that philosophy that says everything that has any real existence is material, and that when a man dies he dies just like a dog, and it's all up with him. You show me a man who says he is going to die like a dog and I'll show you a man who usually lives like a dog. No, sir, a man with just a grain of sense knows better. And yet, don't you know, we live pretty much as if that philosophy were true.

There was a young married couple who were standing for the first time before the cradle in which their newborn baby was lying. And they were both looking down in a deep-brown study. The young wife was looking at the little hands, the little eyes and the face of her little darling and thinking all those beautiful sentimental thoughts so appropriate at a time like that, thinking of its future and its coming aspirations and other thoughts so tender and beautiful, and all the time her young husband standing by her side was looking down in just as brown a study as she was. And pretty soon the wife looked up to him and said, "Well, dear, what are you thinking about." And he said, "I was just wondering how in thunder they could make a cradle like that for $1.98."

Spirit of the Times.

It is the spirit of the times. But a man's a fool to live for this world only and forget about the next one. A crank ran up to Mr. Emerson one day and in great excitement exclaimed: "Do you know the world will speedily come to an end?" "Well," said Mr. Emerson, "I think I can get along without it." Of course he could and you can too. And some of you are going to get along without this world a good deal sooner than you think.

When John Quincy Adams was in tottering old age, a man said to him once: "Good morning, Mr. Adams. How are you?" "Very well, thank you," he replied. "The house in which I live is somewhat dilapidated and fast tottering into ruins, but Mr. Adams himself, thank you, was never better in all his life." Of course he wasn't. But to so many of us the spiritual is so unreal that we have almost forgotten that there is any such thing.

There are people here tonight who are called Christians and you haven't thought five minutes this day about God.

Going to Hell in Carloads.

The trouble is one-half of us are going bughouse over the tango and the other half of us, as someone says, are making money by the bushel and going to hell in carloads on excursion rates.

I read of an old geezer out on a farm who stayed at home on Sunday morning and read his stock magazine while his wife went off to church. I guess he had his religion in his wife's name like some people have their property. She came home and said: "John, you ought to have been to church this morning. We had a good sermon; the preacher preached about Joseph going down into Egypt and buying up corn." "Well," said the old geezer, "did he say what corn was selling for down there now."

I know a lot of people like that old rube. There are a lot of farmers nowadays who think more about getting their hogs into market than they do about getting their children into heaven. And there is a lot of women in the church of God, too, who care more about the prize at the coming card party than they do as to whether their own offsprings go to heaven or hell when they die. God pity you.

"Oh!" you say. "Mr. Biederwolf, that's too hard.' But listen: I have no other way to judge than by the way you live, by the things you talk about and by the things you plan for and by the things you dream about and by the things you give yourself to. Here they are all around you, living under the same roof, looking into your faces three times a day across the table, the best and dearest that you have, going Christless through life, Christless down into the grave and Christless out into eternity; and you have talked to them about everything else under God's sun but not a word of Christ, and some of you haven't cared enough even to shed a tear about them. God pity you!

Personal Responsibility.

This brings me to the second reason why we are not more concerned than we are. It is this: We don't seem to realize that we have personal responsibility for the saving of others.

Listen to what God says: "So thou, Oh, son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the House of Israel. Therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth and warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked: 'Oh, wicked man, thou shalt surely die, if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from this way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity, but his blood will I require at thy hand.'"

Mrs. Barney, one of the most noted Christian workers our country has ever seen, was once helping in some evangelistic work in a village church and there was one man who was a great help, always ready to do anything. It would be his carriage that would bring the most people to the meeting, and his carriage that would take the most people away, and she said to the pastor: "If every member was like that man you would have a revival in your church all the time." He said: "I wish the deacon would tell you his story." And one stormy night, after he had sent the carriage off with some people and she was waiting in the vestry, she told him what the pastor had said and asked him to tell her. The strong man's face grew pale and he said: "I don't like to talk about it, but I will tell you. I am more than 60 years old, and I have been a church member for more than 40 years, and a deacon in this church for 30 years, but never till three years ago did it occur to me that I was personally responsible for bringing souls to Christ. I was always in my place in church; I contributed for the support of the church in various ways. I was born and brought up here. My father was a Christian man, and we had a family altar. We had grace at the table, but our nearest neighbors, about a quarter of a mile from us, were just the opposite sort of people, and we were brought up to leave them alone. When I came to manhood I married, and the eldest son of that family married and settled on the old homestead, and I began to bring up my family the same way to keep them away from those children and let them alone.

"Sometimes the man worked for me; he was a good workman, but occasionally he would drink and I had to discharge him. But about three years ago he was terribly mangled by an accident at the gravel pit and he was sent home to die. The doctor came and he said: 'My man, you have only about an hour to live. What can I do to help you get ready?'

"The doctor said: 'I am not a Christian man, but if I were going to die tonight, I would want somebody to pray for me. Don't you want the minister called?'

Minister Was Away.

"They sent swiftly for the minister, but the son came back and said, 'He's out of town and won't be back tonight.'

"The poor wife wailed out, 'Has my husband got to die and nobody to pray with him?'

"But the sick man, shattered as he was, rose up on his elbow and said, 'Send for Deacon R——to pray with me? No, I don't want to hear him pray. He has had 40 years to get ready for it, but he has never prayed with me, and I don't want to hear him tonight.'

"They reasoned with him, but the sick man said: 'No, I don't want to hear him pray. He has passed my house twice a week going to church ever since I can remember. Since he has been a Christian he has never thought of my family. My children have grown up and have never been to Sunday-school. My wife was never in a church in her life. I've worked for him time and again, but I guess he never knew that I had a soul. No, doctor, tell him for me that I died cursing him and his religion he represents.' And with these words he died.

"And, Mrs. Barney," said the old deacon out in the vestibule, "The doctor came down to my house and said: 'Have you heard the news?' And I said, 'No what is it?' And he said, 'Your neighbor is dead.' 'What!' I said, 'You don't say so; well, then, I'll get ready to go right up there.'

"'No hurry now,' said the doctor. 'I have got a little piece of the Day of Judgment for you.'

"And he gave me the facts. I have no words to express my feelings. I went down to the house, and on my knees I begged the privilege of laying the man out. At first they would not let me come in, but by and by they did and I buried the man and paid the funeral expenses. I tried to keep at work, for I did not want to think, but by and by the time came when it was all done, and I went back into my house and into my room and locked the door and went on my face before God. 'Oh, God, I have got to meet that man in the Judgment. I can't help it now. I cannot do anything for him, but God help me, no man, woman or child shall ever go from this neighborhood again and be able to say, "No man cared for my soul, Mrs. Barney," said the old deacon, "and that is why I am at work now."

People of God, do you wonder that he worked! And I say unto you this night, speaking in the stead of Christ, if you have been living as if it were nothing to you—the eternal salvation of others; if you have been rejoicing in the hopes of glory unmindful of the fact that others around about you are without God and without hope in the world; if you have been sitting at ease in Zion dreaming your life away in idleness and unconcerned, while possibly in your own household are those who are going Christless down to the grave, some day God will call you to account, and when you meet at the Judgment Bar of God, God will ask you why you let them go and did not try to save them when you could.

Fail to See Lost Man.

Listen. I will give you another reason why. It is because of your failure to have clear views of the condition of lost men.

I have known fathers to awake in the night time and find themselves weeping and praying for lost loved ones, and rising up early in the morning walk weary miles to plead with their hearts to God. I have had daughters to stand before me and cry as though their hearts would break because of unsaved fathers, and I have seen wives rise in the meeting to ask the prayers of God's people for unsaved husbands and sink back into their seats through the awful sorrow that surged through their hearts because the one they loved would not yield himself to God.

You say it is strange that anyone should have a feeling like that about this thing. No, friends, it isn't strange; the strange thing is that you should know what you know and believe what you believe and not be moved with something of a concern like it. I fear the church has become strangely susceptible to an influence from the lower world—the subtle whisperings of the evil one, that if there is another world it will be all right with all of us anyhow.

The world has always wanted us to believe that because it has always been conscious of sin, but how any sane man, especially with the Bible open before him, can believe in a thing like that, is one of the strange things that puzzles a man who is really wise.

More Concerned About Soul.

You do not think it strange what you read in the paper about the mother and her baby. She had noticed something wrong with the little one's eyes, and one day when it was worse than usual the mother took the little one down to the hospital that the great oculist might see what was wrong. The noted specialist took the baby and, holding it up before him, looked long and intently into the eyes, and turning to the woman said: "Mother, your little child will never see again." And as she grasped it from his hands she cried: "My God, my baby blind! My baby blind!"

Blind! You couldn't realize it unless you were blind yourself. And now listen: Life—death—eternity—lost! You can't realize it until you have lost yourself, which may God forbid.

No wonder when the invitation for the unsaved was given a mother came and knelt at the altar and when Mr. Moody said: "Why, mother, this invitation was not for you—you are a Christian." She said, "No, Mr. Moody, I did not misunderstand, but I've prayed so long for my son without an answer that I thought if I'd come and kneel down in this place that God would see me and look on me for him and let his doom be mine."

Oh, my son, if a mother could ever be concerned for you, don't you think you ought to be a little concerned about yourself

Daughter, if a mother could ever be so concerned for you, don't you think you ought to be a little concerned about yourself?

You ought to be concerned about your soul.

The delegation from the Pond Machine Tool Company was given a round of applause by the chorus choir and the audience.

Messrs. Heaton and Sluyter rendered a beautiful duet, "At the Place of Prayer," in a very pleasing way.

Tonight is "Patriotic Night." The Tabernacle will be decorated appropriately for this occasion, which will be attended by delegations of the Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., Jr. O. U. A. M., Boy Scouts, other military organizations, and the International Motor Company.

Dr. Biederwolf stated that a prize would be given to anyone who would sing the chorus of a certain song which the quartet was going to sing, but when the people found out that some of the words of the verses and the chorus were spelled out, Dr. Biederwolf was satisfied that no one wished to take a chance and so he made no effort to press the invitation.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring led in the opening prayer.

"The Unanswerable Question" will probably be Dr. Biederwolf's subject for the sermon this evening.

The great chorus choir have a beautiful surprise worked out for a part of the program this evening. Mr. McEwan and the choir have been working hard and practicing late in an effort to perfect this part of the program.

Mr. Roberts, the Welshman, is still under the weather with a bad throat contracted by the open air singing Saturday night. Of course the quartet is not complete without him.

Tomorrow afternoon the evangelist will give an interesting discourse on "The Christian and the Theatre." Time, 3:00 p. m.

By the way this is to be the night on which we celebrate our birthdays by putting a penny into the pan for every year the Lord has let us live. Birthday night comes only once in the campaign.

Dr. Biederwolf spoke very highly of the Watchung Troop Association which has so kindly given up plans for a dance which was to be held on April 28 in deference to the evangelistic campaign.

The warning was issued last night by the evangelist that in the cities where he has ben holding campaigns that "Patriotic Night" always draws the crowd. Take the hint, come early and avoid the rush.

Sure, Policemen Have Hearts

"And, by the way, some of the finest specimens of manhood on God's earth, you will find on the police force," said Dr. Biederwolf, in the course of his remarks at the Tabernacle last night. The evangelist was preaching on "No One Cared For My Soul" and was telling the story of a big policeman in Louisville, Ky., who said he guessed no one thought a policeman had a heart, but he wanted to be a Christian.

"Of course, some police are corrupt," Dr. Biederwolf said, "but some other pepole are corrupt. But there is no class of people for whom the public has less charity, and its pretty tough when a policeman's child can't go to school without being asked by other children what graft their father is working on now. I'll tell you this. It has been said by public educators that the children of policemen are the best disciplined and the best trained kids we've got."

All this was a part of his regular sermon, but Dr. Biederwolf stopped long enough to put in a good word for the Plainfield police force. "I read an editorial in one of your daily papers, the Daily Press, the other day," he said, "in which it was demanded that more money be paid your policemen. It is a shame to ask them to live on the amount they are getting and live right. Of course a policeman earns more than $60 a month, or $75 a month, and no wonder it is hard to get good men when you pay no more money than that. Give them what they earn."

TELLS BOYS AND GIRLS HOW TO LIVE

Dr. Biederwolf and Mrs. Brake Spoke at High School Today.

Speaking before the student body of the Plainfield High School in the auditorium this morning, the Rev. William E. Biederwolf made an earnest appeal to the girls and boys to live the right kind of lives, not merely, he said, as something to get through with as quickly as possible because there was no other way out of it, but as something to think over and work over. Everyone should have, he continued, a conviction as to what they should do to make a success of life. Money, medals and the ambition to knock out Jess Willard would not take anyone very far along the right path, according to Mr. Biederwolf. He could tell whether or not a person was to be successful or not, he said, by asking the person his definition of success and in the majority of cases the definition was the answer. He also made mention of young men who injured their chances of success by smoking, drinking and indulging in other harmful practices, and concluded by extending an invitation to all of the students to attend the services sometime in the Tabernacle in a body.

Mrs. Brake, who has charge of the women's work in the Biederwolf party, also had a few words to say, especially to the girls. The students were greatly interested in her recitation of a story describing death as she thought a little girl would tell it. Mr. MacEwan, who is in charge of the singing at the Tabernacle, sung the sextet from Lucia for the benefit of the pupils, and a trio composed of Mr. Bachemeyer, Mr. Heaton and Mr. Sluyter, sung several selections also. The High School Glee Club sang several Easter songs under the direction of Charles Lewis, while a number were sung by the student body.

"CHRISTIANITY'S CHANCE IN JAPAN"

Mrs. Helen B. Montgomery Gives the Last of Her Series of Mission Talks.

"Christianity's Chance in Japan," was the subject of the final interdenominational mission study lecture given by Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, in the First Baptist church, yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, presided during the devotional portion of the program.

The native customs, the people, the government and religious beliefs of the far off Oriental country were depicted in an interesting manner by the speaker, whose facts were authentic, and gathered from personal travels and experiences in the Orient. Today Japan is a big factor in the world. Our attitude toward her is restricted at the present time while that of the press is perilous. Within the last fifty years, the government has changed from absolutism to constitutionalism and everywhere are signs of progress. Ninety-six per cent. of the school age population of Japan attend school and she is the only oriental nation which has assimilated western ideas of civilization and applied them to herself. In Japan, the speaker said, there is a wide open door for Christianity and missionary leaders have admitted their inability to cope with the national need and are appealing for greater help. Concluding her talk, Miss Montgomery said that Japan is without a doubt the most intellectual nationa in the Orient and an attitude of patronage will not go with Japan.

MARTINE'S COMMENT ON PRESIDENT WILSON'S NOTE

United States Senator James E. Martine was among those who today commented on President Wilson's latest note to Germany. He said: "A similarly strong note to Great Britain would be equally justified." However, Senators and Representatives generally have expressed hearty approval of the President's course. Republicans and Democrats united in saying that, although they deeply regretted that such a decision should be necessary, there was nothing else the President could do.

WOMAN DYING AFTER QUARREL

Midvale Man Held as Would Be Murderer.

TWO SHOTS WERE FIRED

Suitor of Widow Becomes Enraged at Attentions Paid Her by Other Men. Draws Revolver, Is Charged, and Sends Bullet Crashing Into Her Head.

Paterson, April 20.—Mrs. John Redner, forty-three years old, a widow, of Midvale, N. J., is dying in her home, suffering from two bullet wounds as the result of a quarrel. Leo Marziano, forty-five years old, said to be the woman's admirer, is locked up in the Passaic county jail, charged with attempted murder.

According to the story told to the police, Marziano and Mrs. Redner had an appointment in Midvale. The two met close to the Erie railroad tracks. It is said they quarreled when Marziano accused her of being too friendly with other men.

Marziano is said to have drawn a revolver and fired two shots at the woman. One struck her in the mouth and the other in the right hand. Marziano fled, but was captured near the Wanaqua paper mill, at Wanaqua. He was arraigned before Justice William Brown of Midvale and sent to the county jail.

The authorities say the woman had trouble of the same kind about two years ago. She was then friendly with a man named George Finner. He called at her home and, it is said, a quarrel ensued between them. When he tried to shove her into a room the widow's fourteen-year-old son, Dewey Redner, is alleged to have shot Finner. The latter was taken to the hospital and died the following day. It is said the boy was never tried.

SPY SYSTEM IS BARED.

Did Von Bernstorff Know Contents of Seized Papers, Is Question.

New York, April 20.—The complete inner workings of the Teutonic spy system in America—the financial head, the alleged directors of the plots to destroy commerce, the list of the spies who obtained secret information—may be laid before the public as a result of the seizure of a mass of papers in the former headquarters, room 2501, 60 Wall street, of the dismissed German military attache, Captain Franz von Papen.

In view of the sensational nature of many of the documents and the demand of Count von Bernstorff for their return on the ground that they belong to the German embassy the point was made that to hand some of the papers to Count von Bernstorff would be practically to insult him.

Railroad Director a Suicide.

New York, April 20.—Yzaak Van den Berg of Baltimore, railroad expert and chairman of the board of directors of the Gulf States lines, committed suicide in his room at the Hotel Manhattan. The only reason offered by his friends was that he had suffered from dizziness and on several occasions had fallen in the street.

The fall of the Turkish stronghold of Trebizond came as the result of furious attacks by the Russians. Since Grand Duke Nicholas advanced into Armenia the troops led by him have conquered nearly 20,000 square miles of territory, or about twice the area of European Turkey.

FUNERAL OF INFANT DAUGHTER.

The funeral of Dorothy Gertrude Bowlby, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Bowlby, of East Fifth street, was held at the parents' home last night, in charge of Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church. Burial took place in Fairview cemetery, Westfield. Many handsome floral pieces were sent by relatives and friends of the bereaved parents.

"JERSEY DAY" MAY 12.

Governor Wants All to Pay Honor to Glory of State.

Trenton, April 20.—Setting forth the advantages of the commonwealth in glowing terms, Governor Fielder has issued the first proclamation calling for the observance of "New Jersey day" on Friday, May 12. The proclamation is in line with the suggestion made by a committee of the advisory board of the department of conservation and development. One of the recommendations was that a "New Jersey day" be observed in order to acquaint our own citizens with the glories, advantages and dignity of the state and also to attract others to our confines.

After recounting the historical position of New Jersey the executive's proclamation says, "I urge and request that every school and college and political, civic and commercial association celebrate the day by such exercises as are appropriate to the occasion and as will tend to increase the knowledge of our state and history and will emphasize the richness, value and importance of our resources and opportunities."

BANK WRECKER FREED.

Former Mayor of Washington, N. J., is Released, Due to Illness.

Washington, N. J., April 20.—Former Mayor Robert M. Petty, who wrecked the Washington National bank, has been paroled by the federal board of pardons. A shadow of his former self, he is at his home in Broad street. He was released because of ill health.

Petty, who was sent to state prison for a term of eight years following his conviction on twenty-five counts for misapplying funds of the bank, of which he was president, had been a patient at the prison hospital for several months. From a rugged man of 253 pounds before the bank failed, Nov. 17, 1911, Petty has failed in health until he now weighs only 158 pounds. Petty served almost three years of his eight year term.

KILLED AS AUTO UPSETS.

Clifton Man Meets Death in Friend's Automobile.

Clifton, April 20.—Harold H. Small of 63 Passaic avenue, this borough, was killed and Bert Reese, proprietor of the Clifton hotel here, was badly hurt when an automobile owned and driven by Mr. Reese overturned.

Two policemen heard a crash and on making an investigation found the automobile turned turtle on the road. Small was dead when dragged from under the car by the policemen. Reese was breathing. He was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital at Paterson. It is said he has a fair chance for recovery.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

HEARING ON TAX BUDGET IS HELD

Property Owners Attend and Take Part in Discussion Regarding Appropriations.

THE MAYOR PRESIDES

Mr. Calkins Explains Figures in Detail and Tells of Many Improvements to be Made in Different Departments.

The thirty or more interested taxpayers who attended the public hearing on the tentative tax budget in the City Council chambers last night were not only given an opportunity to express their opinions, but also learned why increased appropriations are needed in certain departments. Mayor Leighton Calkins presided in the absence of Councilman J. A. Babcock, chairman of the finance committee, who could not be present, and briefly outlined the various amounts that go to make up the budget.

Mr. Calkins touched especially on the departments needing increased appropriations, such as streets, police, fire and Board of Health. He explained that until the county and State school tax is known it would be impossible to determine the exact amount of money to be raised here. The total amount fixed in the budget, exclusive of schools and county tax, is $306,630, less an estimated $66,000 in receipts from licenses, fees, franchise, street railway and bank taxes.

It was explained that it was planned this year to introduce permanent street work through an issue of bonds. Mr. Calkins said that it had been thought advisable to improve three or four miles of streets each year, rather than try to only temporarily fix these highways. At this rate, he said, the expense for this work might go to a prohibitive figure.

Regarding the public library, Mr. Calkins said that under the law it could demand $15,000 at present, but had decided to ask for only $11,500. The increased appropriation of $2,000 for the Board of Health was explained. Mr. Calkins said that additional inspectors and a visiting nurse are needed to look after dairies and other things which properly come under the supervision of the Board.

In answer to a question as to why $5,000 additional was given the fire department, the Mayor stated that it was thought wise to replace the present antiquated hook and ladder truck at headquarters with an up-to-date motor apparatus. This would cost $10,000, and the Council planned to raise $5,000 this year for that purpose and a like amount next year.

Captain Charles A. Peterson raised the question of grading Midway avenue and removing the railroad embankment at that point, which prompted Corporation Counsel C. A. Reed to remark that he thought it was an improvement that the property owners should be willing to pay for as it would be a direct benefit to them.

Councilman Charles S. Sminck called Mr. Reed's attention to the fact that the city has been gradually removing the old embankment and it would not be fair now to assess the property-owners for the work.

At this time Mayor Calkins read a letter from Rev. E. S. Ralston, of the East End Civic Association, in which he characterized the budget as one of a sin of omission rather than commission. He said that the residents of the East End had been patient in waiting for improvements, but he thought action was needed now.

Mr. Ralston said that one large property owner in that section of the city had grown impatient in trying to get some improvements and intended advertising his property for sale. He also called attention to the undesirable condition of Midway avenue.

After complimenting the finance committee on preparing what appeared to be an excellent budget, William Newcorn wanted to know why the police department had been given $500 less than last year. He emphasized the fact that more men are needed on the force and he understood that many resignations were the result of the men being able to get more money elsewhere. If this was true he thought the city should appropriate enough money to give the policemen adequate pay.

These remarks led Mayor Calkins to explain that the Council not only planned to fill the vacancies in the force, but to fix $1,200 as the maximum salary, establish fixed posts in various parts of the city, adopt a more approved system of patroling beats, install the electric flash-light system as a prompt means of notifying the police of the commission of crime. The question of uniforms, the Mayor said, is also to be taken care of in the new regulations. A further discussion brought out the fact that the fire department is also to receive equal consideration.

Mr. Reed stated that another means of increasing taxes was to be found in the referendum votes permitted though legislative action. He spoke of this matter as especially pertaining to fire departments, an effort being made to place the firemen on an eight-hour work day. This, Mr. Reed said, would require more men and would naturally increase taxes.

Dr. H. D. Corbusier, a member of the Board of Health, came in while the discussion was on, and afterward Mr. Calkins asked him to explain some of the needs of that department. The doctor said that there is now a

DO NOT EXPRESS YOUR CHOICE FOR PRESIDENT

If Voters Do so They Will Invalidate Entire Primary Ballot.

Voters must not express their preference for President at the primary election to be held in Plainfield next Tuesday, although a space will be provided on the official ballots for that purpose. After the sample ballots were printed the Attorney General of the State gave an opinion that there was nothing in the law which permitted the printing of the space at the bottom to allow the voters to express their choice. As the sample ballot is sent out marked as an "exact copy of the official ballot" City Counsel Reed has advised the city clerk that the official ballots must also have the space, but that if anyone does express a choice the ballot will be invalidated.

That the mistake will cause a lot of confusion on Tuesday is certain, but it s said that all election officers will be instructed to inform the voters of the ruling of the Attorney General which has since been sustained by an opinion by Chief Justice Gummere, of the Supreme Court.

As there are no contests of any kind, except that I. W. L. Roundtree, a Trenton negro, has filed a petition for delegate-at-large, making five names in that group, when but four are to be chosen, there is little danger that the extra space will cause any serious trouble. The newspapers have been asked to call the attention of the voters to the error, however, and all who use either the Democratic or Republican tickets at the primary next Tuesday are warned not to invalidate their tickets by writing a name in the space at the bottom.

PASSION OF CHRIST MARKED BY SERVICES

Episcopal and Catholic Church Hold Good Friday Services.

Today is Good Friday, the most solemn day of the ecclesiastical year, and Catholic and Episcopal churches throughout the city and borough hold special services in commemoration of the suffering and death of Christ on the cross of Calvary.

At Grace church, Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, the rector, held a children's service at 9 o'clock this morning and the morning prayer and ante-communion was held an hour later. The passion service, the union service of all Episcopal churches of the city, was held at 12 o'clock noon, with the Rev. Henry Mesier, rector, of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, as the preacher. The evensong will be held at 5 o'clock.

Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, held a children's service at 9 o'clock; ante-communion service at 10 o'clock and evensong and sermon by W. N. Bailey will be held at 7:30.

The children's service at St. Stephen's church was held at 9 a. m. and was illustrated. The evensong and sermon will be held at 8 o'clock.

At the Church of the Holy Cross, the Rev. S. Halstead Watkins, chaplain of the Tombs, New York city, was the preacher at the three-hour service from 12 to 3 o'clock. A service was also held at 10 o'clock this morning.

In the Catholic churches, Good Friday is a fast day. The blessed sacrament is removed from the high altar and the sanctuary lamp goes out. It is the only day of the year when there is no mass. No one of the figurative lights in the church is lighted. The chancels and walls are shrouded in purple. Services were held this morning in both St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches and will continue this evening. Veneration of the cross takes place at both the morning and the evening services.

Although Good Friday is a legal holiday in New Jersey, observance of it by business houses is limited practically to the banks, and public offices. In this city the banks are closed for the entire day.

The firm will make a specialty of made to order suits and although the store is small, Mr. Shrager declares that the values will be large in proportion. Mr. Frank recently moved here from Port Chester, N. Y., where he conducted a similar establishment.

GIDEONS WILL ATTEND.

The State organization has accepted an invitation to be present, and letters have been sent to members in many cities, urging a big attendance. LARGE ATTENDANCES

In Three Years, Total Individual Activities Have Been Sixty-Four, Drawing 73,073 Persons—Election of Officers Deferred.

A comprehensive idea of how rapidly the work of the Public Recreation Committee has advanced since its beginning on May 30, 1913, was given the public last night through the annual reports submitted at the yearly meeting in the Public Library. In its three years of supervision the committee has condcted a total of sixty-four activities, many of them beeing educational classes and others entertainment, producing a total atendance of 73,073 persons. From March 31, 1915, until March 31, 1916, there were forty-eight various activities, with an attendance of 27,295. Every class of citizens in every part of the city is catered to with the result that the committee's work has proved of unprecedented benefit to the entire community.

Enthusiasm was the keynote of last night's meeting, and the large attendance present was a source of satisfaction to the president, Henry C. White. It was intended to hold the annual election of officers, but because of several nominations not being made and a pressure of other matters, it was decided to put this over to a special meeting next Thursday night. While the work of the committee was reviewed by the various members individually, the concise resume was given by Miss Lillian Lamson, the recreation supervisor. A majority of the new classes and educating diversions promulgated during the past year, resulted from Miss Lamson's originality, and the young woman was warmly complimented for her work.

The number of meetings held by the various activities during the past year, and their average attendance was reported as follows: Munuicipal dance, 37 meetings, attendance, 3,615; Dunbar dance, 48 meetings, attendance, 2917; Dramatic Club, 63 meetings, attendance, 970; Guild of Play (Stillman), 29 meetings, attendance, 1,047; Italian Club, 25 meetings, attendance, 438; symphony orchestra, five meetings, attendance, 54; Choral Society, 29 meetings, attendance, 1,960; needlecraft class, 32 meetings, attendance, 257; Cosmos Club, three meetings, attendance, 21; girls' athletic class, 18 meetings, attendance, 633; colored girls' gymnasium classes, 28 meetings, attendance, 1,164; men's athletic class, 11 meetings, attendance, 367; Hebrew Social Club, 12 meetings, attendance, 181; Thespians, 22 meetings, atendance, 774, pianoforte classes, 187 meetings, attendance, 1,238; Bryant dancing classes, 24 meetings, attendance, 1,063; public speaking, 16 meetings, attendance, 182; English for foreigners, 12 meetings, attendance, 129; Fortune Hunter hecitals, two meetings, attendance, 290; circus pageant three meetings, attendance, 450; colored reading circle, six metings, attendance, 34; "Lion and Mouse" recital, one meeting, attendance, 100; Plainfield Enterprising Girls' Society, 28 meetings, attendance 717; colored men's gymnasium classes, nine meetings, attendance, 185; Labor Day track meet, attendance, 600.

TAKE TESTIMONY IN PARKER CASE

Many Witnesses Examined Before Judge Daly in Orphans' Court.

SEEK TO BREAK WILL

Gandson and Granddaughter File Caveat Against Instrument—Alleged That Will is in Handwriting of Chief Beneficiary.

Testimony was adduced before Judge Daly in the Orphans' Court, New Brunswick, yesterday, in support of the will of Mary Van Orden Parker, late of Oak Tree, which disposes of an estate estimated at more than $20,000. A caveat against the will was filed by Howard R. Van Orden, grandson of the testatrix, and Florence Cochran, granddaughter of the testatrix.

Mrs. Parker's will makes Victor Merrill, of Oak Tree, the principal beneficiary and the first witness called was Margaret Morgan, a domestic in the Parker homestead, and who was one of the testamentary witnesses. She said Mrs. Parker lived in New York City up to May, 1915, when she moved to Oak Tree with Merrill, who had become an inmate of Mrs. Parker's home shortly before that.

Witness said Mrs. Parker asked Merrill to become a boarder at her home, saying that she was lonesome and that she "liked his company." This was only three months after the parties had met. The testatrix was 83 years of age at the time of her death, which occurred a few months after the will was executed. Her brother, James Pettingill, lived with her till she went to Oak Tree. Miss Morgan said the testatrix often asked Merrill to draw her will, and swore that the instrument is in the handwriting of the chief beneficiary.

The will was executed on July 6, 1915, and Miss Morgan swore that she had witnessed it, together with Banjamin Frazee, also an employee of Mrs. Parker, at the latter's request. There were some words added to the body of the will after it was prepared, and these, Miss Morgan accounted for by saying Mrs. Parker asked Merrill to insert.

The only other witness yesterday was Benjamin Frazee, who witnessed Mrs. Parker's will with Miss Morgan. Following his testimoiny, Mr. Coddington formally offered the will for probate and the matter was continued until Thursday, May 11, when the caveators will have an opportunity to present their side of the case.

The law firm of Blatz and Codington, of this city, represent the will, while an attorney named Clark, who resides at Oak Tree and practices in New York, together with Roger Hunds, a New York attorney, and Thomas H. Hagerty, of New Brunswick, represent the caveators.

Upon application of B. Gluckfield, of A. S. March's office, representing Daniel J. Wray, the administrator pendente lite, was granted an order of discovery to ascertain the assets of the estate. A portion of the assets are now in a safe deposit vault of the Plainfield Trust Company, under the seal of the State Comptroller of New Jersey.

SPLINTER WOUND RESULTS IN DEATH

Peter H. Williams Contracts Blood Poisoning by Removing Sliver.

Peter H. Williams, a resident of Warrenville for many years, and widely known throughout Plainfield and vicinity, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, last night, from the effects of blood poisoning received in a simple manner. While working at his trade as carpenter a splinter was shoved under his left thumb and without any thought of producing ill effects, Williams sought to remove the offending sliver with a pen knife. Fresh paint on the splinter penetrated the blood vessels when the knife made a cut and a few hours later the poison began working through Williams' system. A physician found the entire arm terribly swollen and sent the patient to the hospital two weeks ago. Everything possible was done to offset the trouble but without success.

Williams was a man past middle life in years and had a wide acquaintance throughout this vicinity. He was a brother to the late George Williams, the Watchung grocer whose murder by George Wood ten years ago resulted in one of the most sensational homicide cases in Somerset county. Wood was convicted of murder in the second degree and is still at Trenton serving a thirty-year sentence, imposed by the late Judge Abram Q. Garretson.

Surviving Mr. Williams are his wife, three daughters and two sons. These are Miss Katheryn Williams, Charles and Harry Williams, of 208 Lee place; Mrs. William McClow, of Essex street, and Mrs. Clarence Benson, of Newark. There are also seven sisters as follows: Mrs. Paul Reusch, Mrs. Henry Schneidler, both of Dunellen; Mrs. John Gunton, of Mt. Horeb, Mrs. John Schillinger, of Plainfield; Mrs. Arthur Pagin, of North Plainfield; Mrs. Albert Jennings, of North Plainfield township, and Miss Pauline Williams, of Brooklyn. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

VETERANS OF CIVIL WAR LEAD PARADE INTO TABERNACLE ON PATRIOTIC NIGHT; 6,500 THERE

BOY SCOUTS MARCH UP IN A BODY AND PLEDGE A CHRISTIAN LIFE—MANY CAMP FIRE GIRLS WITH THEM.

ALMOST 300 RESPONDED TO THE INVITATION

Dr. Biederwolf's Service Was Appeal for Decision Now on the Great Question of Salvation—Human Flag Number Feature of Special Mu[illegible]—1,000 in the Chorus Choir.

A crowd that filled every [illegible] in the Tabernacle and left some standing in the aisles attended last night's services at the Timber Tabernacle. It was patriotic night, and heading the delegations that were out because of the special program there marched twenty-six members of the local camp, Grand Army of the Republic. They entered the Tabernacle to the strains of a patriotic air played by the Dutch Arms Band, and occupied seats of honor during the services. The Boy Scouts were also represented, as were the Camp Fire Girls, the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Women's Relief Corps. In all the audience totaled 6,500.

Before starting his sermon Dr. Biederwolf welcomed the visiting delegations. He talked of the many manly traits that young men were learning from the Boy Scout movement, and expressed a wish that every one of the more than seventy members of this organization present later pledge their lives to God—a wish that was fulfilled when almost the entire squad marched down the sawdust aisle and knelt in front of the pulpit for prayer.

Dr. Biederwolf addressed a pathetic appeal to the veterans present, who sat with white hair waving and eyes gleaming under a rusty old flag that had seen service in the dark days of the strife between States. The evangelist addressed them as "Comrades," for he is a veteran of one war—the Spanish-American—and he said that the greatest heroism and the greatest fighting that the world had ever known took place during the '60s. To die for country, or even to risk life for country, is brave enough, he said, but it does not mean salvation, and he especially urged the "Comrades" to come forward and give their lives to Christ. Not one responded.

A pleasing feature of last night's service was that the seats reserved for the chorus were filled. Not more than ten vacant ones could be found in the entire space back of the pulpit. Under the direction of Mr. McEwan the choir sang a number of patriotic songs, but that which received the greatest amount of applause, and justly, was the "Human Flag" number. With almost a thousand male and female voices it sang, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," waving banners of red and white stripes, and in the left-hand corner those containing stars on a blue background. As an encore the choir sang "The Star Spangled Banner," with the audience joining.

Despite the illness of Mr. Roberts, second bass, the National Male Quartet was heard in two pleasing numbers. Judge William N. Runyon took the place of the missing member, and while Mr. Roberts is one of the best bass singers in concert or chautauqua work, and familiar with the numbers rendered last night, Judge Runyon filled his place so well that there were none who could detect the absence of the bass except through sight. Judge Runyon is playing an important part in the meetings, and has already contributed much to the success of the campaign, but never appeared publicly until last night. He received a great ovation when it was [illegible] he would "fill in" in the quartet.

"It is a wonderful night," declared Dr. Biederwolf at the close of his sermon, which was on the text, "What Will Our Excuse Be," as almost three hundred people came to the front as penitents. Some of them simply reconsecrated their lives to God's work, but a majority were converts—were making their first public declaration in favor of a Christian life. The small space in front of the pulpit was filled twice by those who came forward in answer to the call of Dr. Biederwolf, and almost fifteen full rows of seats in the center aisle were required when they sat down. These rows hold twenty persons of average size. Included in the number was practically all of the Boy Scouts and a large number of the Camp Fire Girls.

Before beginning his sermon Dr. Biederwolf read the following letter, the spirit of which he appreciated, he said:

Rev. Birney S. Hudson, D. D.,
Pastor, Park Avenue Baptist church,
111 E. Ninth st., Plainfield, N. J.

Reverend Sir—

Lieutenant Runkle informed me yesterday of your courteous invitation for our troop to be present at the Tabernacle tomorrow evening to attend a patriotic service. As Lieutenant Runkle has already written to you, it so happens that tomorrow evening is our regular drill night, and we are not in a position to change the plans we have made.

I thought, however, you would at least be interested in noting that this troop, with a desire to render some little public service in the community, had undertaken to conduct this year a subscription dance in behalf of the Muhlenberg Hospital. The plans had been very definitely made a considerable time ago, and the dance was to have been held on next Friday, the 28th instant, and a large number of tickets had already been disposed of, a hall engaged and the music hired. It has seemed, however, to the members of the troop that having a dance at this time might conflict with the campaign that Dr. Biederwolf is holding, and we therefore last evening called up the board of managers of the hospital, told them of our position and asked for permission to give up the dance. Appreciating the point at issue, the board of managers concurred, and we therefore last evening started to refund the money, and are making arrangements to withdraw as best we may from both the music contract and the contract for the hall. I thought you might be interested in this as indicative of the support that your movement has in the membership of the troop.

Very truly yours,
(Sd) ALBERT G. BORDEN,
Captain Troop D and president,
Watchung Troop Association.

EDWARD J. CLINE, JR.

Edward J. Cline, Jr., who had recently been making his home with his father at 566 West Second street, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 9 o'clock this morning. He had been undergoing treatment at the institution for several weeks for an illness contracted at Camden, where he was working at his trade of plumbing. Mr. Cline was born in the house where he died thirty-six years ago, and with the exception of intervals while working out of town always made his residence here. Besides his father he is survived by a wife and daughter, and also a brother and sister. The latter are John R. Cline, of 129 West Second street, and Miss Elizabeth Cline, also of this city. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

PLAIN-COLOR CARPETS

In Stock for Immediate Delivery

The increasing popularity of Carpets in plain colors is readily appreciated when the advantages afforded by this style of Floor Coverings are considered.

For decorative schemes which include fine tapestries and figured upholsteries and draperies, the Plain-Color Carpet provides a wonderfully effective foundation—one of perfect balance, quiet dignity and elegance. Moreover, the unbroken surface of solid color seemingly increases the size of the room.

Conspicuous seams are avoided by the use of our Carpets in very wide widths, and the usual difficulty of obtaining the exact shade of color wanted is practically eliminated when choice is made from our complete stock of Plain-Color Carpets, which we are showing in more than

WANT MODERN TRUCK.

Since the fire, Sunday, sentiment that the present fire apparatus of the borough be replaced by a modern fire truck has increased to an appreciable degree. Almost everybody to whom the subject is broached seems to be in favor of the proposition, and it is believed that the necessary money could be raised by popular subscription. It would be easier on the pocketbooks of the residents, however, if the money was borrowed by the borough and paid back by yearly installments.

SURVEY PROPERTY.

U. S. READY TO GUARD GERMAN PROPERTY

Watch Over Interned Liners Is Doubled.

Washington, April 21.—Precautions are being taken by the government to provide against any untoward incidents or possible damage to German property that might follow a severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany. It is not anticipated that Germans or German sympathizers in the United States would be affected, but there is believed to be danger of cranks losing their heads in the possible excitement of the moment, and the authorities are taking no chances.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels admitted that he had directed detachments of marines to guard the wireless stations at Sayville and Tuckerton, which provide the only means of communication between the German ambassador and Berlin.

Secretary Daniels also has directed that the naval guard be strengthened over the interned German ships at Norfolk. The treasury department has instructed the collector of customs at New York to take extra precautions to guard the German liners held up in New York since the war began.

Secretary of War Baker said that the war department anticipated no trouble or disorders. He declined, however, to say whether he had discussed possible disorders in New York with Major General Wood.

The police guard at the German embassy has been increased. A policeman in uniform has been stationed at the door of the embassy since President Wilson read his message threatening a break in diplomatic relation with the German government.

POSTPONE ENTERTAINMENT.

On account of the Biederwolf campaign and the general feeling against entertainments being given during Mr. Biederwolf's stay in Plainfield, the Pine Mountain Association has abandoned its plans for the The Dansant, which was to have been given on April 29.

BELLE STOREY HAS HAD GREAT CAREER

Prima Donna at Hippodrome Will Be Heard by Plainfielders May 1.

The appearance of Belle Storey, whose family name is Grace Leard, as prima donna in "Hip Hip Hooray" at the New York Hippodrome, marks the rapid rise in the theatrical world of another of those Middle Western girls, whose talent has astonished the critics in the past few years. The young prima donna, who is but 28, is the daughter of the late Rev. Asa Leard, a Presbyterian minister, formerly of Omaha, Neb., later pastor of Claverly church at Springfield, Mo.

Miss Storey is but one of many stars that Plainfielders will have an opportunity to see on Monday, May 1, under most favorable circumstances. On that date the Plainfield Daily Press will run a special excursion train to New York from Dunellen, Plainfield and Fanwood, to the Hippodrome. All railroad and Hippodrome tickets will be included in a greatly reduced bargain offer, as compared with the regular railroad rates. From Dunellen the price will be $1.80, and from all other points $1.75. This includes round trip railroad fare, on special train, and a $1.50 seat at the Hippodrome—the best seats in the house being fixed at that price. The tickets will be on sale beginning next Monday morning, April 24, at 11 o'clock, at the Daily Press office, and seats can be selected from a regular Hippodrome chart. Those planning to go in groups can send one representative to buy seats for the entire party. The train will leave Plainfield about 6 o'clock, stopping at Dunellen and all stations in the city and at Fanwood, and will be run as an express both going and returning, reaching this city at about 12:30.

Miss Storey says her family was not particularly musical, and when, at 15, she announced a desire to learn to sing, she was met with kindly opposition.

However, her mother arranged for the music lessons and was convinced by neighbors and relatives that her daughter's voice should have better training than the small city offered. Accordingly, Mrs. Leard took Grace abroad, where she studied in Milan, Berlin and Paris for two years. Returning to New York, she continued her study and in 1910 began a concert tour of the South and Middle West.

Until this time, Miss Storey had no thought of a stage career. She was with an evangelist for over one year, while he was making a "sawdust trail" of Oklahoma and Kansas, and she confesses to trombone solos played to attract sinners to the sermons. Sometimes these trombone solos were on the street corners. This is mentioned just to show how far removed Miss Leard was from the glamor of the footlights.

It was her concert manager who persuaded her to try dramatic work, a decision she arrived at after much thought. Naturally her mother and father were against any such enterprise, but her manager insisted, and Miss Leard changed her name to Belle Storey. Her first appearance was at Hammerstein's Victoria, where she sat in a box and sang the chorus of a song sung by the performers on the stage. Two years in vaudeville followed, and then Miss Storey was engaged for a part in "Chin Chin." Following a year at the Globe, she was transferred to the Hippodrome.

Two performances a day do not permit the prima donna much leisure, but what time she has Miss Storey spends with Mme. Sembrich in study. Her recreation is reading Tolstoy.

CABINET TO TAKE UP MEXICAN POLICY

Carranza Has Been Notified of Arrival of Note—More Facts Are Awaited.

Washington, April 21.—All data at hand today bearing on the Mexican situation is being assembled at the State and War Departments ready for submission at the Cabinet meeting today, when President Wilson and his official advisers are expected to review the Mexican problem fully for the first time since General Carranza urged that the American expeditionary forces be withdrawn.

The Washington government, it is learned, already has acknowledged Carranza's note asking that negotiations for the withdrawal of the troops be taken up. He was assured his arguments were being studied, although there was no indication that a reply stating the position of the United States was being prepared.

Troops Reach Columbus.

Columbus, N. M., April 21.—The first detchment of the 2,300 troops which were ordered to Columbus as a base reinforcement for General Pershing's punitive column reached here during the night and encamped this morning. Other detachments are expected to arrive at any time.

FINNERTY IS FINED FOR DISORDERLY CONDUCT

George Parker, the Newark publisher, who was arrested on complaint of J. T. Vail, real estate dealer, of this city, for accepting money for an advertisement and then failing to publish the book, this morning returned $15 to Mr. Vail, also $22.50 to Captain John Curtis, who made a second complaint, and Judge DeMeza suspended sentence over him.

ALBERT SCHOMP SAVES LIFE OF DORIS NICHOLS

But for prompt action yesterday on the part of Albert Schomp, in whose yard Doris Nichols, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Nichols, of 150 Grove street, was playing about a bon-fire, the little girl would have been burned very badly as a result of her clothes catching fire. Schomp, who was nearby, wrapped his coat about the child and smothered the flames. He then carried her to her home next door and a physician was summoned. It was found that she was only slightly burned.

ALABAMA BOY PREPARES CHEMICALS FOR HIS DEATH

Lipscomb Dowdell, of Opelaka, Alabama, a nineteen-year-old student at the Groszmann School, known as Hebart Hall, died at Muhlenberg Hospital last night shortly after his admission suffering from the effects of poison taken with suicidal intent. The young man went to his room directly after the evening meal, and about an hour later was discovered in an unconscious condition. Several notes lying on the table indicated what had caused his condition. A few months ago his mother died, and this preyed on his mind. He was subject to attacks of severe mental depression.

Dr. N. W. Currie was summoned, and after an examination, ordered Dowdell's removal to the hospital. The poison was made by a combination of two chemicals, with which the student was familiar through the study of chemistry. He had been at the Groszmann School about three years, coming here from Alabama, where his family and relatives reside. He had been making excellent progress mentally and physicaly. The body will be sent to Aabama this afternoon.

WILL MOTOR TO CONEY.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Motor Cycle Club was held last evening in Jack Horner's store on Somerset street. The club voted to motor to Coney Island on Sunday. Other business was routine. Following the meeting refreshments were served. The members of the committee in charge were L. Hampson and W. Black. The club will hold a party Saturday evening evening at the home of its road captain, H. Alberts, 21 Regent street.

TROOPS PRESERVE ORDER.

Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., April 21.—State troops preserved order about the plant of the National Cable and Conduit Co. today. The striking employes, awed by the result of yesterday's clashes, in which six were injured, kept their distance from the military deadline. The employes will be paid off this afternoon, however, and trouble is feared then.

POSTPONE MEETING.

Owing to the fact that there was no quorum, the annual meeting of Abram Lincoln Chapter, I. C. S., Fraternity of the World, was not held last night. The meeting was put over to Monday night, at which time officers will be elected.

Frank Storr, of West Front street, who recently underwent a severe operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, has returned home, where he is steadily improving.

OLD DOBBIN DOOMED: TRACTOR TAKING HIS PLACE

G. B. LOUDERBACK, TRACTOR EXPERT

TRACTOR, IN TEST, PULLING THREE 14 IN. PLOWS IN GROUND FROZEN 3½ FT. DEEP

Old Dobbin is doomed. The charges against him are that he has to eat and sleep, and, after working all day, stands in his stall instead of pumping the water or running the cream separator.

The thing that is putting Old Dobbin out of business is the farm tractor. Twenty thousand tractors were used on American farms last year. Washington agricultural officials predict that soon practically all farm work will be done by the busy little machine that never grows tired.

The farm tractor does the work of the horse—many horses—and does it better at about half the cost. It plants, plows, hauls or does road grading. It runs the saw mill, cuts ensilage and fills the silo. It pulls the binder, works the hay baler, pulls stumps, crushes stones and, after a hard day's work in the field, pumps the water, or separates the cream, or churns the butter.

The Department of Agriculture has been making tests of tractors. Here are some interesting things it has found out:

Four head of horses, at an actual cost of fifty cents an hour, will turn, with the ordinary gang plow, four acres a day. With an eight-foot disk harrow, fifteen acres can be covered. With the same four-horse team, thirty acres can be harrowed and, with an eight-foot binder, fifteen acres can be harvested in ten hours.

Tractor vs. Horse.

On the other hand, it has been demonstrated that a good light tractor (the Buckeye Junior, Anderson, Indiana), costs, for gasoline and lubricating oil, an average of $1.65 a day. Counting up-keep, depreciation, etc., this tractor costs $3.75 a day, and in that day, at a two-mile speed, plows five and six-tenths acres with a fourteen-inch "two-bottom gang," and, with three bottoms, eight and five-tenths acres. With two disk harrows and a drag in tandem, this tractor will cover nineteen and three-tenths acres in ten hours. In a day, thirty-five acres can be harrowed with three sections of peg, or in pulling an eight-foot binder twenty acres of wheat can be cut down.

The tractor, department officials say, does not mean an increased investment for the farmer. It is merely a question of selling a few horses to make the subetitution. It does more horse-work on a barrel of distillate, or gasoline, than six to ten horses will do on an equal expenditure for hay or oats.

"It has been shown that the American farmer uses more power than is used in all branches of manufacturing in the country," said G. B. Louderback, of Anderson, tractor expert, who has been conferring with war department officials on a tractor for military use. "Tractors are becoming an absolute necessity for farmers. The light tractor is the solution of the farm power question. If any farmer doubts that he can do more work and get greater results and bigger profits, at a less cost with an effective light tractor, I will be glad to show him just how he can do it."

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, APRIL 21, 1916.

THE TERCENTENARY OF SHAKESPEARE.

The observance of the Shakespeare tercentenary, which has been planned for a decade by the world of literature, reaches the formal stage on Sunday, the three hundredth anniversary of the death of the poet genius.

From Stratford-on-Avon there will radiate the brightest beams that the minds of men have absorbed; and the homage that will be paid by all civilized peoples to the immortal bard will form one of the most impressive observances the world has ever known.

William Shakespeare, the third child and first son of John Shakespeare and his wife, Mary Arden, was born at Stratford-on-Avon on April 23, 1564. He died on April 23, 1616. Shakespeare married young, and at 21, when he went to London, had a wife eight years his senior and three children. At first, Shakespeare held horses outside of theatres for gay gallants who were attending the play. The youth's native wit and ambition did the rest. London knew him first as an actor, and during his lifetime he was popularly identified with acting rather than with producing the remarkable plays that he gave. Shakespeare appeared often before Queen Elizabeth and King James, and frequently took the roles of old men.

Contemporaries have written that Shakespeare wrote without erasing a line. That is the reason why he could produce in twenty years forty distinct works—thirty-seven plays, including many of the world's masterpieces; two long narrative poems, and sonnets that are in themselves remarkable. He originated some eight hundred perfectly recognizable, distinct characters.

The celebration of the Shakespeare Tercentenary in England will lack some of the spectacular features that had long been planned. At Stratford, a great parade and pageant had been planned, and the women of the countryside in Warwickshire had completed a beautiful collection of heraldic surcoats and banners. They had embroidered in silk on rich clothes the arms of every knight mentioned in Shakespeare's plays, and they were to have been worn in the great pageant. The war-time drafts of men from the village will interfere with the plans, but the neighboring towns and the women-folk of Stratford will see that the occasion is fittingly celebrated. It is expected that representatives of many of the governments will be present Sunday in the procession to the tomb of Shakespeare.

The observance of Shakespeare Day will be popular in the United States, and it is here that the distractions of war have interfered the least with the great holiday. The laudations which will be poured out on Easter Sunday are but a minor phase of the Tercentenary, for during the spring and summer, pageants, plays, public meetings and banquets will be frequent occurrences in each section of the country, all dedicated to the Bard of Avon. The public schools, the colleges and universities, the public libraries, and even the moving pictures and the clubs and other organizations of the people all are enlisted in the observance.

It is a fortunate thing that there are no contests at the Presidential primaries to be held next Tuesday. An opinion by the Attorney General, followed by a decision by Chief Justice Gummere of the Supreme Court, has caused a mix-up over the ballots, which, in case of a contest, might make serious trouble. As is explained elsewhere in today's paper, a space has been printed at the bottom of the sample ballots, showing that voters are to have an opportunity to express a choice for President when electing delegates to the conventions of the two principal parties. Under the law, City Counsel Reed has determined that the official ballots must be exactly like the samples, and the space will have to be there. At the same time, under the opinions above mentioned, every person who takes advantage of the space to say that he favors Wilson, or Roosevelt, or Hughes, or some one else, immediately makes his ballot a marked one, and the election officers must throw it out. So all the voters want to be careful not to express a choice, even though clearly invited to do so. It is an unusual situation, but because of no contest cannot have a serious effect.

J. T. Vail had a man arrested yesterday for soliciting and collecting for an advertisement in some publication which was to be printed out of town, and which has never been exhibited to Mr. Vail. If the man in question is not able to prove that his transaction was honorable in every way, which he claims is the case, we hope that he gets the limit. There are too many people soliciting business from Plainfield business men for fake advertising schemes, and if a few of them are dealt with summarily, the city will be better off and our merchants much richer. The Business Men's Association has, to a large extent, done away with such schemes, as its members have learned to their entire satisfaction, and should Mr. Vail succeed in his prosecution, he will be doing every merchant in the city a favor.

Some one must have taken the tip from the editorial in the Daily Press some nights ago about the racket that the fire department apparatus makes in coming home from fires. Both going and coming from a fire in the east end the other night, not a bell was rung, or a siren blow. The machines made noise enough, however, to fully warn all pedestrians.

Even if David T. Kenney did not succeed in getting Henry Ford to locate his new factory in this vicinity, he is deserving of commendation for his efforts to add another industry to those in this city. If every citizen tried as hard to improve industrial conditions, Plainfield would have a lot more plants than are now to be found within the city.

By the way, former Governor Murphy has had nothing more to say about the lack of Roosevelt sentiment in the East, since that trip he took to Chicago a few weeks ago. Perhaps Mr. Murphy thought that his remarks would not get so far East when he made them.

The System.

It isn't what you make, my boy,
But what you save, that counts.
The folks that scrimp and sacrifice
Have dough in large amounts.
We've often heard from wise old heads
This bit of sage advice:
The fellow who hangs on to his
Will always have the price.
If it costs ten a week to live
And you are making eight,
Hang on to all your surplus, lad,
And then as sure as fate,
It is a very patent fact,
Ere many decades lapse,
You'll be a multi-millionaire,
That is to say, perhaps.

The Hickeyville Clarion

There was quite a regrettable incident in Deacon Pringle's back yard in the dark the other night. Hank Purdy was in the deacon's henhouse and was just comin' out with a couple of fowls for Sunday when he met Hod Renfrew just goin' in. Neither one recognized the other and each thought the other was the deacon and both hit simultaneously. Hod got a black eye and Hank got a broken nose. The matter has been patched up without appealin' to the courts, as both gentlemen are some modest about notoriety in this case.

A strange figger was seen on our village streets late at night several nights last week and there was talk of gettin' up a possy to run the mysterious culpret to earth, it being thought that he must be one of them Raffles fellers and raffles are strictly agin' the law in these parts. It turned out to be Constable Ezra Bibbins, who had completely disguised himself by removing his long flowing whiskers, which he had wore since the last President was elected, and nobody knowed him. He had to identify himself to the crowd by a tattoed ship on his breast and order was restored.

Advice to Young Men.

Young men, this is leap-year still, and something is liable to happen to you any moment. In such an emergency it is well to be prepared. There are a few sets of rules which you should follow when there is a likelihood of being asked to marry one of the fair creatures. Follow these rules and you will be happy. Marriage is an important step, you know, and the young man cannot be too careful in accepting a proposal.

If she is muscular, and has biceps like those of a section hand, think well before you take a chance.

Do not marry one who has a fondness for pool or billiards or who spends much time in bowling alleys. This is liable to keep her away from home a great deal.

If you have your choice between a girl who smokes a pipe and one who smokes cigarets, accept the one who smokes a pipe. She is more apt to make a success of her life and to provide for you in the future.

If she won't let you smoke in the house, so much better. Smoking doesn't do you any good, anyhow.

When she hears burglars in the cellar, hop right out of bed and go and look for them. You needn't be scared, there won't be any burglars there, and if there should be, they will probably shoot you, and you will never have to hop out of bed to look for and more burglars.

If she wants the bedroom window down and you want it up, put it down, for you won't get any sleep if you don't.

Hints to Lovelorn Gents.

If she makes a practice of eating onions for supper every time you call, it is a sign that she is indifferent toward your suit.

If you spend a lot of money sending flowers to her every day, it may make a hit with her, but she will marry somebody who has more sense.

Don't talk to her about love in a cottage. Talk about a brownstone bungalow and spring the cottage on her after you get her.

If she is handsome, tell her about it, and if she isn't, tell her anyway.

Have an automobile catalogue in your coat pocket where she can catch a glimpse of it.

Plainfield Theatre.

The new bill at the Plainfield Theatre which opened yesterday afternoon for the last half of the week brought several pleasing novelties. The first of these is "The Wonder Kettle," a seemingly ordinary kitchen utensil, which through some mysterious power turns nature topsy-turvy. One of the most striking feats it performed was the boiling of water resting on a cake of ice, but there are many others which must be seen to be appreciated. Another novelty on the six act vaudeville program was "Kola," a scenic novelty which received hearty applause.

In addition to these numbers the bill also offers: Wesley and Richmond, offering their own idea of the variety stage under the title of "In Vaudeville;" the comedy playlet, "Pickles," a positive scream put across by Harrigan and Company; Cushman and Wilcox, novelty dancers; LeRoy and LeVan, in a nonsensical novelty, "Officers On Duty."

Those who are following the serial film, "The Strange Case of Mary Page," will see more of the trail this afternoon and tonight as it is shown in the ninth episode. This is undoubtedly one of the best continued films that has ever been flashed on a screen in Plainfield.

H. OTTO WITTPENN IN DEMAND AS A SPEAKER

Jersey City, April 21.—Democratic supporters of Naval Officer H. Otto Wittpenn, of this city, for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination are keeping him busy. Invitations for him to speak in various parts of the State reach him every day and he is keeping as many of the engagements as possible. Considering the fact that this is only the early stage of the campaign it is developing into a particularly strenuous one.

One of the biggest events on Mr. Wittpenn's schedule is a dinner to be tendered him by the Democrats of the southern section of Bergen county at Zimmerman's Hall, Carlstadt, on Saturday evening, May 6. Former Assemblyman George Zimmerman, Sr., is the chairman of the committee of arrangements, the secretary is Frank Erdle, and the treasurer former Freeholder Michael Hecker.

The demand for tickets has been enormous and the committee expects a big crowd to meet the naval officer. The dinner will be a Democratic one primarily, but many Republicans who are anxious to meet Mr. Wittpenn have signified their intention to attend and it will probably develop into a "get together" gathering participated in by hundreds of the voters of southern Bergen county.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Now that the Legislature has adjourned sine die and the session of 1916 has passed into history, the people of this State are beginning to turn their attention to the gubernatorial situation, and the campaign for the nomination at the primaries promises to be a more active one than usual.

Under these circumstances may I ask the privilege of having your valued publication print my personal appreciation of one of the candidates for the nomination for Governor, in the hope that thereby the people of this vicinity may know his sterling worth and his qualifications for the high office to which he aspires?

So far there are three serious candidates: George L. Record, of Hudson; Austen Colgate, of Essex, and Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic. All three are able men and all have been prominently before the public, politically and otherwise. The situation is complicated further by the fact that this year marks a primary for nomination to the United States Senate. Theoretically, perhaps, high political office should not turn upon the geography of the State, but practical politics demands that too many offices should not go to any one particular locality.

It is not my purpose to draw any invidious distinctions or comparisons between the three avowed candidates for the nomination for Governor, but as a resident of South Jersey until recently it has been my pleasure to have known Senator Edge for years and to have followed his business and legislative careers with particularity and interest. Hence a word to the voters of Plainfield in appreciation and approval of his candidacy may be excused as well as be of some little aid in acquainting the community with his qualifications for the governorship.

The success of Senator Edge as a legislator is due in large degree to his bringing to this work the methods, habits and system acquired as a business man, and as such he stands pre-eminent.

From office boy in a weekly paper at Atlantic City to owner of two daily papers and the ownership of one of the largest advertising agencies in the county at 43 years of age is a record of which any man well may be proud and which stamps Senator Edge as possessing a character of force, honesty and fair business dealing, as well as giving him a high place in the ranks of the so-called self made men of his State.

But his qualifications for the office of Governor and his record and accomplishments as a legislator are of more interest probably, though the executive ability and skill acquired in business is a desirable essential to bring to that office. More than a keen knowledge of mere politics, more than a creditable career as a legislator is necessary for the successful conduct of the office of Chief Executive. Too often are these attainments the only ones possessed by the incumbents of that office to the detriment of the State, although a thorough working knowledge of both branches of the Legislature is a very desirable thing for the occupant of the Gubernatorial chair to have.

The first experience of Senator Edge at Trenton was as journal clerk of the Senate from 1897 to 1899. In 1901 he became secretary of that body and continued as such for four years. In 1909 he was elected to the Assembly from Atlantic county and was made the majority leader thereof upon taking the oath. In 1910 he was elected to the Senate and has just completed his second term, a period of six years. During these years he has served successively and successfully as majority leader of the Senate and as its president. While president of the Senate and by virtue of the constitutional provisions he became acting governor of the State during the absence of Governor Fielder.

The most important statutes enacted as a result of the efforts of Senator Edge are as follows: The workmen's compensation act, which is simple and easily understandable by both lawyer and layman; the act limiting women's work hours to ten; the act compelling safety devices upon all elevators; the act permitting the formation of mutual liability companies, which act automatically caused the old line companies to reduce their rates; the act providing State aid for country roads; the various bills consolidating and combining many of the departments of the State government, and which were passed as a result of the work of the Economy and Efficiency Commission of which Senator Edge was chairman; the State budget system bill; the Central Purchasing Agency act and the bill abolishing the State census. These two last named acts alone will save the State over $250,000. In addition to these acts Senator Edge was responsible in large measure for the act providing for the revaluation of railroad property for purposes of taxation.

The platform of Senator Edge in his campaign for the nomination for Governor briefly stated is that he proposes to bring to that office, should he be nominated and elected, the same degree of attention to detail and the same business methods in the conduct of State affairs as he applies in his daily life to his personal business, believing that the duties of a Governor are neither circumscribed nor confined by written law, that the responsibilities of the office are not met by mere compliance with the constitutional requirements, but that the occupant of the office should so act and conduct himself as would the head of a large and successful business organization.

Nor does Senator Edge lose sight of the fact that a certain degree of politics necessarily must enter into the office of Governor, for so long as our present system of party government prevails the Chief Executive, be he Federal or State, is the head and leader of the party in power. Such political leadership, however, if coupled with a thorough familiarity with what the State at large demands or requires, together with sound business sense, judgment, ability and experience injected into the State's administration of the various departments would insure, Senator Edge believes, proper and favorably legislative co-operation.

For the above reasons as evidenced by the past record of Water E. Edge, it is the humble opinion of the writer that the voters of this community could do no better than to express at the primaries their preference for Senator Edge as the Republican nominee for the office of Governor of the State of New Jersey.

Proctor's Theatre

Miss Blanche Sweet, renowned as one of the most charming and versatile of screen stars, appears today at Proctor's in a powerful Paramount picture admirably suited to her personality. It is "The Secret Sin," and the story was written especially to suit Miss Sweet's wonderful talents. It combines both pathos and comedy, and will prove a delight to all classes of patrons. In production of "The Secret Sin" special attention was taken to the artistic value in telling the story and one will find a host of delightful surprises and many master touches that enhances the production considerably. In addition today the third episode of "The Social Pirates" appears as an added feature. This chapter is said to be the best yet, and if this is true a decided treat is in store for the many patrons of this popular playhouse. Tomorrow the dramatic feature, "Rosemary," will introduce Marguerite Snow in the leading role. This is a famous Metro feature and as such commands the attention of every film fan, for these productions are recognized as one of the leading standards in the film world. Three excellent comedies have been provided especially for the kiddies and include Charlie Chaplin, in a two reel uproar entitled, "The Knockout," which is surely appropriately named, for it is certainly a knockout when its amusing qualities are considered. Mutt and Jeff, those two famous prodigies of Bud Fisher, will appear in a funny cartoon comedy entitled, "The Submarine," and Harry Watson, as "Musty Suffer" will evoke storms of vociferous applause. As a speccial attraction Easter week starting Monday, the management has arranged to introduce Theda Bara week to Plainfielders. Starting Monday, in addition to the regular show, one of Theda Bara's biggest film successes will be shown each day. On Monday Miss Bara will appear in "The Two Orphans," on Tuesday in "Sin," on Wednesday in "The Galley Slave," on Thursday in "The Serpent," on Friday in "Destruction," and on next Saturday in "Carmen." Such a remarkable treat is new to local film fans and the Proctor management has arranged this booking on account of the overwhelming demand for a repetition of these famous Theda Bara master pictures.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— The Ugly Duckling Grows And Grows.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

"TELL us a ducky daddle story, please, daddy," asked Jack and Evelyn as soon as he came in after they had supper. So daddy took them on his knees and told them this: "When an ugly duckling saw some swans for the first time the strangest feeling he ever had came to him as he watched them mount the blue sky and leave for south lands. He circled around and around in the water like a wheel and craned his long neck up in the air to watch the swans grow small as they sailed away to happiness. Then he gave a shriek so loud and strange that it frightened even himself. Oh, he just couldn't forget those beautiful birds! When they were out of sight he ducked right down to the bottom of the water, and when he came up again he was miserably unhappy."

"Why?" the children wanted to know.

"Because he loved them better than any birds he had ever seen and wanted to go with them," daddy explained. "He knew he could never be as beautiful as they were, but if only they would let him go with them! So all that dreary winter he was obliged to swim about in the cold water to keep from freezing, but at night the hole he swam in got smaller and smaller. Then it froze so hard that the surface ice cracked, and the poor duckling had to keep his feet moving all the time so the ice could not close in about him. At last he was so tired that he could not move any more. Then he was frozen into the ice."

"Early one morning a peasant came along and saw him stuck fast there. So he crept out on the ice and hammered a hole in it with his heavy shoe and took the ugly duckling home to his wife. His wife put him next her stove, and soon he thawed out and held up his head to see where he was. The children wanted to play with him, but the duckling thought they were going to hurt him. So he rushed in his fright right into a pan of milk and tipped it over on the floor. The woman scolded and threw up her hands. This made the duckling spatter the milk into the butter cask and the meal tub. Just imagine how the kitchen looked by this time! Then the woman got her tongs and tried to strike the duckling, and the children tumbled over one another trying to catch the poor thing. By good luck the door happened to stand open, and the duckling flew out under the bushes and, still sick, lay there in the new snow."

"Yes, but he was growing into a beautiful bird all the while," said daddy.

KISSING PASTOR QUITS CHURCH

Cedar Grove Congregation Votes to Oust Him.

CASE CREATES DISSENSION

Parishioners by 52 to 37 Vote Accept Resignation of Minister Who Was Too Attentive to Choir Singer—Divine Pleads For Another Chance.

Cedar Grove, April 21.—Despite his pleas for another chance, the Union Congregational church of this village accepted the resignation of the pastor, the Rev. J. Lewis Evans, who admitted kissing Miss Maud Jacobus, a soprano in the church choir.

The decision practically dismissing him from the pastorate was by a vote of 52 to 37.

When the vote was announced the pastor arose. "I thank my friends for coming out to vote for me," he said. "I am down now, but as there is a God in heaven I will not stay down, and I will not have the people of Cedar Grove to thank for it."

The little edifice was packed almost beyond suffocation, and the rest of the little hamlet was either hovering around outside or sitting up at their homes waiting for emissaries to bring back the news.

In the municipal quarters, 200 feet away, the township committee, whose meetings ordinarily draw a big crowd, were threshing out a momentous dispute with the Erie Railroad company, but not a handful of farmers and commuters gathered there.

When it came time to vote the question arose as to whether all those who contributed to the support of the church should have a vote or whether the voting should be restricted to church members only. The moderator wished to allow all contributors to vote, but the motion was overruled.

Pastor Evans pleaded that he had as many or more friends outside the church roster as on it, and they should be permitted to vote.

It was noticeable that all the younger members when marking their ballots wrote the biggest "Yes" the little paper would hold. When the result of the vote was announced the deposed minister jumped to his feet.

What the town considers the most serious part of the entire trouble is that it has caused a schism in the church which threatens to fatally disrupt it.

SOUR SPINACH.—Clean and wash spinach thoroughly, rejecting the coarse leaves and stalks, put to cook in a covered kettle with no water except that which has clung to its leaves in the washing. Steam half a peck over not much fire for five or six minutes, then with a wooden spoon turn and break the almost melted spinach and dry out any water. To a half peck of spinach add the juice of a lemon after adding butter generously, or in its place a boiled down meat stock. Eat hot, when it will seem not unlike sorrel greens, or mold and serve cold as a salad with a garnish of boiled egg or beets or both.

"Pusley" Greens.—Purslane, which soon comes up in a freshly hoed garden and which might be profitably cultivated for greens since it is a great grower, is mildly and deliciously acid of itself. The Dutch use it in quantities and can it, so that we can sometimes buy it thus. Cook as you do spinach.

Cucumber Cutlets. — Choose short, bulky cucumbers and peel carefully, cutting off ends and dividing whole into about three equal parts. Boil for about five minutes, but not enough so that the seeds start to come out. Drain and cool a little, then dip in slightly beaten egg yolk and then in cracker crumbs and fry gently in butter, turning once. A piquant sauce may be served with these or lemon juice, but nothing is really needed to make them palatable. Cucumbers may be stewed in a little water and served with butter and a little vinegar and taste good.

Boiled Globe Artichokes.—Wash artichokes and remove outer woody leaves. Cut off a fourth or perhaps a third of the top (this depends upon the condition, since it will not be necessary to cut a perfectly fresh one unless the leaves have a thorn), throw into lightly salted water in which there is the juice of a lemon and boil from fifteen to twenty minutes. When the leaves come off the bottom readily it is cooked enough. Drain and serve on a plate with a tablespoonful of hollandaise sauce, dipping the inner tip of the leaf in the sauce. Tender leaves may be eaten entire and furnish excellent bulk, but usually the fleshy inside is drawn off with the teeth, having previously been seasoned with the sauce. They may be eaten cold in the same way with either a mayonnaise or a French dressing.

TROOP D HOLDS ITS FIRST MOUNTED DRILL

The Watchung Troop held its first mounted drill in Plainfield since last autumn in Grandi's riding ring on Kensington avenue last night. A number of automobiles lined the curb, filled with spectators who could readily view the manouvres going on under the arc lights illuminating the ring. The importance of making full use of the few remaining drill nights to fit the troop into first rate condition for summer camp made it impossible for the troop to attend the big meeting in Dr. Biederwolf's Tabernacle, although the night being "Patriots Night." They had received from the Rev. Birney S. Hudson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, an invitation to do so. Captain Albert G. Borden explained the situation in this letter:

"Lieutenant Runkle informed me yesterday of your courteous invitation for our troop to be present at the Tabernacle tomorrow evening to attend a patriotic service. As Lieutenant Runkle has already written to you, it so happens that tomorrow evening is our regular drill night and we are not in a position to change the plans we have made.

"I thought, however, you would at least be interested in noting that this troop, with a desire to render some little public service in the community, had undertaken to conduct this year a subscription dance in behalf of the Muhlenberg Hospital. The plans had been very definitely made a considerable time ago and the dance was to have been held on next Friday, the 28th instant, and a large number of tickets had already been disposed of, a hall engaged and the music hired. It has seemed, however, to the members of the troop that having a dance at this time might conflict with the campaign that Dr. Biederwolf is holding, and we therefore last evening called up the Board of Managers of the hospital, told them of our position and asked for permission to give up the dance. Appreciating the point at issue, the Board of Managers concurred, and we therefore started last evening to refund the money, and are making arrangements to withdraw as best as we may from both the music contract and the contract for the hall. I thought you might be interested in this as indicative of the support that your movement has in the membership of the troop."

MINISTER HIDES HIS PAIN.

Arm Broken, He Conducts the Funeral Service For a Woman.

Hammondton, April 21.—Suffering from a fracture of an arm and other severe injuries, the Rev. Everett Vandright insisted on going to the home of Mrs. Lucy Baker and conducting the funeral of her sister, Miss Jessie Gauntt.

Miss Gaunt was a member of the First Methodist Episcopal church, of which he is the pastor. He said nothing about himself at the services, but several persons noticed that he was suffering. After the services he had his injuries cared for by a physician.

Mr. Vandright was going to the Baker home on his bicycle when he was run down by an auto.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

The laying out of a tennis court in the rear of the Elks' Club on Watchung avenue indicates that there will be activity this summer in this sport from a new quarter. The spot is an ideal one, and it is safe to conclude that some crack wielders will be developed in the organization. Tournaments will be arranged and the competition should prove lively and interesting. No game offers such an open field for development as tennis, and it is one that any individual can learn during off hours. There will probably be one drawback after the recreation gets a foothold among the Elks, and that will come in the limited facilities for promoting it. One court is hardly enough to interest a club of this size, and that it will be populated during the greater part of each day is a foregone conclusion.

Pencil pushers representing Philadelphia newspapers have organized a baseball team and have sent out warnings to the effect that they intend to tour New Jersey in search of prey. If the Quakertown outfit is composed of fairly good material it will probably encounter some easy picking in this State, for few of the scribes have an acquaintance with the national pastime outside of what they inflict on the public in the way of dope.

One week from tomorrow Plainfield will usher in its City Baseball League season. Whether for better or for worse, the curtain-raising will be welcomed, for fandom is getting keyed up to a pitch where it has just got to have some real action and the leaguers may be able to supply the required Saturday afternoon diversion. The final meeting will be held in the Daily Press building Monday night, and a full attendance of delegates is required in order that the final business may be settled.

Tip for City Leaguers.—You can't hit the ball for .300 if you insist on hitting the hay at 2:39.

Another Plainfield ball player has come into the public limelight as a possible minor league entry. He is "Hub" Stine, the versatile athlete who was turned out of North Plainfield High School in 1912. While "Hub" insists that his profession as physical director offers too great a field for the consideration of baseball contracts, the scouts who have been giving him the once-over may produce a tempting enough offer to bring him to terms. Stine is a clever baseball player, as well as a star at basketball, football, hockey and all other sports.

Britt Martin says he won't pitch for Hope Chapel in the City League this season. Who ever accused him of wanting to?

• • • • • •

Joe Albert, he of Scotch Plains' fame, is responsible for the statement that certain baseball stars of that village will play with the City League as a last resort. Pulling the Benny Kauff stuff, eh?

It might be well for the handful of pessimists we have around here who claim that cycling has become a dead issue in Plainfield, to take a trip over to the Newark Velodrome, Sunday, and see some of the home talent perform on the boards. A certain couple of local youngsters seem to be very much alive over that way.

• • • • • •

Twenty-three runs were scored in a High School baseball game on Parker Field, Wednesday, Plainfield High coming out in the van by a one-counter margin. Proving our contention that ball games can't be won without runs, but that lots of runs don't make a ball game.

A gymnasium in Dunellen that "Lanky Bob" Fitzsimmons used for training during his attempt to "come back" a few years ago, burned to the ground Wednesday night. Let's hope, for his own sake, that all of the freckled one's ambitions to again enter the roped arena went up in smoke.

CHAPELITES WILL PLAY FINAL GAME

Last Practise Contest of City League Entries at Bound Brook Tomorrow.

When the Hope Chapel City Baseball League outfit finishes up its spring training season tomorrow in a final game against the Bound Brook Y. M. H. at that place the following stars will compose the lineup under Britt Martin's tutorage: Tom Heron, lf; Harriman, 3b; Martin, 1b; J. Dixon, cf; Walls, ss; Grisley, 2b; Luthman, c; Hefti, rf; Schott, p.

Heron, Grisley, Luthman, Walls and Schott are old Hope Chapel mainstays, the last named being recognized last year as the best pitcher on the league's circuit. He has had several offers to play semi-pro ball and it is understood that his brother, Adam Schott, a former fielder for the Plainfield Pets and old Clinton Avenues, is scouring around for a twirling job for him in the metropolitan district. Dick is one of the best youngsters turned out in Plainfield in several years past and that he would make good in the professional sport is a foregone conclusion.

The team and its rooters will leave for Bound Brook on the 1:30 trolley car tomorrow afternoon and it is expected that a big delegation of admirers will go to Beetown to size up the West Fourth street crew.

JEWETT ROWED IN THE LOSING SHELL

All-around Plainfield Athlete Caried Princeton's Colors in Big Regetta.

William vanD. Jewett, of Central avenue, rowed No. 7 in the Princeton junior crew, which was defeated by the junior eight of Harvard, on Carnegie Lake. In the big event of the day, the varsity race, the Princeton crew shot over the line six inches ahead of the favorite Crimson.

Jewett is an all-round athlete, having just won second place in the intercollegiate wrestling bouts. While at Leal's School here he played basketball and baseball. This is Jewett's last year at Princeton, as he graduates in June.

WEST ORANGE MAIDENS CHALLENGE N. P. H. S.

The second baseball practice of the North Plainfield High School girls' large squad of enthusiastic feminine Hyde Oval and brought out another large squal of enthusiastic feminine ballists. The team will practice during the Easter vacation week, their aim being to learn the first rudiments of the national pastime as early as possible. The initial publicity of the fact that the Borough School had organized a feminine baseball nine has already received widespread attention and comment. Yesterday Miss Lillian Spencer, the manager, received a 'phone message from Joseph Brynes, of West Orange, for a contest between the West Orange girls' nine and the borough girls. Mr. Brynes will be recalled as the referee of several of the male and feminine interscholastic basketball games in this city the past winter. Just as soon as her team is picked Captain Theresa McCullough anticipates scheduling the game with the West Orange maidens.

FIRST CONTEST FOR ATHLETIC COMBINE

Will Oppose Boy Scout Club at Bound Brook Tomorrow Afternoon.

Tomorrow afternoon the Plainfield Athletic Nine, of this city, will go to Bound Brook to lay its opening game with the Boy Scouts, of that place. The P. A. N. team is made up of young men of the West End, ranging from 14 to 17 years of age, and promises to be one of the fastest teams in its class in the city. The game tomorrow starts the schedule, which at this early date extends far into the summer, games with other teams in this city, Westfield, Dunellen, Somerville and Bound Brook having been arranged as far ahead as July. A number of dates are still open, however, for either Saturday or Sunday ball, and the manager, C. Poling, of 809 West Fifth street, would be glad to make the necessarw arrangements with any other team desiring games. The lineup for Saturday's game, and undoubtedly with very little change throughout the season in view of the recognized ability of the players, will be as follows: Poling, lf; Newell, rf; Barry, 2b; Wilson, 1b; Brandt, 3b; Keating, ss; J. Newell, p; Meakim, cp; Cowly, cf.

The first game in this city will be played on April 29, when the P. A. N. will clash with the crack Crescent A. C. For this game and all local games throughout the season the P. A. H. will use the old Hope Common diamond on Sherman avenue

BURLESQUE BASEBALL FATAL TO BORO NINE

North Plainfield High School suffered another defeat yesterday afternoon at Woodbridge, bowing to the baseball representatives of that high school in an uninteresting contest by the count of 10-6. The boroughites showed little improvement over the previous combats, especially in the fielding line, committing nine miscues, although their batting was above par, securing eleven safeties.

The wretched fielding was accountable for practically every Woodbridge run, only two being earned runs, while the locals were also credited with the same number. "Tooey" Dawe started on the mound for N. P. H. S., and was touched for four hits, Dilts supplanting him in the fifth and held his opponents to three clean swats, while seven were forced to swing three times in vain.

Dilts, Mair and Yates did some pretty clouting for the visitors, this trio collecting eight hits, three of which were credited to Dilts, while Yates and Mair collected a brace, the former's being responsible for five runs.

LAYING OUT TENNIS COURT FOR THE ELKS

Playing Center in the Rear of Watchung Avenue Clubhouse Will Be Ideal.

Preliminary details to the laying out of a regulation tennis court in the rear of the Elks' Club on Watchung avenue have been completed and it is expected that the court will be ready for play within the next two weeks. Under the supervision of Sam Taverner, a civil engineer and prominent Elk, the stakes have been laid out in the ground in the rear of the Elks' Club and extending back into the rear of the East Second street fire headquarters.

Because of the limited amount of ground in the rear of the club it was necessary to use the firemen's territory and the firemen will be allowed to use the court when they so desire. The ground will be leveled off and resurfaced so as to make an ideal playing floor.

Tennis is a game in which a number of the Elks are proficient and it is likely that a number of tournaments will be run off during the summer months. Every effort is being made to complete the job as soon as possible.

FORTY-TWO RUNS IN GAME WON BY ALL STAR TEAM

DILTS SLATED TO PITCH AGAINST CRANFORD HIGH

North Plainfield High School is due to break into the win column tomorrow afternoon when it lines up against Cranford High School on Hyde Field. The boroughites are determined to obtain their first victory after having dipped their colors in their first three contests.

Dilts will start the game in the pitching box, and the way the borough captain is twirling this season does not warrant well for his opponents. The team will present the same line-up that weathered the previous contests, the game comat 3:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Rushmore and family left today for their country home, "Brighthouse," Hudson, N. Y., where they will spend Easter and the following week.

Mrs. E. Melick, of West Fourth street, who is detained at her home by illness, is said to be improving.

BRILLIANT PROSPECTS FOR NATIONAL PASTIME GETTING BIG BOOST IN 1916

Prospects for a baseball season have never been so brilliant as in 1916. The country, especially those parts of it in which New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland are located, has never seen such prosperity.

St. Louis and Cincinnati are the only towns in the big leaguers that have not greatly benefitted by the war business. These cities, however, share in the general prosperity. Factories, the life of cities, and above all the life of baseball, are busy, working in shifts. Factory operatives are always the best patrons of baseball. With business brisk there are no "lay-offs" in the factories. Between shifts the operative can go to one place only—the baseball game. Every minute a man can work is demanded of him. There will be no vacations, "lay-offs," "lockouts," etc., in the factories this summer. All of which will operate to the great benefit of baseball.

There will be plenty of money in baseball in 1916. Money makes the game. With money coming in at the gate, money will be spent for good players, salaries, etc. The great crowds will inspire the players to great deeds. You must have great crowds to get great baseball.

The passing of the Federal League put a great many good players at the disposition of the National and American Leagues. Several weak teams have profited by the demise of the Federal League. McGraw, in New York, the great money-making town of baseball, got Raridan and Kauff from the Federals. These men make McGraw's Giants a contender, something they could not have been but for Federal League assistance.

New York could not have been a money-maker in 1916 had not McGraw got the stars of the Newark team. As it is the Giants will be contenders, and all visiting teams will make money in New York.

Thus two of the strongest teams in the National League, the best money-makers, have been made attractive by additions from the Federal fold. They could not have strengthened in any other way.

In the West, the St. Louis Browns have, through accessions from the Federal League, advanced from a hopeless position in the second division to pennant contenders. As they stood at the end of the season of 1915, the Browns were utterly without hope of gaining the first division in less than five years. The destruction of the Federal League and the accession of Fielder Jones, Borton, Davenport, Plank, Johnson, Hartley, Groom, Tobin and others have made a hopeless team a possible championship winner.

The Chicago Cubs have profitted by the amalgamation of the leagues and from a second-division team become contenders, for all the poor showing against the Phillies in Florida.

The New York Americans, another hopeless outfit, has been rescued from oblivion by the addition of Magee, Baker and Federal Leaguers. This means much money for visiting American League teams in New York.

Add to the foregoing that after a period of anarchy, during which managers had no control over players, discipline has been restored to the ranks of professional baseball.

To this plea add that all teams have experienced an unusually favorable spring while training and are in excellent condition. Then you will find that all signs point to the most successful year professional baseball has ever known.

Further, it may be said that the races in both the National and American Leagues are of the most open sort. The National League was so evenly balanced in 1915 that the addition of a good player or two was enough to give a team a chance to rise from eighth to first place.

P. H. S. AT NEW BRUNSWICK.

Coach Patch will take the entire Plainfield High School baseball squad to New Brunswick tomorrow afternoon, when the High School at that place is tackled. RUTGERS IN TENNIS TIE.

Rutgers and Georgetown tied in a tennis match at New Brunswick yesterday afternoon by a score of 3 to 3. This was the first appearance of the Rutgers team, and they showed the lack of practice. They were unable to place their shots accurately, but they played a strong smashing game at the net. Each team took one set in the doubles, and they also broke even in the singles. Lee Childs, the Rutgers captain, was the star of the contest.

NEXT MOVE IS UP TO BERLIN

Pessimism Seems to Prevail In Capital.

GERMAN ENVOY CONFIDENT

Feeling In Washington Is Kaiser Will Not Accept Terms—Another Neutral Ship Is Reported Sunk—Wilson and Congressmen Swamped by Protests From Teutonic Citizens.

GERARD DELIVERS PRESIDENT'S NOTE.

Berlin, April 21.—Ambassador Gerard has delivered the American note to the Berlin foreign office, and it is expected that Foreign Secretary von Jagow delivered it promptly.

After going over the translation carefully Ambassador Gerard obtained an immediate appointment and motored to the foreign office.

The newspapers announced that Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg has started for the front to spend Easter with the kaiser. It is assumed that the American situation will be discussed at this meeting and Germany's decision on the ultimatum of the United States practically framed.

Washington, April 21.—All eyes in Washington are now turned toward Berlin. The severance of diplomatic relations are dependent upon Germany's next move.

How will the German government receive President Wilson's demand that present methods of submarine warfare be immediately abandoned? Will Germany accept the demand, reject it or offer to compromise? Would the president consider a compromise? Is the diplomatic break, followed possibly by more serious consequences, inevitable?

The fear that the submarine controversy has now reached a stage where it cannot be diplomatically adjusted has gathered strength.

Commendation and Protests.

President Wilson received hundreds of telegrams commending him for his firm stand in defense of American rights. Members of congress were besieged by telegrams urging them to avoid war or anything that might lead to war.

William J. Bryan, with the peace and arbitration propaganda, arrived in Washington and immediately began working with congress leaders in an effort to stir up feeling against more serious developments in the German situation.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, is probably the one man in Washington who can predict with any accuracy what the action of the German foreign office may be. He is understood to believe it is an even guess whether diplomatic relations are severed. But this opinion is based on the assumption that President Wilson will not insist on the abandonment of Germany's submarine warfare against merchantmen, provided that Germany makes a satisfactory offer to compromise.

In official quarters, where the president's stand is looked on as unequivocal and the president's demand regarded as final and unyielding, the prospects of adjustment are considered remote indeed.

Nothing short of an immediate abandonment of Germany's submarine campaign against merchantmen, as it has been conducted since the beginning of the war, will satisfy the president, it is stated. According to high authority, the president means that submarines must give up every evasion of international law when he says that "present methods" must be abandoned.

For Visit and Search.

"German submarines, if they conduct war against commerce carriers, must conduct it just as cruisers or other ships of war are permitted to conduct it by the laws of nations," this high official states. "That is to say, they must henceforth follow the rule of visit and search before sinking a merchant ship and provide for the safety of the crew and passengers."

"Would the president be satisfied with a promise from Germany to refrain from sinking ships without warning and to give time for the crew to take to the boats?" was asked.

"No," was the emphatic reply, "not unless the submarine followed the visit and search rule and abided by the recognized laws of nations, which prescribe under what circumstances and within what limits a warship may capture or destroy a merchantman."

Both President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing are understood to regard it as impossible for a German submarine to fulfill these requirements, and therefore the president is convinced that abandonment of Germany's submarine warfare against merchantmen is imperative. But if Germany wishes to use her submarine as she would use cruisers and abide by the rules of cruiser warfare the United States would have no right to object, it was explained. It was added, however, that Germany doubtless realizes that the employment of submarines for this kind of work is out of the question.

Bernstorff Asks For Time.

Secretary Lansing was informed by Count von Bernstorff that an immediate reply by Germany to the president's demand was not to be expected. It probably would be ten days or more before the Berlin government would reply, Mr. Lansing was told. The ambassador explained that the president's note after it is delivered to the foreign office probably would not be given official consideration by the imperial government before next Tuesday.

He further explained to Secretary Lansing that Germany could not be expected to make an immediate reply to any question involving such a change of policy. The German foreign office would insist on its right to give thoughtful consideration to a subject of this importance and would not agree to be hurried in arriving at its decision, he said.

While the state department was getting its first information of Germany's unwillingness to be hurried word came of the sinking of another vessel, presumably by a submarine. Details were lacking. Secretary Lansing had only heard from an official report of an American consul that the Norwegian ship Teagivecken, bound from Galveston, had been sunk four miles off the mouth of the Tagus. No lives were lost.

Ambassador Confident.

Count von Bernstorff remained in conference with Secretary Lansing for nearly half an hour. The ambassador was in confident mood and showed none of the deep concern he manifested previously. He arrived at the diplomatic room of the state department almost simultaneously with Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador. It took all the diplomacy of Eddie Savoy, Secretary Lansing's veteran colored messenger, to prevent an embarrassing meeting.

Count von Bernstorff emerged from Mr. Lansing's office smiling and in good humor. He declined to discuss the conversation he had had in any way. Before seeing Mr. Lansing he had conferred with Counselor Polk of the state department relative to the case of Wolfe von Igel of the embassy staff, whose arrest in New York had brought an emphatic protest from the German government.

New York, April 21.—An expert mechanic's well considered plans to blow up the federal building and police headquarters in this city, the Welland canal and munitions factories at St. Catharines, Ont., and other towns in Canada and the United States were frustrated when Harry L. Newton was arrested at Grand street and the Bowery by Detective Sergeant Barnitz.

Newton, who is forty-two years old and a citizen of the United States, had so thoroughly committed himself in conversation with Barnitz, who had been dickering with him in the pretended capacity of a German secret agent, that he did not hesitate to make a confession to Captain Thomas Tunney at police headquarters after his arrest.

The defendants contended that they were forced to be present at Columbus, having been impressed by Villa into his ranks.

Answer Your Telephone Promptly

One habit that will do much to help improve the quality of your telephone service is the habit of answering your telephone promptly.

Records show that in about 25% of the cases where there is a delay of more than a minute before the called party answers, the party calling does not wait. Delays in answering the telephone may therefore mean losses.

To help yourself and others to receive a better quality of telephone service, why not make it an invariable rule to answer your telephone promptly?

"How Shall We Escape"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

Text, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation?"—Heb. 2:3.

There are a lot of people who would like to be religious mugwumps, but Jesus said, "No, sir, you'll have to be out and out for Me and not ashamed of Me, or I'll count you on the other side. He that is not with Me is against Me," he says.

A man said to me the other day, "It's too bad that so many people will persist in going to hell." Yes, it is too bad, but one thing is sure, if a man will not go to heaven, there is no other place for him to go but hell.

You are saved or you are lost, and you will be. There's no half way house for people who are too good to go to hell and just a little too bad to go to heaven.

Now, if you are lost tonight, there's a reason for it. If you have lived your life through and come to this night without God and without hope in the world, there's a reason for it and a just one.

It is this reason that brings to my mind a passage of scripture that ought to startle every unsaved man into a sense of your great peril when you hear it.

The scripture is written in the form of a question and it's a hard question to answer. I stood yesterday in the workshop of an electrician and he told me many things. He spoke about volts, kilowatts and amperes, polarizaztion and other things mysterious to me, but he could not give the answer to the question of my text.

I sat in the office of a prominent physician a little while ago and he talked about therapeutics, about gangenesis, anaesthesia, materia medica, and told me things I never knew before, but when I put to him the question of my text, he sat as one dumb before me.

I could tak with your eminent lawyers and they could tell me all about the codes and statutes, about organic law and international law, but they could not answer the question of my text. And I could do the same with any man of any other profession.

No Answer Here.

Then if weary with the ignorance of men I could take the wings of the morning and fly to the place of the presence of the throne of God, the Lord God of heaven would say: "There is no answer here." And if the Lord God commissioned an angel messenger to wing his flight to that far off place of outer darkness, that angel might go and stand before the bars that shut in the lost to their eternal imprisonment; he could read upon their faces the literature of eternal despair, could hear their groans and sighs, the weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth, but his journey would be in vain and he would fly back to the throne of God, sit down and fold his wings like a tired dove, and I'd have to come back from the eternal world to this meeting and have no answer to the question of the text. There is no answer to it. It may seem like a paradox, but it is true.

You will find my text in Hebrews 2:3, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation?" We can't escape; there is no way to escape if we neglect it.

The Bible calls it a great salvation and it is. If I had a million years to talk, I could not exhaust the theme of its greatness. There are reasons upon reasons why it is great.

Great in its Origin.

Great in its Development, and

Great in its Consummation.

But of all the reasons why it is great, the greatest to me are these:

Great because of what it saves us from, and

I have a friend who was saved from a life of very great sin through Jesus Christ. One day walking down the street he noticed a lady drop her handkerchief. He was almost twenty feet behind and when he picked it up he saw it was a fine piece of Venetian lace. It was worth $30 and the devil said: "It is yours, don't be fool enough to give it back," and he ran up and said: "Lady, please, you dropped your handkerchief," and then he turned and said: "Ha, ha, Mr. Devil, I beat you that time."

That's what I mean by being saved from sin. "But," you say, "that would be no temptation to me." No, but you've been tempted in other directions and went down.

Saves from Hell.

Second: It saves you from hell in the next life.

A good many people try to comfort themselves in the thought that those awful descriptions of hell in the Bible are metaphorical and figurative. I don't know whether they are or not; I'm inclined to think that way myself; but if I know anything about a metaphor it can never, never, approximate the reality it seeks to describe and you had better stay out.

In the next place this salvation is great because of what it saves you to. It would be impossible to tell all, but

Second. It saves you to a life of pure and abiding peace. If you are not a Christian you do not have peace of mind nor rest in your heart.

Third.—It saves you to a life of the only genuine happiness. Someone has said: "The devil has no happy old people." He has some younger people who think they're having a good old time, but you've never tasted of the fruit that grows on the tree of life, and some day you'll see your mistake.

Fourth. It saves you to a life that's eternal. "Eye has not seen nor ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the things that God hath laid up for them that love Him."

Now, it's just the greatness of this salvation that makes two other words in the text rise up from the very page when you read them. One of them is the word "escape;" and it forces your mind in spite of you back to the thought of a moment ago that there is after all something to escape from. If there isn't, it's queer that Almighty God should tell us to flee from the wrath to come if there is no coming wrath from which to flee. The religion of Jesus Christ was never meant primarily to keep a man out of hell; it was meant to keep hell out of the man, and to put heaven into his soul rather than to put his soul into heaven; but there is another world just the same, and it's heaven or hell for every man who goes into it, and we're all going, for "It is appointed unto man once to die, and after that the judgment."

Don't Like Doctrine.

This is one of those verses that infidels and free thinkers and sinners don't like. They don't like the doctrine of retribution for sin and so they say they don't believe in it, as though that made any difference. What do you suppose God Almighty cares anyhow for what you believe. It's a pity He couldn't have had you around to confer with your stupendous intellect when He laid His plans for the universe and decided how to run it. Paul says there are some who do not believe. But what of it, He says: "Does this unbelief make the gospel of no effect?"

A man said to me: "I guess it's all right if a man's sincere in what he believes." But that's nonsense. An Irishman caught a bumblebee, but he dropped it. He said: "It's a purty bird, but it's got a hot tail." Your ignorance or your belief don't change a law of nature. You might believe in slavery—some people do—but the law don't apologize to you for saying that nowhere in all this free land or where Old Glory floats as the sovereign emblem shall the sun rise or set upon a slave. You might be the shrewdest lawyer in the land, but if your opinion is legally wrong it cuts no ice with the court.

But you say: "Haven't some scholarly ministers given it up?" Yes, a few of them, but what of that? That don't make any difference. Scholarly ministers have done things, too, but that don't make it right. But you can be sure of one thing—they never give up their belief in hell because of anything they found in the Word of God. Some think it's an evidence of big brains to question the things in the revelation of God, but say, if you ever appear like an ass it's when you trot out your little four by five cheese box intellect and match it up against the revealed wisdom of God who made you. If opinions could be weighed I would not give an ounce of the revealed Word of God for a thousand tons of the opinions of men. Some of you've got an idea that you can go through the Word of God and eliminate whatever don't coincide with the opinion of your own self-estimated stupendous and collossal intellect, but you'd better be careful how you blue pencil the Word of God.

Would Deny God's Rights.

I sometimes feel like it's hardly worth while to justify God's Word and defend His government against the attacks of Nihilists and Theists and rebel unbelievers who would deny God's right to punish and would tear down His throne and allow sinful men to do as they pleased and believe there will be no reckoning in the life to come. And yet, just because some of these spiritual speculations are so insinuating and some of this infidel sophistry is a good thing occasionally just to show it up to see how damnably fallacious it really is.

I wish there were no Hell. And, oh, how God does wish it. "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die," He cried. But if men choose to reject Jesus Christ and go on in sin, it is for the glory of God and for the good of the universe that man suffers for his sin when it is done, just as much as it is for the glory of the state and the good of society that the law breakers be confined in jail and punished here.

You come along and say: "God is too good to permit a man to be damned in the life to come." All right, then, let us apply this same ethics to our own government.

They tell us that there are 200,000 men and women incarcerated behind the bars of our American prisons. These are the vicious and vile, the men and women of uncontrolled passion, murderers, thieves, debauchers, destroyers of virtue, brutal thugs, reprobates and the vicious in nature of every kind. Let us now emulate what you conceive to be the character of divine government and throw open our jails and penitentiaries and turn loose upon society this horde of moral vandals who defy the laws of God and man. But you cry: "No, the sanctity of my home, the safety of my property and life are at stake." Such anarchy of government, you declare, we never could survive. And yet the very thing you decry as ruinous to your own government you foist upon God as the thing He must do to claim your reverence and allegiance.

I don't want to preach a lie. I'd rather preach an unpleasant truth, and I have no desire to be any broader than Jesus was broad. And harken, ye despisers of grace and ye triflers with mercy.

Neglect, Prime Minister.

How shall we escape if we neglect?

Neglect! Neglect! Neglect! Thou prime minister of the bottomless pit! Thou hast damned every soul in the infernal regions tonight. If it had not been for thee the fires of hell would never have been kindled. If it had not been for thee the fanged hounds of conscience would never have been unleashed upon the barren wilds of that dread underworld to sting and burn the soul of those eternally condemned. If it had not been for thee no wail of the lost would ever have been echoed along the desolate shores of that lurid lake whose burnings never cease, where demons dance and mock, where no light ever enters and no star of hope ever shines. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

When all hell had assembled, Satan arose and, with revenge deep stamped upon his brow, called for advice how best to damn the souls of earth. One of the demons arose with fiendish laugh and said: "I'll go and do the work; I'll go and tell them not to make fools of themselves; that there is no God, no heaven, no hell, and that the Bible is all a fable and is not divinely appointed of God." And all hell rang with acclamation. But Satan, wisest of them all, said: "No, few people would believe such a thing like that; the fool hath said in his heart there is no God." Then up rose another imp and said: "Let me go; I'll tell them there is a God and a heaven, but there is no hell; that Jesus Christ was the best man that ever lived, but only a man and not divine; that the Bible has much truth in it, but like other books, is in error on certain things, and I will tell them that people can eat, drink and be merry and when they die, God, in His mercy, will save them all anyhow," and all the devils cheered, and Satan, the archfiend, said to the imp: "No, you must not go, you might find a few who would try to believe in what you say, but most men will never believe in a thing like that. Sit down!" And then a third arose, more fiendish than the others, and said: "Let me go and I'll do the work. I'll tell them the Bible is true, and that there is a God, a heaven, a hell, and a Saviour from it, and that upon their disposition of Him on earth will depend His disposition of them in the coming world." "Hold! Hold!" cried Satan and all the devils. "Will you preach the very thing we hate and try to overthrow?" "But," said the fiend, "I have not finished; I will quietly say to each one as he thinks upon the subject: 'There is plenty of time, put it off; wait until tomorrow,' and the chorus of demons broke out in thundering hurrahs while Satan shouted: "Go! Go! Go" and that emissary of the evil world has been busy from that day to this and he has come into this place of decision tonight, whispering to this one of the morning of life, and to this one bowed with years: "Put it off—put it off; there's time enough yet; tomorrow will be even as today"; while the Word of God the Spirit of God, the providence of God, the minister of God and the people of God, all unite in saying: "Now is the day of salvation."

At Your Peril.

If you neglect anything you ought to do, you do so at your peril. There are laws that regulate health of your body, the condition of your mind, the development of your character and the safety of your soul, and if you neglect these laws, don't expect them to apologize to your for the calamity you bring upon yourself.

And it is so with the great salvation thrown out to you through Jesus Christ. You need not be guilty of gross immoralities; you need not mock at virtues and wallow in debauchery until your body rots with unmentionable diseases. You need not curse and rail at Jesus who came to save you; you need not damn the church nor revile the preacher; simply neglect so great salvation and you will not be able to escape.

I know men who are so troubled they cannot sleep at night; so troubled they cannot attend to business in the daytime. I have seen men in this meeting turn pale and take hold of the seat in front of them; I have seen the tears go down their cheeks and yet they will not yield. "How shall we escape if we neglect salvation?"

Listen now, my friends' you've heard a thousand sermons and you have had a thousand chances and you're here again tonight with the damnation of God upon you, and some day the flood will come—the flood of God's wrath which must follow in the wake of your sin when it is finished. How shall we escape if we neglect? People, I beseech you tonight to give up your sin; give up your unbelief; give up your indifference to Jesus Christ; get your arms around your loved ones and come with them into the kingdom of heaven. All hell is holding you back and all heaven is cheering you on. Will you come?

The pupils of the Plainfield High School received a treat yesterday morning when the Biederwolf party was present. The trio sang that beautiful selection, "Praise Ye," from Atilla. "Mac" was there, too, and sang a solo, an arrangement of the Sextet from Lucia.

Mrs. Brake told an interesting story.

Dr. Biederwolf's talk on "Life" was a very interesting one in which he entreated the pupils to hold to their convictions.

The afternoon meeting in the Tabernacle, at which Dr. Biederwolf spoke on "The Smoothest Man in the Bible," was the first of the afternoon meetings and proved to be very interesting and helpful.

Last night was indeed "Patriotic Night" as anyone who was present will vouchsafe. At five minutes of eight the Dutch Arms Band started up the march and led the old veterans of the Civil War and the Boy Scouts into the Tabernacle amid great applause and rousing cheers.

As soon as the delegations were seated the National Male Quartet rendered a patriotic song, "The Old Flag Never Touched the Ground." Mr. Roberts is still nursing his throat and therefore gave Assemblyman William N. Runyon a chance to sing the second bass in his place.

Last night was the night which had been selected as "Birthday Night." That is, the night when all those present were expected to give a penny for every year they have been living. There were a few one dollar bills in the pans. We didn't know we had so many centenarians in Plainfield.

The chorus choir was right there too when it came to their part in the program. The flutter of the red, white and blue handkerchiefs, and the huge American flag, which was the size of the whole choir loft, when shown in their proper time, combined with the singing of "The Red, White and Blue," and "The Star Spangled Banner" made every drop of patriotic blood in the veins of the audience tingle at the grand spectacle.

As the names of the delegations which were present were called by Mr. McEwan cheers and applause followed the mention of each of the organizations. Dr. Biederwolf made special comment and extended words of welcome to the Boy Scouts, the Camp-Fire Girls of the Park Avenue Baptist church, the C. F. G. of Bethel chapel, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Women's Relief Corps and the Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R. The last named organization received especial attention from the evangelist as he gave them a short talk.

Tonight delegations of the Men's and Women's Adult Bible Classes will be present at the Tabernacle service.

Tomorrow afternoon the children will start to parade at 2:30 from Watchung avenue and Seventh street to the Tabernacle, where a special service will be held for them. Dr. Biederwolf will be present and will talk to them.

Judge Runyon came in strong with his deep bass voice. Mr. Roberts had better keep his eye on the Judge.

Tomorrow night Dr. Biederwolf will preach his first booze sermon on "The Whiskey Jug." The W. C. T. U. will be there in a delegation.

One of the most inspiring sights to be witnessed in the great Tabernacle meetings is to watch the faces of those who come forward either for the first time or to reconsecrate their lives to their Lord and Master Jesus Christ. One cannot help being impressed when they see mother bringing grown sons, and daughters or husbands. Sometimes a whole family come together. Very often friend brings friend and other times you see a man or woman, boy or girl come down alone.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates you feeling fit day in and day out, and you can eat anything afterwards, cannot salivate, for it is harmless, it is inexpensive and almost tastementary canal before putting more bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweet- a quarter pound, which is sufficient phate in it, to wash from the liver less, and any pharmacist will sell you and bowels the previous day's indistrict the diet like calomel, because it gestible material, the poisons, sour

FITZ, JR., NOW DETERMINED TO SEEK HIS FATHER'S LOST HONORS IN PRIZE RING

Bob Fitzsimmons, Jr., much talked of in pugilistic circles as a possible seeker of his father's lost laurels, is primed for his first ring combat, it being apparent this time that he really intends to break into the ring game. It is said that a Dunellen syndicate of sporting men is backing him in the move and is prepared to stack him against the best there is in the game today.

A good-looking, clean-cut, husky Young Bob carries none of the distinguished characteristics of the pugilist, but he is the pride of his many acquaintances hereabouts. At first blush you'd say he was of the type of youth any football coach would welcome with open arms for service in the backfield.

This big boy in few ways resembles his battle-scarred parent. You remember the Cornishman's skinny legs. His son has huge thighs and thick calves. His torso is larger and his head rounder and more clean cut, while his face is plumper and more pleasing. This can't be the son of Old Bob, you tell yourself. His shoulders remind you of his dad's. The son has ruby hair; also blue eyes, other characteristics of the former champion.

"I am not entering the boxing game because I love it," said Young Bob, at his quarters in Wollaston, Mass. "I don't know why I took it up unless it was I heard the call of the ring. It was in my blood I guess. My father never advised me to follow his steps. When I was 16, father told me the good and bad sides of boxing as a profession.

"For months I deliberated my course. Finally I asked him to take me on the road as sparring partner. I saw many of the so-called white hopes, and right now I believe I can lick any of the present-day stars. I can beat father, and he certainly could stop either Willard or Moran, old as he is today."

Young Bob simply has to win the heavyweight title. No second-rater could he be with the memory of his father's ring career constantly before him.

Seven years of unremitting self-denial preceded Young Bob's announcement that he was ready to battle the big guns. His father was a strict trainer. No tobacco, no liquors—training, training, boxing lessons every day, terrific pummelling of his young head and body was his lot, and ever before him the question::

"Will I make good?"

Old Bob says the "chip" will deliver.

DRAWING ROOM MEETING.

A drawing room meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Heeley, 331 West Eighth street, this morning. A feature of the service was the singing of the quartet, with Judge Runyon taking the place of Mr. Roberts, who is still hoarse. Dr. Peterson and Mr. McEwan went to Dunellen and Scotch Plains and held short services during the morning.

PLAINFIELD LISTED IN JERSEY SECTION

Divisions Named for Women's Met Golf Competition This Spring.

Carrying out the policy of the present administration, twenty-seven clubs will be represented in the team championship of the metropolitan district held by the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association. When Mrs. F. E. O'Donohoe, the President of the W. M. S. A., took office recently, she said that the encouragement of team competition would mark the women's golf season in the metropolitan district this year, and the long list of scheduled team contests more than bears out her statements.

The teams will first compete in sections, the New Jersey, Westchester and Long Island clubs struggling for the championship of their respective divisions, with the winners to meet later for the metropolitan team title.

New Jersey has the largest representation with eleven clubs; Westchester is second with eight clubs, and Long Island has six, but the two Staten Island clubs, Fox Hills and Richmond County, will compete in the Long Island division. Each team will play home and home matches with all the other clubs in its section, and the team with the best average will meet the winners of the other sections. The contests begin on May 3, and continue to the middle of September.

The clubs which have entered teams in the sectional contests are:

Long Island—Piping Rock, Westbrook, Nassau, South Shore, Great Neck and Woodmere.

Staten Island—Fox Hills and Richmond County.

Want to become a successful boxer? Take a tip from Chick Maglione, Akron (O.) lightweight, and try your hand at shoe shining. Chick is eighteen years of age and for the past eight years has been polishing footwear. None of the boys he has beaten to date are first raters, but Chick is a comer.

"If you want to develop your arms and shoulders for boxing there's nothing better than a job in a shoe shining shop," says Maglione.

EDDIE TEN EYCK TO COACH.

"Young Jim" Ten Eyck, for four years the coach of the Duluth Boat club, recently resigned his position for business reasons, and his place has been occupied by his brother, Edward Hanlan Ten Eyck, twice winner of the national championship single sculls and winner of the Diamond sculls over the Henley course on the Thames.

In the four years that "Young Jim" coached the Duluth Boat club he made a remarkable record, bringing a practically unknown western club to the leadership of American amateur rowing and winning forty-eight out of a possible fifty-one individual prizes at the national regatta at Springfield last August.

Edward Hanlan Ten Eyck is better known as an oarsman than as an instructor, but he held the position of coach to the University of Wisconsin some years ago, giving it up because of lack of interest on the part of the undergraduates. "Old Jim" Ten Eyck, father of the boys, is still the active coach at Syracuse, and his father, who started the rowing fame of the family, is still alive and hearty at the age of ninety-six.

BUDD DOBLE WILL RETIRE.

Pop Geers Will Be Dean of the Drivers of Harness Horses.

The announcement was made recently that Budd Doble, the famous harness horse driver, would retire, never again to drive a horse in a race. This leaves Pop Geers as the dean of the drivers. When Geers quits, Cox, Murphy, McDonald and a few others will move up to make room for future stars.

Doble recalls the days of Goldsmith Maid, Nancy Hanks and Dexter, or the period between 1867 and 1892. These horses made their records with the old high wheel sulky and iron tires. It is claimed, and it is probably true, that Doble won over $1,000,000 during his career on the turf. Doble is now seventy-five years old and, while still in good health, thinks that the time has arrived for him to retire from training. In recent years he has been manager of the Hemet stock farm in California. During Doble's long career there was never a breath of scandal connected with his driving.

GANDIL DELIGHTED WITH JOB.

Clevelanders Need Not Worry About His Bum Knee.

Chick Gandil, now a' Cleveland Nap, is quoted as saying:

"Clevelanders need not worry about my having a bum knee. I did not miss a game in 1912, only seven in 1913, only nine in 1914, and only eighteen last season, a total of thirty-four in four years. That is not a bad record. Incidentally, I never missed a game that my club played in Cleveland."

Gandil might have gone further and informed the public that he has batted .335 in the forty-six games he has played in Cleveland as a member of the Washington team. The fact that he always has batted so well in the Cleveland park is said to be one reason he wanted to join the Indians and thus have a chance to bat in seventy-seven games there.

Crawford Has Cast Iron Contract.

Sam Crawford has a cast iron contract that does not expire until the end of 1917. If the veteran should fall down in his work in the meantime he would get his money just the same, but Sam has not shown any signs of old age yet.

P. H. S. WALLOPED THE COIN CHASERS

Bankers No Match for Slugging Schoolboys This Morning.

In a game on Parker Field this morning the Plainfield High School ball tossers beat the Plainfield bank clerks by a score of 16 to 2. The fracas went five frames, but in that time the High School youngsters knocked Denny from the mound and mauled Waller freely. Eder had the Indian sign on the clerks during the three innings he was in and let them have but one clean hit.

Denny was dented for two three-baggers and two two-baggers besides three singles in the first inning. Six more runs came across in the second session and one more in the third before the bankers managed to make their only two counters in the fourth.

The score:

THE HOME MAKERS

47 MARKET ST. NEWARK, N. J.

47 Market Street

This is not an announcement of our FORMAL OPENING, of which you will be given ample advance notice in a very short time, but to acquaint our friends and patrons as to where we may be found.

The best laid plans of times go wrong, and so they have, with the Formal Opening of our New Store, necessity forced us to move in HERE before alteration work was completed. The facts in the case are these:

We had hoped to continue at the old stand until the new home was completed, but a faulty roof, that leaks like a sieve, forced us to bring our REMOVAL SALE at 74-76 Market Street to an abrupt close last Monday night.

We have too much regard for our old friends' comfort to ask them to visit us after we had been flooded—consequently we quickly transferred our force to No. 47, where, although not completely ready, a most hearty welcome awaits you.

*New Goods are arriving daily—the pick of the world's best—for you can rest assured that every article that finds place on our floors at 47 MARKET STREET is new—A Guaranteed 1916 Purchase.

Everything remaining at 74-76 Market Street, at the close of our removal Sale last Monday night, was turned over to the Auctioneer—for as we told you in the beginning, not one dollar's worth of old goods would be moved to our new location.

We crave your indulgence a few days longer, for our formal opening, announcement of which will soon appear—watch for it—it will be worth your while. In the mean time we will be glad to see all of our friends, and assure them a most cordial welcome.

by the groom and his best man, Julius Ford, of New York. The bride, gowned in a white crepe de chine, trimmed with satin and wearing the conventional veil, entered with her brother, Frank, who gave her away. The bride carried a beautiful bouquet of tulips, sweet peas and lillies. The last of the bridal party to enter were Miss Ida Collims, of Brooklyn, maid of honor, wearing a pink satin dress, trimmed with georgette crepe and Miss Estella Jackson, of Virginia, bridesmaid, attired in a blue crepe de chine dress trimmed with black velvet. Both carried bouquets of white carnations.

That the bride was popular was shown by the large number of persons from both races in this city, and the many friends and relatives from out of town that witnessed the marriage, many of whom enjoyed the wedding dinner, given by Mrs. Mary McPherson at her home, 815 Richmond street, in honor of her daughter. The well-rendered music at the dinner added much to the enjoyment of all.

TWO FIRE ALARMS SENT IN WITHIN SHORT TIME

While the engine from fire headquarters was answering an alarm from 715 Prospect avenue shortly before noon today another alarm came in from Front street, near the corner of Park avenue. The Prospect street call was for burning grass and the second alarm, which was answered by the chemical wagon, was sent in because of burning papers in the rear of store buildings. The papers had been set on fire by children. There was no damage at either blaze.

"Barbers" Led all the Way—Pinochle Cup Won Last Night.

The North Plainfield pinochle tournament ended last evening with the Domino Club taking two games out of three from the Republican Club and the Firemen taking the same number of games from Gaub's Barbershop. The results of last evening's contests failed to change the standi g of the teams, which follows, with the percentage of games won:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Gaub's Barbership	21	15	.585
Republican Club	19	17	.526
Firemen	17	19	.472
Domino Club	16	20	.444

The winning club will receive a handsome silver loving cup offered by W. G. Debele, the president of the Domino Club. The members of the winning team are: David Allen, captain; J. Walker, William Daley, Dr. Harry Cook and Edward Gaub. Their names will be engraved on the cup. Considerable interest was displayed in the tournament, and it is quite likely that another one will be run in the near future. The team representing the tonsorial shop led all the way.

HONOR THE MEMORY OF PROF. JAMES M. GREGORY

Bordentown, April 21.—Exercises in honor of the memory of the late Professor James M. Gregory were held this afternoon at the Manual Traning and Industrial School for Colored Youth, of which he was the founder and first principal. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, president of the State Board of Education, presided, and other members of the Board were present.

The exercises commenced with a chorus by the school, followed by the invocation by the Rev. R. W. A. Palmer, of Mount Holly. The choir sang an anthem, after which Senator Frelinghuysen delivered his introductory address. Remarks were made by George A. Douglass, of Newark, and Christopher J. Perry, of Philadelphia. The Girls' Glee Club sang an anthem, and an address was delivered by William F. Powell, of Camden.

After remarks by Professor A. L. Locke, of Howard University, Miss Evelyn Fogg sang "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth." The work of the school was reviewed by Colonel Stuart Craven, of Salem, chairman of the committee. The Rev. Bishop Coppin made an address, and remarks were made by Mrs. Mary H. Docke, and Reuben Ross. The Girls' Glee Club sang a chorus, after which a life sized portrait of Professor Gregory, the gift of the family, was presented to the school by Dr. William A. Sinclair. An anthem and the benediction ended the exercises.

great need for additional inspectors, as well as a nurse to visit homes throughout the city and instruct mothers in the care of their children. The education of the public he considered to be most important at present. He said that the infant mortality here, which is 1.10 out of 1,000 under one year of age, is extremely high. He cited Montclair and the Oranges as having model health departments and hoped that Plainfield would soon get into that class.

It was also learned through Dr. Corbusier's remarks that employes of the local health department are being trained in New York for their duties here, and naturally when they become proficient it will be impossible to keep them here unless their compensation is made adequate.

The tax budget was displayed on a long piece of cloth which was placed on the side of the wall where all persons present could easily see the figures. Among those in attendance were Mrs. J. M. Charles and Mrs. Frederick Goddard, representing the Visiting Nurse Association and they were greatly interested in the proceedings.

SEND ENGLAND A NOTE SAYS MARTINE

Plainfield Senator Believes Wilson Should Write Another Ultimatum.

That America should sent a note to England fully as strong as the one delivered to the Imperial German Government yesterday, is the belief of Sen. James E. Martine, of Plainfield, as quoted in an interview in the New York American of today. Sen. Martine's statement follows:

"I feel that we might with justification press our demands on Great Britain with almost as much force and right as we have pressed them on Germany.

"Great Britain has violated international understandings and laws that were supposed to govern nations on the high seas. Hence, I feel that we should not make fish of one and fowl of the other.

"I realize that in submarine attacks Great Britain has not been as active and violent as Germany has been, but both to my mind should be brought to an understanding with the United States.

"I do not think the severance of diplomatic relations would result in war. It has generally led to war, but I do not believe this necessarily should be the case.

"I have so much faith in the intelligence and fairness of the great German people that I believe they will realize the unfairness of their position, and that our difference will be harmonized without strife or bloodshed.

"God knows I do not want war and it will be the last of my thoughts and votes to bring it about.

"I think the Senate would be averse to declaring war. I feel it would insist that conditions would have to be much more aggravated.

"War would mean primarily the severance of so many ties of relationship by which we are bound to foreign lands and the breaking and bleeding of hearts; the sacrifice of myriads of lives and millions of treasure; the stagnation of every industry in our land, and the prostration that necessarily would follow the great accumulation of debts that must necessarily ensue.

"All would combine a picture of horrors too sad to contemplate.

"I do not feel the country would justify Congress in going to war with Germany for the present reasons.

"I feel that the American Government's mission is to stand for justice, humanity and peace, and humanity has no relation to war. I feel that to declare war would be to take a step backward in our civilization and boasted Christianity."

VILLA PURSUIT MAY BE BLOCKED

Carranza Troops Are Being Rushed to Parral.

MAY STOP ADVANCE OF U. S.

Massing of Troops South of American Expedition Is Viewed as a Virtual Threat Not to Proceed — Belief Becomes Stronger That Villa Is Still Alive.

Washington, April 21.—The Carranza military authorities at Chihuahua, the state department was advised, are massing 1,500 troops in the vicinity of Parral. This is supposed to be the first chief's means of backing up the warning given several days ago to General Pershing, commander of the American expedition, not to proceed any farther south than his advance columns are now located.

It was at Parral that the recent attack by Carranzista soldiers on American troops under Major Frank Tompkins took place.

According to reports to the department, the Mexican forces are being sent for the most part from the Carranza garrison at Chihuahua, although it is said the movement has been undertaken apparently without the knowledge or consent of General Carranza or War Minister Obregon.

This latter statement many officials consider merely as emphasizing the inability of Carranza to control his subordinate military commanders, rather than an indication that the Carranza government itself is any less determined to insist on a withdrawal of the American forces.

That anything like an immediate withdrawal is not being considered by the administration at this time was indicated by an announcement made by Secretary of War Baker that in addition to the eight new aeroplanes already contracted for by the department for service in Mexico four more Curtiss machines of greatly increased horsepower have been ordered, and the purchase of still another four is being considered. All sixteen machines would be for Mexican service.

Scott's Report Awaited.

It is regarded as likely that no final decision as to a withdrawal will be reached by the administration pending the special report which Major General Scott, chief of staff, will make following his arrival at San Antonio to confer with General Funston unless meantime there should be absolute proof received of the death of Villa.

In this connection officials of the administration are awaiting with interest the sequel to War Minister Obregon's announcement that an American military officer with two Mexican officers had inspected the grave where the bandit leader is reported to have been buried and to have interviewed an old Indian couple who attended the brigand during his dying hours.

As far as the war department knows no American officer has made any such investigation. While the state department is still withholding an answer to Carranza's formal note calling on the United States to treat with the Mexican government for a withdrawal of the expedition, information comes to the department from Mexico to the effect that the Felix Diaz movement for the overthrow of Carranza is growing in favor throughout Mexico.

The department is still without definite information, however, as to the whereabouts of Diaz or confirmation of the press reports that organized troops acting in his cause are operating in the south.

The war department is convinced not only that Villa is alive, but that he was present in Parral at the time the Carranza garrison attacked the American troops. That the garrison in that city as well as Carranza troops elsewhere in southern Chihuahua are at heart with Villa has been long thought in department quarters, and the conviction is expressed that the attack on Major Tompkins was a deliberate effort to prevent the bandit from being captured.

Must Enter Cities.

In this connection it is common feeling among members of the general staff that if through representations of Carranza the American government orders the American troops not to enter towns and cities the chase after the bandit might as well be abandoned.

Concerning the new aeroplanes purchased for the Mexican expedition, it was stated at the war department that, whereas the first batch of four machines now on the border have ninety horsepower engines and a carrying capacity each of two persons, the later machines ordered will have 160 horsepower engines and a carrying capacity of three persons and eighty gallons of gasoline. They will be particularly suitable for the high altitude work in Mexico, but, like the rest, will be unarmored and for reconnaissance purposes only.

COL DI LANA TAKEN.

Austrians Admit Loss of Portion Hotly Fought For.

London, April 21.—The capture of the summit of the Col di Lana by the Italians, announced by the Italian war office, is admitted by the Austrian war office. The Austrian statement says:

"The enemy was repulsed in the Val Sugana."

OF NO CONSEQUENCE.

The work-seeker's classified advertisement need not be a "regular letter," of course; but it should be a clear statement of facts about the business capabilities of the advertiser. It SHOULD give to a prospective employer a definite idea as to the probable fitness of the advertiser for the position sought.

State WHAT YOU CAN DO, what you have done, how well you can do the work you are seeking. If your "ad" is frank, concise, factful—if it indicates in the writer a clean-cut, forceful personality, it will get the attention of YOUR NEXT EMPLOYER!

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

With songs of gladsome praise and discourses from the pulpits extolling the Christ Jesus, Plainfield's churches will observe the Resurrection tomorrow. In nearly every instance the regular choir will be augmented by additional voices, while others will have instrumental assistance. 14,000 STRIKE AT WESTINGHOUSE SHOP

Big Electrical Plant Tied up—Situation is Considered Threatening.

STRIKE.

Pittsburgh, April 22.—The strike at the Westinghouse Electric plant is assuming a serious aspect. It is estimated that about 14,000 employes are now out. Only about 4,000 reported for work today. Officials of the company say that a large number of the employes who did not report are willing to work, but are being intimidated. The State constabularly is in the hard coal regions, and only the local police force of Turtle Creek is in evidence to handle the mob.

All Shops Are Closed.

Practically all the shops comprising the plant of the Westinghouse Electric Company are now closed There has so far been no unusual disturbance. Officials of the company say that they do not know officially what the men want, and point out that they received a 10 per cent. advance not long ago.

Springfield Also Affected.

Springfield, Mass, April 22.—The trouble among the employes of the Westinghouse Company, which has developed in Pittsburgh, extended to this city today, when the men at the East Springfield plant walked out.

Deputies Are Called.

Sheriff Richards, of Allegheny county and a large force of deputies have been called to the scene of the strike in the Westinghouse works.

PRIZES AWARDED IN BETTER BABY CONTEST

Honors Are Given at the Close of the Baby Welfare Exhibit Today.

The Better Baby Contest and Baby Welfare Exhibit at 521 West Third street closes today. Everyone interested in this work is grateful not only to the women of the Monday Afternoon Club who have given their time and services but also to the five doctors who have made it possible to carry on this contest, Dr. Murray, Dr. Cornwell, Dr. Pratt and Dr. Titsworth, who were kind in spending much time and skill in examining the babies. Eighty-one babies were entered in the contest and the large majority of them were in fine condition. It was almost impossible to pick out the ones who should have the prize. It took a great deal of time to determine which ones came nearest to the standard for health.

Of the 81 who were examined 4 babies were between the ages of 1 and 3 months, 9 babies were between the ages of 3 and 6 months; 16 babies were between the ages of 6 and 9 months, 19 babies were between the ages of 9 and 12 months, 23 babies were between the ages of 13 and 18 months, 10 babies were between the ages of 19 and 24 months.

The babies who won first prize, $5 in gold, were: George Peters, Fred Kliner, Charles Edward Dalby, Doris Elizabeth Gillespie.

The four who won second prize, $2.50 in gold, were: Susie Horowitz, Lillian Epstein, Ann Hennessey, Paul Grebsenson.

The third prize (complete outfit of clothing donated by Geoffrey Goddard) was won by Lilly Rosenberg. Those who won a blue ribbon were as follows: John Eodice, Frederick Cheshire, Nelson Grier, Helen Kline, William Bartle, Cornelius Corley, Neils Anderson, Walter Nickerson, Harry Zenzel, Elsa Richardson, Millicent Winters, Angeline La Costa, Alec Rollerson, Bertha Scruggs, Hanford Brown, Sylvia Adelman, Marion Stahl, Phyllis Smith, James Henderson, Dorothy Hoffman, Marion McCallum, Harry Demilt, Dora Dean, Walter Ulmer, Nan Chamberlain, Nicholas Pasco, Mary Gassert, Carlton Schuck, Patsy Diano.

ORDER TO HALT HUNT FOR VILLA

Mayor of Parral Dares U. S. Troops to Move Foot Further.

AWAIT REINFORCEMENT

Report That Villa Was Seen in California Being Investigated by Secret Service Men—More Fighting Mentioned in Private Despatches.

Washington, April 22.—The punitive expedition into Mexico has been halted. Washington admits that U. S. troops are stopped at Parral, camped just outside the city, and that Col. Brown, commander of the Tenth Cavalry, has received an order from the Mayor of Parral not to move one foot further south.

This does not mean that the hunt for Villa is ended. It will continue, according to Secretary Baker, but pending the arrival of reinforcements Col. Brown does not believe it would be safe to penetrate further into the hostile territory, where every able-bodied Mexican, Carranza soldier or not, is a Villa sympathizer, and he is awaiting not only reinforcements, but a strengthening of his line of communication over which all supplies, even water, must come.

More Fighting Reported.

El Paso, April 22.—That American and Mexican troops have been fighting again is reported here in several private despatches. The reports are that the battle took place near Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, two days ago. Gen. Funston has received no report of this rumored engagement.

Says He Saw Villa.

Los Angeles, April 22.—A report that Villa has been seen on the streets here is being investigated by secret service men. A man who formerly nursed wounded soldiers in Mexico and knows the bandit well, says that he saw him on the street this week and that he could not be mistaken as to his identity. The report is not believed, but every effort will be made to run down the Mexican leader if he is here.

Foreign Concessions Annulled.

New York, April 22.—A despatch from El Paso to the New York Times says a degree was issued today by General Calles, Governor of Sonora, declaring all foreign concessions and franchises annulled. This includes the concessions under which the great Cananea copper plant is operating. He also declares that no more remissions of taxes would be permitted. A conference has been called by Secretary Cabrera, of the Department of Finance, of all mining men regarding the increase of 100 per cent. in mine taxes, to take effect May 1.

NOVEL PLAN OF PAYING HOUSEHOLDER'S BILLS

In line with their constant effort to be of service to their patrons, The State Trust Campany has adopted a plan whereby they propose to pay their customers' household bills each month, charging the total to their account and doing away with all the bothersome detail that the householder experiences in paying from ten to thirty or more bills, monthly.

Under this plan the depositor sends The State Trust Company one check for the total of all the bills he or she wishes to pay, and they attend to the payment of the individual bills. In this connection they also propose to purchase commutation tickets for depositors, charging the amount to the depositor's account and delivering the ticket to the depositor a day or two before the first of the month, doing away with the inconvenience that he now experiences each time it is necessary to renew his ticket.

This is but another evidence of the fact that this progressive institution is constantly on the alert to find new methods by which it can serve its patrons.

WILLIAM JAMES, JR.

William James, Jr., colored, the seven-months'-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William James, of New Market, died at Muhlenberg Hospital this morning. The funeral will be held from the undertaking parlors of Geo. W. Cole & Son, of 200 West Second street, at 11 o'clock, Monday morning. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature recorded at the State Trust Company today was as follows: 9 a. m., 44 degrees; 11 a. m., 43 degrees, 12:30, 46 degrees.

Robert P. Skilling, the composer and producer of the comic operr, "The Mystic Rose," which is to be given in the Plainfield Theatre, under the auspices of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks on May first, second and third, has announced the names of those who will compose the Tea Girls, The Geisha Double Sextet, The Double Octet and The Boola Boola Boys. The "Dancing Tea Girls" will be the Misses Zaira L. Brancati, Anna Wiedenhaupt, Elinor McCarthy, Margaret McCarthy, Irma Waldorf, Betty Mara, Elsie Moulton, Mary Donnolly, Grace Harding and Evelyn Buckley.

During the first act they sing "In the Flowery Land," and execute a very pretty dance. The members of the Geisha Double Sextet are the Misses Irma Waldorf, Evelyn W. Buckley, Zaira Brancati, Edith Little, Lyle Smith, Gertrude Blimm and Messrs. John H. Causbrook, Harold Phifer, Arthur R. Perrin, Elmer Blimm, Daniel McNamee and Charles Baumann. They appear during the second act in a dancing specialty executed in the tea house during the evening, the girls representing Japanese maidens and the gentlemen being members of the American tourists seeing Japan.

The Double Sextet also sing a song entitled, "A Japanese Ideal Dream." The "Tourist Double Octet," composed of the Misses Emma H. Ryno, Ethel Runyon, Helen Thompson, Anna Wiedenhaupt, Helen Johnson, Bessie Swan, Mrs. N. Mackinnon, Mrs. A. J. Utzinger and Messrs. L. E. Starker, William P. Taylor, Lemuel B. Woolston, F. Porter Gore, William Jung, Herman Kling, John R. Causbrook and F. N. Anderson, will appear during the third act. They will sing with Percy Carish, the English gentleman from London, which is played by William G. Smith, "You're the Girl Worth While."

One of the real song hits of the show will undoubtedly be "Underneath the Mango Tree," as sung by the Boola Boola boys who appear during the last act. Those who will sing in this number are B. H. Fahn, E. A. Sprowl, P. Caruso, A. E. La Porte, J. L. Lindabury, John Richards, G. Elton Greenleaf, L. B. Woolston, Jr., E. P. T. Smith, Herman Kling, R. R. Hudson and D. C. Patterson.

The rehearsals are moving along in very satisfactory manner, both the grownups and children having learned the musical numbers by heart and Mr. Skilling is now busily engaged each afternoon and night in teaching the stage work and speaking lines.

The reserved seat sale will open at the Plainfield Theatre box office Monday morning promptly at 9 o'clock. The committee has announced that positively no reservations will be made, except for members of out of town Elk lodges.

The chorus rehearsals for next week will be on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday nights, while the principals will be drilled on Monday and Wednesday evenings and other nights to be announced later.

CITIZENS' COMMITTEE REPORTS FUND OF $949

The citizens' committee for the New Jersey Letter Carriers' Convention met last night and received the good news from their treasurer that $949 is in hand. The slogan was adopted, $1,500 by May 1st and the committee is putting forth every effort to have the entire amount in hand and close their campaign for funds on that date. The co-operation of those who intend to give to have their money in the hands of the treasurer by May 1st will be most gratifying.

Reports received from the Letter Carriers' Association throughout the State show an unusual enthusiasm for this convention and a much larger representation than at first anticipated will be here. It is now estimated that 3,000 men will be in line. There will be twelve bands and the New York letter carriers will bring their Ladies' Auxiliary and wives. The report of the committee on the Plainfield souvenir booklet shows excellent progress and will produce a book of Plainfield which is expected to be the best ever published.

DROPS BOMBS ON BULGAR CAPITAL

AIRMEN DO FIGHTING

Washington "Marking Time" on German Situation—Germans Take Trenches on Dead Man's Hill, But Are Driven Back.

Saloniki, April 22.—Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, was bombarded by a French aviator on Friday. Four shells were dropped on the city. The attack on the Bulgarian capital was made by one of the aviators who recently participated in the aerial bombardment of Constantinople. He returned unharmed to the base here last night, having covered 185 miles in his flight to and from Sofia. Aerial squadrons on both sides are becoming more active; both German and Anglo-French air pilots are making daily excursions. On Friday, a German squadron bombarded the allied camp at Karassouli. A few hours later a retaliatory attack was made upon the German camps at Doiran and Petrich by allied aviators.

Washington is Waiting.

Washington, April 22.—Marking time and awaiting the expected reply from Germany are phrases used by administration officials in describing their attitude toward the international situation today. There have been no developments of any kind.

More Italians Called.

Send Help to Turks.

Rome, April 22.—Field Marshal Von Mackensen and Enver Pasha, Turkish Minister of War, are reported to have left Constantinople for the Armenian front to direct operations against the Russians. An Austro-German corps has also been sent to reinforce the Turks.

Fight on Dead Man's Hill.

Paris, April 22.—German troops, in a fierce night attack at Le Mort Homme ,succeeded in penetrating the French trenches, but were completely driven out by an immediate counter-attack. The Kaiser's forces also made an attack on the French positions at Caurettes Wood, according to the official communique issued this afternoon, but there they were repulsed. In the attack at Caurettes Wood the Germans again made use of liquid fire, but without avail. The terrific bombardment opened by the Germans on the front between the Meuse river and the village of Vaux yesterday continued during the night. No infantry attack developed there, but it is believed that the bombardment is being made in preparation for a general assault against the French positions on the east bank of the Meuse.

Report on U-Boat Activities.

Berlin, April 22.—The German Admiralty today sent to the American section of the Foreign Office a voluminous report on the accomplishments of German submarines during the war. The report shows every ship attacked and the result.

JOHN GUNTON INJURED.

In attempting to lead a spirited colt, owned and driven by Horace Coddington, past the Warren Township portable stone crusher, at work near Mt. Horeb, Thursday, former Township Committeeman John Gunton, of Mt. Horeb, received severe and painful injuries. Noise of escaping steam from the crusher caused the colt to bolt suddenly, and Gunton was dragged a hundred feet before it could be stopped. He was found to have sustained a broken collar bone, broken arm and numerous bad bruises. He was taken to his home in an automobile by William Cooper, who chanced along at the time of the accident.

ALL MEN AND WOMEN MUST PAY THE WAGES OF SIN, EXCEPT THEY BE SAVED, SAYS DR. BIEDERWOLF

IF WOMEN HAD BEEN NO BETTER THAN MEN, GOD WOULD HAVE DUMPED WHOLE BUNDLE INTO HELL LONG AGO, EVANGELIST BELIEVES.

ATTENDANCE WAS 3,500; COLLECTION $115.43

Double Standard of Morals, Mostly Set up by Women, Responsible for Carelessness of Man—With a Woman It is to Be Decent or Be Damned, Socially—At Afternoon Service He Preached on "The Christian and the Theatre."

"I sometimes think that if the women of this world had been no better than the men, God would have dumped the whole business in to Hell long ago," said the Rev. William E. Biederwolf last night in his sermon to a crowd of about 3,500 in the timber tabernacle.

Dr. Biederwolf was preaching on the text, "The Wages of Sin is Death," and he sought to impress upon his congregation the fact that all men and all women are sinners, who, if they do not repent and seek the salvation offered by the Lord, are doomed to whatever punishment shall be provided for the future life. Dr. Biederwolf did not say that they should serve through eternity in a hell of fire and brimstone. "I have no time to argue with you about the nature of hell," he said.

"You women," he said, "are better than the men, God bless you; but you, too, are sinners"; and the text applies to them as much as to the other sex, he warned. Dr. Biederwolf said that women had to be better than men, because of the double standard of morals that they had helped to set up.. A man can stand on the corner and chew tobacco and curse (he said), drink whisky and carouse around all night, then spend Sunday morning in bed and Sunday afternoon in a poker joint, and shave later in the day and come out "clean," so far as the world is concerned. "But let a woman try it," he suggested. "Man, your wife has as much right to chew tobacco, as much right to curse, as much right to get drunk and run around as you have."

With a woman it is be decent or be damned, he said, and the blame for this is as much upon yourselves as it is on the men.

A crowd of not more than 3,500 people attended last night's service. The choir seats were full, meaning that almost 1,000 voices were in the chorus.

Dr. Randolph opened the service with a prayer. Dr. Biederwolf again called attention to the small number of cottage prayer meetings being held in Plainfield. He said that those held each morning were fine, but that Mr. Backemeyer reported that people would not open their homes. It is a sad commentary on the religious feeling of Plainfielders, he said, and urged that every home in the city be opened for morning prayer service.

The quartet, with Judge Runyon singing bass instead of Mr. Roberts, sang one selection, after which "Mac" rendered a solo.

Large delegations from Scotch Plains and from Roselle Park were present. They were given a cheer by the chorus choir, with "Mac" leading, when they entered the Tabernacle, and a welcome by Dr. Biederwolf, who urged each one to give serious thought to the subject of salvation while there, saying that if they made the great decision it would be the most important journey of their lives.

Following the appeal of the evangelist at the close of the meeting, ninety-one came forward to give their lives to Christ. They knelt down in front of the pulpit and followed Dr. Biederwolf in the penitent's prayer.

Dr. Biederwolf's sermon on "The Wages of Sin is Death," will be found on another page.

In the afternoon the evangelist talked to a fair-sized audience on "The Theatre and the Christian." He said in part:

And now what shall be said of the

THURSDAY'S COLLECTION THE LARGEST OF SERVICE

The collection at Thursday night's Tabernacle meeting, which was "birthday night," totaled $435.70, according to figures announced this morning. This was by far the largest evening collection of the services. The collection last night was $115.43.

DEATH OF AN INFANT.

NEGRO WON, BUT WHITE BOYS TOOK THE MONEY

John Day, John Kane, Ed Fay and Samuel Fay, all white boys under fourteen years of age, were arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of shooting craps. The boys were arrested on complaint of John Anderson, a diminutive colored boy, who, he said, had gone into the crap game with them, and with the luck of his race, won all the money. His fortune collected there amounted to something like $1.15. Judge De Meza ordered the white boys to get the money they had taken from Anderson and give it back to him. Chief Kiely collected this and all were released on suspended sentences after being given a severe lecture on gambling.

COME EARLY AND AVOID THE RUSH FOR HIPPODROME EXCURSION TICKETS

Sale Will Begin Promptly at 11 O'clock Monday Morning in the Daily Press Office—Representatives From Organizations Should Be on Hand Early in Order to Secure Blocks of Seats—Expect Big Crowd for Trip—Accommodations for All.

There are absolutely no other requirements necessary to join the party going to the New York Hippodrome on May 1, under the auspices of the Daily Press aside from the payment of $1.75 for the railroad ticket and the seat at the Hippodrome. The rate from Dunellen will be $1.80, because of a slight additional charge for railroad fare. Some newspapers, in planning an event of this kind, make people take subscriptions to the newspaper, or clip coupons or in other ways use it as a club to gain subscriptions. The Daily Press has decided to take the people in its territory on this greatly reduced rate trip for the actual cost, and there is no profit of any kind in the affair for the newspaper.

Tickets will be placed on sale at the Daily Press office on next Monday, at 11 a. m., and can be procured there after that date until the time the train leaves. The seats will be chosen direct from a Hippodrome chart, in charge of a representative of the big playhouse, and will be guaranteed $1.50 seats. Because of the reduced rate, commutation tickets will not be accepted on the train, as on all special trains only tickets issued for that train are accepted. Plainfielders have never before had an opportunity to visit New York in the evening, see a good show, and have a chance to see the bright lights of Broadway at such a low figure, and it was only by a special arrangement with the Hippodrome and the railroad that the Daily Press secured the privilege, at considerable trouble. The train will be an express. It will make no stops after leaving Fanwood going to New York, and will run direct from Jersey City to Fanwood coming back, reaching here much earlier than the regular theatre train, thus assuring the party of the saving of a half hour or more in getting home.

This excursion is only being run from the towns mentioned. It is not being run in conjunction with any other newspaper located in a city nearer New York, so that all of the party will be from the territory where the Press circulates, thus making the entire trip congenial. Organizations going in a body, or groups of friends will do well to arrange their plans in advance, and send one member to the Daily Press office next Monday, so that seats can be secured all in one group. The rule of "first come—first served" will be strictly adhered to, so that the earliest requests for reservations will make it possible to have a greater choice for seats.

FIREMEN BUY SMOKE SHIELDS LIKE THOSE USED BY FRENCH AGAINST POISON GASES

For the use of members of the Plainfield fire department in rescue work Chief Kiely has ordered, with the consent of the fire committee, a Draeger Oxygen Self-Rescuer. This shield is the same that is being used by French soldiers in fighting the deadly poisonous gases under cover of which the Germans have made some of their most important advances in front of Verdun and on other bloody battlefields. There the smoke and gas shields have proven that man can live in air heavy with deadly fumes, for many times the soldiers have fought bravely for many minutes in spots so charged with poisonous gases that they could not have lived a minute without the protection of the shields. The self-rescuer was tested a few days ago by Chief Doane and many of the men from headquarters and it was found that man could remain in a smoke filled room for ten or fifteen minutes, and even more, coming out with his face and hands blackened except where the shield had protected him, yet feeling no effects from the smoke. With this shield a fireman will be able to effect rescues no matter what form of smoke or gas he may be called upon to enter.

The local fire department has also ordered a Lungmotor. This apparatus was selected instead of a Pulmotor as being more suited to fire work. An experienced man, preferably a physician, is required to operate a Pulmotor, but the Lungmotor can be handled by any member of the department without danger to the person upon which he is working. Both the self-rescuer and the Lungmotor will be here ready for use within a few days.

ENGINEERS TO SURVEY INDUSTRY

U. S. Naval Consulting Board Names Directors For Work.

FIVE ARE NEW JERSEY MEN

They Will Gather Facts Which Will Be of Valuable Assistance In Case of War—Those Chosen From This State Are Morris R. Sherrerd, Benjamin Franklin Cresson, Jr.; Henry Laurence Gantt, Farley Osgood and Harlan S. Miner.

Howard E. Coffin, chairman of the Committee on Industrial Preparedness of the Naval Consulting Board of the United States, today announced the names of the 250 state directors, formed into boards of five men each, who, under the committee's direction, are setting out to make a complete survey of American industry for the first time in the history of the United States government.

HOWARD E. COFFIN,
Chairman Committee on Industrial Preparedness.

These state directors will be under the immediate guidance of W. S. Gifford, chief statistician of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, who is acting as supervising director of the work. Under them will work the more than 30,000 highly educated members of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the American Chemical society.

The state directors, who also become associate members of the naval consulting board, have just received appointment by the secretary of the navy. In making public their names Mr. Coffin said:

"The names and standing of these men speak for themselves. They have been selected by their own professional associates with the only standard that of efficiency and integrity. They work without pay; indeed, the services of many of them could not be bought. In my judgment they form a vast, flexible organization, the like of which has never been known in this or any other country of the world, and an organization, moreover, which from top to bottom is absolutely nonpolitical."

Morris R. Sherrerd of South Orange, from the American Society of Civil Engineers, is chief engineer of the Newark department of public works and consulting engineer to the New Jersey state water supply commission; was born in Pennsylvania in 1865 and educated at the Rensselaer Polytechnic institute, holding the degree of civil engineer. Mr. Sherrerd is also city engineer of Troy, N. Y.; has built many waterworks and made many appraisals of water plants and acted as consulting engineer on harbor improvements in Brazil.

MORRIS R. SHERRERD.

Henry Laurence Gantt of Montclair, from the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, is a consulting engineer who was born in Maryland in 1861, educated at the Stevens Institute of Technology and Johns Hopkins university, holding two degrees, and is a member of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers.

HENRY LAURENCE GANTT.

Benjamin Franklin Cresson, Jr., of Jersey City, from the American Institute of Mining Engineers, is chief engineer of the New Jersey state board of commerce and navigation; was born in Philadelphia in 1873 and educated at the Universities of Lehigh and Pennsylvania; is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and the similar British organization, the international congresses of navigation, the Municipal Engineers' association of New York and director of the American Association of Port Authorities. Mr. Cresson was first deputy commssioner of the departments of docks and ferries, New York city, and formerly locating engineer of the Pennsylvania railroad, and alignment and resident engineer of the Pennsylvania tunnels extension into New York.

"THE WAGES OF SIN"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

Text: "The Wages of Sin Is Death, but the Gift of God Is Eternal Life, Through Jesus Christ, Our Lord."—Romans 6:23.

I have chosen this text tonight because I think it will make you think. It's a good thing, you know, for some people to think once in a while just for a change. If you knew you were going to meet God before tomorrow morning, you could not sleep tonight for the thoughts that would go buzzing through your old head. Some of you people are hitting the earth so hard in your mad chase after Godless pleasures of this world, with its card-playing parties, its dancing, wine-sipping, punch-drinking receptions that if you meet a serious thought in the middle of the road, you wouldn't know what to take it for.

I want you to get serious tonight, as I preach to you from this text: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." It's a great text.

I guess the most of us will admit that there's plenty of sin in the world. And those of us who are honest will admit that we have done our share of it. Some one asked an old woman back in the woods what she thought of the doctrine of total depravity, and she said she thought it was a pretty good doctrine if people would only live up to it. It's all very well to believe in Rosseau's resoate philosophy of the goodness of all mankind, but when a man comes to me and tries to explain away the doctrines of sin, I say to him: "That may look very nice written up in a book and labeled with a high-sounding title, but it don't tally with experience." Sin is too real to be ignored and nobody but a fool would think of making sport of the doctrine.

Getting Rid of Sin.

Now, ever since sin came into the world man has been speculating about its nature and where it came from as though that was a matter of very great importance. A man says: "How did I come by this sinful nature?" But that's not half as important as the knowledge of how to get rid of it. If I didn't know where I came from that's no reason why I shouldn't look out where I am going. Here's a man drowning. He's gone down once and as he comes up some one shoves him a pole and says: "Grab it and I'll pull you in." And the fellow says: "How did I come to be here?" And the man says: "I've got no time to answer that question now." "Then I'll drown," he says, and he sinks to the bottom. You say he was a fool. But no bigger fool than the man who refuses to accept God's remedy for sin when he knows he's a sinner, just because he can't understand the philosophy of sin and all about its origin.

Now, every philosophical subterfuge has been resorted to, to relieve man of his responsibility for wrong doing. I know every one of these theories of sin from A to Z, and if you want a good allopathic medicine for intellectual nausea, you just take a week off and try to digest them.

You turn to 1 John 2, 4, and you will find it. It says: "Sin is a transgression of the law." This is an instinct of man's spiritual nature and no amount of philosophical speculation can deprive him of it. Men who have never known the true God have made for themselves gods of wood and stone, whose wrath they have tried to avert for their wrong doing. That's why the mother takes her little child and throws it into the Ganges River; that's the meaning of the horrible sun dance of the American Indian when he lacerates his flesh and spills blood to atone for his sins against the great unknown spirit.

I know what the word of God says. It says in Romans 10:22: "We have all sinned and come short of the glory of God." John 1: 8, says, "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us." And the 10th verse says: "If we say we have not sinned, we make God a liar."

The story of your own life condemns you. Turn back over the past and tell me what you read. People talk about the "book of life." If every sinful thought and word and deed were recorded it would take a library for most of us.

You dig up your past and lay it all out before you, and if there's any decency about you, it'll humble your proud heart in the sight of God and man.

The Double Standard.

You must not come in here and say you have no sin. I don't deny there's been much goodness about your life, but man, if Almighty God would come down tomorrow morning and write all the sins of your past life across your forehead, the men of Plainfield would be wearing hats several sizes too large for them that they might slip down and hide from the world the story of their shame.

And what about you women? I know there's a good deal to be said in your favor. I sometimes think that if the women of this world had been no better than the men that God would have dumped the whole thing into hell long ago. But woman, God made you different, and you don't have the same temptations along certain lines that men do. But the biggest reason why you're better than the men is that men compel you to be. It's be decent or be damned. Socially, I mean. And yet women, if God would come down into these aisles tonight and write across your forehead the story of your past, and all the sin that's ever been in your heart, you'd drop your head and run from the building that people round about you might not read and know the shame and disgrace that belongs to you because of the evil in your life.

Conscience Condemns.

Your own conscience condemns you for your sin. Your conscience may not condemn you for certain things, because you've sinned so long that you've killed your conscience at that point. But, as a rule, when you've done wrong, your conscience will condemn you for it.

That's one of the things that distinguishes a man from a hog or a horse or a hyena. They have no conscience, but you have, and you know when you have done wrong. I can't tell a saint from a sinner when I look into your faces. I can't tell a Christian from an infidel, or a libertine from a pure man, although I can make a pretty good guess sometimes. You can hide your sin from men, and you can hide it from other people, but you can't hide it from yourself.

You may not have done anything like that; your hands may not be red with somebody's blood; you may not be a gambler; you're no booze fighter; you haven't lived a dirty, lecherous life, although maybe you have. Yes, I'm willing to admit there's lots worse people in the world than you, but I don't care where you go, or what you do, there is no kind of intoxication, there is no music, no mirth, no prosperity of any kind that will ever drown out your conscience that you are a sinner, and there are people in Plainfield tonight who are suffering within themselves a veritable hell because of their sins.

The Wages of Sin.

It's a threat. It's the warning voice of love. God don't damn you, but your sin will. If you think you can violate law without suffering you're thinking a species of sophistry that belongs to the delusions of an infantile brain. It doesn't make any difference whether it's the law of God, or man or nature. You may escape the law of man if you're shrewd enough, but you can't get away from these others; and you might as well buckle a lightning rod to your back to keep off the lightning as to go and live in sin and not expect sin's lightning to strike you in the world to come.

You will suffer for your sin, not because God said so; God said so because you will. Sin is its own avenger. It's like a boomerang. It strikes back. I don't care what your idea of hell may be. I've no time to quarrel with you about that; but of this one thing you may be sure, when you have finished trifling with your convictions here, when you have done defying the patience of God, murdering His Mercy, spurning His love, rejecting His word and tramping under your feet the blood of His Son, your sin following after you and towering over you with lightning of its own revenge. The wages of sin is death. And oh, my brother, if you have been going through this world wilfully committing sin and trying to make yourself believe that you are not going to be held accountable for it in the world to come, for God's sake and your own, do not hug such a delusion to your breast any longer.

Brighter Side of Text.

But there's a brighter side to the text. Listen: "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

And what does that mean?

It means three things—Through Jesus Christ your sin will be pardoned; that God through Jesus Christ will give you power over sin, that God through Jesus Christ will bring you to a place where there is no sin.

First, that through Jesus Christ your sin will be pardoned. There was a rich old Russian who had gotten a lieutenant's commission for his boy in the Russian army. The young man became dissipated, and, among other things, commenced to gamble. He went from bad to worse until he squandered a fortune. He sat down one night in despair and tried to figure out how much he owed and the figures ran so high they overwhelmed him. In despair he wrote this and thought over it until he fell asleep. The Czar was a friend of his father's, and that night he was walking among the troops, reviewing the fortifications against the coming assault of the French and English. He found the young man asleep and saw what he had been doing; he saw the figures added up and the total, and down beneath the words, "Who will pay all this?" The Czar stooped down and wrote beneath it all his own name, sealed it with the royal signet. When he had gone the young soldier awoke and saw what had been done. He thought at first it was a joke, but he had seen the Czar's writing and there was the signet. He presented it to the treasury and they refused to pay it unless it came through the regular channel, but he made application to the Czar, and the Czar ordered the debt to be paid and the obligation discharged.

And say, you can't sit here in this meeting and recall every dollar you ever stole, every lie you ever told, every act of adultery you ever committed, every thought of adultery you've ever had, every profane word you ever uttered, every blow you ever struck, every glass of whiskey you ever drank, every unkindness to your wife or husband, and every infidelity and everything that has been a dishonor to God and disgrace to your manhood or womanhood, until your sins pile up like Rockies on top of the Himalayas, and tell me who in heaven or earth or hell will ever pay it. You can't pay it. For all your culture, your morality, your intelligence, your good works, your penance, your stock, your store, your profession of your fame and all you've got on God. Almighty's whirling earth can never dissolve that mountain, or pay the debt you owe, and when at last in despair for your sins, with no help and no hope, you write, "Who will pay all this?" I would like to write down beneath it all, one name, that name that's above every name.

"Sweetest name on mortal tongue
Sweetest carol ever sung,
Sweetest note in seraph's song,
The blessed name of Jesus."

He will pay it all; and He will set you free. He'll forgive you.

Power Over Sin.

It means second, that God, through Jesus Christ, will give you power over sin. You can do something in your own strength and some things you can't, and your good resolutions at their best, carried out in your own strength, last you only for a day, and you go down before the first temptation.

They tell the story of Abe Mulkey, an evangelist down in Texas; or, rather, Abe tells it himself. Before he became a preacher he used to quarrel occasionally with his wife. He knew the old life so well and his temper sometimes got the better of him. Abe was a Methodist and his wife was an Episcopalian. And one day Abe said: "Look here, I'll tell you what's the matter with you; there ain't no religion in your church—you just read your prayer out of a book; you ought to come down to our church where we just get up and shout right out of our hearts." And she said, "Look here; I'll tell you what's the matter with you; I've been watching your life, and your trouble ain't in what church you belong to. The trouble is you ain't got any religion." And he got mad and the devil said, "Abe, rip into her; you're running the ranch." And God said, "Abe, don't go in." And he turned and walked out of the house and went behind it on his knees.

You know what an ash hopper is. It's a big thing that runs up this way, like an inverted pyramid, and down the apex it's got a board with a groove in it, or a tin to run the lye into the bucket. Well, Abe got down and just prayed out loud and then he went back into the house and said, "Wife, it's my fault, and you've got more religion than I have." And his wife forgave him and Abe says that every time the devil comes around, he just says, "Ash hopper, ash hopper, ash hopper," because that's where he met the devil and beat him out.

Peace With Sin.

It means that God through Jesus Christ will bring you at last to a place where there is no sin.

I wouldn't give standing room in heaven for a quit claim deed to all the gold and silver and diamond mines in the world.

I've seen enough of sin to be sick of it forever. And surely that must be true of you. But in heaven, the drunkard, the gambler, the curser, the destroyer of virtue, will all be shut out and heaven's walls will echo with the songs of the pure in heart. In hell, on the other hand, which you turn to, in sin, you'll reap the consummating harvest of your unholy, unbelieving, unrelenting, sinful life.

The attendance at the meeting in the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon was not as good as it should have been. Dr. Biederwolf spoke without prejudice on "The Christian and the Theatre," which was declared by many who heard him a masterpiece. In the heat of his address the evangelist diverted from the theatre into several other lines which tended to make his discourse helpful and interesting.

The National Male Quartet, with Judge Runyon substituting for Mr. Roberts, rendered a selection, and Mr. McEwan rendered a solo.

Though the weather looked stormy and dark on the outside it was unusually bright on the inside for a new light and reflector have been installed above the pulpit. We suppose some people will make light of this bright addition.

Delegations from Scotch Plains, Roselle Park, and the Adult Bible Classes (male and female) of this city were heartily applauded by choir and congregation.

Tonight will mark the first "booze" sermon, "The Whiskey Jug." It promises to be a "corking" good one, and no doubt the Tabernacle will be filled.

The ministers sang the chorus of one of the songs—that is, "Mac" asked them to sing and,—well anyway "Mac" looked rather disappointed.

Dr. Biederwolf called upon Plainfield to get down upon its knees, to support the cottage prayer meetings, to hold more of these meetings, and for more people to open their homes. Give the name to Mr. Bachemeyer at the Tabernacle, or send it in to the headquarters at the Y. M. C. A.

Judge Runyon seems to be keeping steady company with the trio of the National Male Quartet. Mr. Roberts' throat is steadily getting stronger but is not in a fit condition to do any singing yet.

A nursery has been started at the home of the King's Daughters. Dr. Biederwolf assured the parents they need not worry about leaving the baby there for they will have all the attention they would receive if they were home. He further dispelled their anxiety by stating they might place a tag on their child if they were afraid of taking home the wrong one.

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Biederwolf will give an address on "Russelism" or "Millenial Dawnism."

Dr. Biederwolf extended words of welcome to the out-of-town delegations and to the adult Bible classes.

The attendance at the afternoon meetings has not been very good. The talks are really too good to miss and are worthy of better support. There will be afternoon meetings on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

"I believe there is a personal devil, first, because the Bible says so, and second, because I've done business with him."—Biederwolf.

BITS FROM BIDERWOLF

"Some of you people are hitting the earth so hard in your mad chase for Godless pleasures of this world, with its card-parties, its dancing, wine-sipping, punch-drinking receptions, that if you met a serious thought in the middle of the road you wouldn't know what to take it for."

"I guess most of us will admit that there is plenty of sin in the world and that we have done our share of it."

"There are some people who are going to Hell so fast you can't see them for the dust, just as some old hypocrites in Plainfield."

"Heaven can spare you and Hell can tolerate you, but the worst of it is that you are leading someone else astray while you are going down."

"I sometimes think that if the women of this world had been no better than the men God would have dumped the whole thing into Hell long ago."

"It's be decent or be damned."

"Either God or Mrs. Eddy is rather economical of the truth."

"I wouldn't give standing room in Heaven for a quit claim deed to all the gold and silver and diamond mines in the world."

BIEDERWOLF CAMPAIGN

theatre? I am not going into a wholesale condemnation of the drama, the opera and every sort of theatrical performance because I believe in the possible redemption of the stage, and when it is redeemed I believe it will be one of the most powerful agencies for good in the whole world.

I am not going to say there is nothing good upon the stage today, for there are plays, though they are sadly in the minority, which one could witness with a real moral uplift, and I am sorry that the condition of the theatre as an institution is such today as hardly makes it possible for many reasons, for a consistent Christian to enjoy even that which would do him good and could do him no possible harm.

It is, therefore, not upon the imaginary theatre, not upon the theatre as an ideal, but upon the theatre as it actually exists today and as the history of the world has always shown it to be that we must speak.

What now are the specific charges against the theatre?

The chief of these, some would have us believe, lies in the effort upon the actor. For a man to play perfectly the part of another character he must make himself out of himself and put himself over, so far as possible, into the character he wishes to stimulate.

Sir Henry Irving committed at least 15,000 murders on the stage; Sir Charles Wyndham has been divorced from 2,800 wives and Miss Ada Cavendish has been foully betrayed and deserted 5,600 times.

I wish to ask those of you of finer sensibilities, who understand just a little the psychology of human nature, if you think that a pure-minded man or woman can live and dwell in an atmosphere like that without deadening somewhat the finer sensibilities of their own nature? And their reputations born by the vast majority of men and women in the profession is the best evidence of what I am saying. Eleanore Duse, the celebrated actress, says, "The majority of the actors and actresses whose acquaintance I have made are despicable." We do not mean to say that there are no pure-minded men or women on the stage, but these are the exceptions and are almost like Shakespeare's "two grains of wheat hidden in two bushels of chaff."

I cannot, myself, however, get away from the conviction that the chief of all objections to the theatre lies in its effect upon its audience.

The specific charge I now make against the theatre is that its chief appeal to the baser instincts of our human nature. Two things will prove this to any fair and pure-minded person.

Its Suggestiveness.

First. The first is the foul suggestiveness of nine-tenths of the present-day plays. I will not make the assertion, but will quote again those words of Mr. Palmer, the distinguished theatrical manager, who said. "The chief themes of the theatre are now, as they ever have been, the passions of men—ambition and jealousy leading to murder, lust leading to adultery and death." The management has become even bold enough to call them "seventh commandment plays," and the stage is full today of presentations of what an enthusiastic defender of the drama has called "A murderous assault upon all that the family circle holds most holy and sacred."

You need only look at the billboards sometimes to get an idea of what may be seen as you sit in your seat before the stage. I can think of nothing more demoralizing to our children as they go on their way to school than to have their minds poisoned with some of these foul and filthy posters which line our streets in the interest of the theatrical life of this country.

I was preaching in the city of Waukegan, Ill., a short time ago and so utterly vile were some of the bulletins, that over the forms of the women some of the boys of the street had taken their pencils and written all sorts of filthy and unclean thoughts which had been suggested by the lascivious pictures before them. And I say it is a burning insult to the virtuous womanhood of this country, a vile outrage upon the sweet chastity of your wife and your daughter and your sister and a brazen affront to everything that is pure and clean and holy that we must permit this carnival of pictured lewdness to go on unmolested before our very eyes.

Now I do not think there is any use to disguise the fact, or even to try to disguise it, that this exhibition of women with such approaches to nudity and such display of the human form has for its strongest tendency, if not its chiefest purpose, the breeding of thoughts that are unclean behind the on-looking eyes. The world admits it and we might just as well be as honest. Go to the pool rooms or where men congregate and hear what they say about it, and see if this is not true. And if the Bible is true when it says, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," how few of the men who sit so frequently before the footlights of the theatre have not been guilty of sin.

VILLA NOT DEAD OR EVEN WOUNDED

Body Dug up Did Not Even Resemble That of Bandit Leader.

Chihuahua, Mexico, April 22.—Villa is not dead. At least the body supposed to be that of the bandit leader has been exhumed and examined by Americans and pronounced that of some other man.

In a lonely mountain cave the body was found. A Mexican who had been condemned to death for taking part in one of the Villa raids promised to lead troops to his grave if they would spare his life. The promise was made but when the body was dug up yesterday it bore little resemblance to that of the man for whom United States soldiers are looking.

Official American reports that Villa is in Durango State, unwounded, were disclosed today, as was also a Carranza order of April 15, prohibiting United States aviators flying over Mexican cities and barring the American forces from using the Mexican telegraph and telephone lines.

MONTCLAIR IS BEST BABY TOWN IN WORLD

Montclair, April 22.—Montclair claims to be the best "baby town," not only in the United States, but in the world, and gives figures to prove the claim. It is announced that during 1915 the death rate of infants under 1 year old in Montclair was 65 a thousand, as compared with 123 a thousand for New Jersey, 124 a thousand for the United States, 160 a thousand for Japan, 192 for Germany and 332 for Chile.

Deaths of children under 2 years old in Montclair have decreased from 131 in 100,000 population, twenty-five years ago, to 12 in 1915, and the number of deaths of children under 5 years old has decreased from 500 in 100,000 of population, twenty-five years ago, to 163 in 1915.

Montclair means clear or pure mountain. The city appears to be making its name good—or at least it is making some attractive figures.

There are few items which appear in this paper more important to Plainfield people than the statement published below. In the first place, it is from a citizen of Plainfield and can be thoroughly relied upon. In the second place, it indisputably proves that Doan's Kidney Pills do their work thoroughly and not temporarily. Read this carefully:

Mrs. S Driscoll, 540 West Front street, Plainfield, says: "I had a dull pain across the small of my back and in my sides that clung to me constantly and any hard work made me worse. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells, especially when stooping or lifting, and I felt weak and run down. I tried plasters and other medicines, but nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Drug Store. They made a lasting cure."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Driscoll had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv

NEWARK TROLLEY TERMINAL PLANS

Plainfielders Interested in Announcement of Opening On April 30.

TO COST FOUR MILLION

Public Service Clearing House for Cars Only Street Railway Terminal in United States With Three Levels.

Plainfield people are greatly interested in the announcement coming from Newark that the new Public Service Terminal in Park place, that city, will be open for operation on Sunday, April 30.

At that time the ground floor level, known as the concourse, the sub-surface level and the elevated train floor will be ready for use by the public.

Thus will be given to Newark at the very opening of the civic celebration of the 250th anniversary of the founding of the city the only street railway terminal in the United States which has three levels for the convenience and accommodation of the people who will use the trolley cars. Most of the other terminals of the country have street levels only.

In the Park place terminal all tracks have been eliminated from the street level, or main concourse, a plan which will make for safety of operation and for minimizing of the congestion of operation which would otherwise result from the handling of a large number of cars.

While the entire eight-story building will not be ready for occupancy and use for the offices and other requirements of the home offices of the Public Service Corporation and its subsidiary companies until July 1, it is regarded as a remarkable feat of construction work that the three levels for the use of the trolley operations have been so far completed that they can be put into commission on April 30.

In many of its features the terminal building will be unique, but in none more than in the fact that the main concourse will be without car tracks. All cars will enter and leave the building either above or below the street level and patrons who enter the concourse from the street will have to descend or ascend to reach the cars they desire to ride in, or to get to the street level when they leave the cars in which they have entered the terminal building.

On each train floor, or level, there will be two unloading and three loading tracks and platforms. Passengers will be able to go to or from the particular levels their cars operate over by means of an arrangement of separate stairways, which will be so constructed as to segregate the incoming and outgoing traffic, providing ample room for all without crowding, and easy access and exit to and from the cars and their platforms.

The main entrance to the concourse, or street level, will be at the northerly end of the Park place front of the building. There will also be an entrance to the concourse from the main lobby in the center of the Park place front, and other entrances to the concourse will be provided from North Canal street, from Pine street, and from East Park street, special arrangements having been made so as to avoid confusion under any and all circumstances, no matter how heavy the traffic may be.

The concourse will be spacious, well lighted, heated and ventilated, and will contain numerous booths for business uses, with wide separating aisles. Concessions on the concourse are already being rented. A number of the booths have been taken and the work of providing them with their special fittings and equipments will be gotten under way next week. There will be a large restaurant with every modern equipment and under capable management, a drug store, a cigar and tobacco store, a barber shop, a fruit stand, a newspaper and magazine stand, soda fountain, haberdashery, bootblack booth, information bureau, ticket offices and a variety of other things which will make the concourse a busy place of retail trade in addition to the trolley traffic. There will be checking rooms, retiring rooms for men and for women, with attendants, resting benches for persons waiting for cars, public telephone booths and every public convenience that can be installed to make the concourse right up to the minute in every respect for the convenience of the general public.

When the whole building is completed and occupied by Public Service and the executive departments of its varied activities, it will represent an outlay for plant of about four millions of dollars.

LOCAL PROPERTY FORECLOSED.

At a sheriff's sale in Elizabeth this week a property in East Third street was sold, following foreclosure proceedings brought by George W. Monfort, complainant, against Jane E. Ardlip and others. It was sold to complainant for $500.

WEEK'S PERMITS SHOW FALLING OFF

Chief Doane Grants But Six With Total Estimated Cost of Only $5,150.

Six permits, none of them calling for new buildings, were the total passed by Inspector T. O. Doane during the past week. Four of the six were for alterations or additions, while the other two were for small garages. The estimated cost of the six permits makes a total of $5,150, a falling-off from the week previous. Permits for the year have now reached an aggregate of $38,985, and for the year since January 1, $315,256. The permits just passed are described as follows:

Louis Kadish is to erect a 38 by 7 foot extension to the front of the building at 19-21-23 Somerset street. The improvements will be of brick, three stories high and will mean much to the appearance of the property. The cost has been placed at $3,000. The extension will bring the present structure out to the building line. William H. Clum is the architect of the plans for the work, the contracts having been awarded to the Bloom Contracting Company.

George L. Babcock has been granted a permit for a 10 by 15 foot frame extension to the rear of the structure at 209 West Eighth street at a cost of $1,000. Alexander Milne has the general contract.

Thomas H. Taylor is to build an extension to the front of the building at 701 West Fourth street. The addition is to be used as a store, will be one story high, of frame construction, and will measure 23 by 27 feet. The estimated cost has been placed at $700. P. W. Fisher is the general contractor.

William M. Mosher is to erect a 10 by 11 one-story addition to the rear of the dwelling at 237 East Fifth street at a cost of $300. William Panborn's Son has the mason contract, and L. T. Titsworth the carpenter work.

E. H. Beekman has been granted a permit for the erection of a 12 by 18 foot frame garage at a cost of $100 at 31 Mariners place. G. H. Fisher, Jr., is the architect, the work to be done by the owner.

Henry Hansen, of 334 Halsey street, is to erect a 10 by 8 foot frame garage at a cost of $50.

CONTRACTORS' FILES

The following local contracts have been filed at the office of the county clerk in Elizabeth during the past week:

Same, with Cohen and Esraelsky, all work except plumbing....$4,660

BALDWIN LOCOMOTIVE CO. MAY BUILD NEAR AMBOY

Recent purchases of land between Parlin and South Amboy, attributed to the DuPont Powder Company, have given rise to rumors that the Baldwin Locomotive Works are planning to erect a plant in that vicinity. Several acres of ground have been purchased from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, but the purpose for which it is to be used has not been disclosed. The Crosman property is the land purchased.

The DuPont Company has a controlling interest in the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and it is understood that the property has been purchased for the latter concern. Officials of the Raritan River Railroad said today that while they were unable to confirm the report, there was reason to believe there was some ground for it.

CONTRACTING COMPANY HUSTLING SPRING WORK

Things are indeed busy at present with the Apgar Construction Company, Dunellen's thriving building concern, and from present indications there is no likelihood of falling off of the rush before autumn.

This morning work was started on building a new front porch at the residence of Fred Haynes on Washington avenue, which is going to be quite an improvement.

The company will transfer a portion of their activities late this afternoon to the William G. Giles property on New Market road, where they will stake out the ground for a new house which Mr. Giles is to have erected here, and for which the contract has been awarded to the Apgar concern.

Another new contract just awarded to them is for the building of a fine modern seven-room bungalow at Watchung for Arthur J. Spicer, of Plainfield.

Another contract which they have just received is for reroofing the borough hall.

A SHINGLED COTTAGE

DESIGNED BY CHAS S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

OUR illustrated design is for a shingled cottage planned for an east front. It is 26 feet in width by 26 feet in depth, with a diagonal projected piazza on the front left corner 8 x 12 feet, with a sleeping porch the same size above. The cottage is well built, frame construction, and the outside is covered with extra heavy cedar shingles, the courses alternated narrow and wide. The roof also is shingled. All shingles on the wall to be stained moss green, and trimmings, cornices, casings, etc., painted white and the roof shingles stained a light gray. This makes a very pretty and artistic combination.

There is a good full basement under the house. The main story is 9 feet high, and the second story 8 feet. The entrance is through a small porch on the right-hand corner, opening into the main living room, 19 feet 6 inches by 12 feet. There is one central chimney accommodating the heating plant, two fireplaces, kitchenette.

The main fireplace is in the center of the living room and a small fireplace in the corner of the dining room. The pantry and kitchen are conveniently arranged in connection with the dining room. The second story has three good chambers, sleeping porch, bathroom and ample closet room. The first story is finished in oak and the second story in white pine, enamel finish. It is estimated to build this cottage for $2,800 to $3,500, exclusive of heating and plumbing.

IN THE SUBURBS

H. A. Staatius Van Daahlen, of New York, has rented the house on Penfield place, Dunellen, recently vacated by Stanley Krom, the renting being made through Contractor Chas. G. Wrage.

Former Postmaster Charles S. Day of Dunellen, and family, are moving from Valmere, the cottage on the F. Percy Vail property, to the house on Edwards avenue, formerly occupied by Robert Reif and more recently vacated by Adam Leyh.

Leslie Latham, of Dunellen, is planning to erect a new moden eight-room house on the portion of his father's estate, "The Lindens," situated between Bonegut brook and the residence of Mrs. Julia Coyle. The plans and specifications for the new residence will soon be given out to the contractors. Mr. Latham is connected with his father in the electrical business in New York and is known as an energetic and ambitious business man, thoroughly familiar with the electrical line and destined to make a name for himself in New York business circles.

Joseph Fromeyer and family, of Dunellen, moved on Saturday from the George F. Giles house at the corner of Dunellen and Lincoln avenues to their new house on Second street, which has recently been completed.

The side walls of the new garage for Herbert E. Nelson, of Dunellen, have been laid up and the place is being hustled along to completion by Contractor C. Lester Rule.

Two lots of land at Dewey Park and a money consideration have been given by Contractor Henry Wrage, of Dunellen, in exchange for two houses on Rushmore avenue, Plainfield.

REAL ESTATE MEN SPRING ADMIRERS

Nature's Prettiest Season Makes Urban People Think of Country Homes.

Everyone hereabouts is looking eagerly for the real spring, the time of warm sunshine and balmy breezes, green grass, bird-song and flowers. No one, however, longs for spring, the real season, not merely the name, more than does the real-estate man in Plainfield and its suburbs, for the reason that in the season in which Nature puts on her prettiest smile the thoughts of the average human turn longingly toward a home outside the big city and all that such a home implies, as fresh air, sparkling sunshine, vegetables right out of the garden that really have a taste, an individual flavor, and do not resemble in the slightest degree the poor imitations the city dweller has to put up with from the greengrocer's or the huckster's wagon.

The suburban home appeals especially to the family with growing children, for here they have a chance to grow and develop as Nature intended they should, with plenty of fresh air and exercise and good, nourishing food.

For these reasons suburban life has become very popular among all classes of people, and, recognizing this fact, care has been taken by those who have embarked their money, their time and their brains in the development of suburbs, to provide homes for all classes.

Never, they declare, were conditions better for the buyer. In the first place, the opinion of all familiar with conditions in the suburban market is unanimous that prices will never be lower. In fact, the tendency is upward, for many reasons, chief among which are the constantly increasing number of people who want to live in the country, and the constant diminution in the supply of advantageously located land—that is, land close to railway stations.

As every one knows, every tract bought and developed decreases the available supply of such land, and in consequence prices are likely to keep on going up. Of course, proximity to a railway station and trolley line means little or nothing to the man with an automobile, but a census of residents would likely show a preponderance of the population without this means of conveyance, and a short walk to the station and trolley.

In this connection, it may be said that the services of a well-informed and reputable real estate broker, who has made a study of suburban property, will be of great value to the inventor. Such a man, knowing localities and values, will take care that his client does not pay too much, and will be likely to save the client, who does not know values, a great deal more than the modest fee the broker charges for his services.

C. CAULFIELD BUYS PROPERTY.

Cormick Caulfield, of West Front street, yesterday took title to the property at 510 Arlington avenue, which he has purchased from Miss Addie Parker Jackson. After making a number of improvements to the residence, Mr. Caulfield will occupy the place himself. The property was for many years owned by the late Marvin M. Dunham. The house has been vacated for several months.

JAMES McKEON'S PURCHASE.

Miss Mary Compton, who recently returned from Florida, has sold the property at 18 Compton avenue to James McKeon, of this city. It includes a modern dwelling and a large lot. The purchase price is said to have been $5,100. Miss Compton's father, the late Halstead Compton, made this property his home during the years just previous to his death.

WORK PROGRESSING.

The work in remodeling the first floor of the building occupied by the North Plainfield fire department into general municipal quarters, is proceeding rapidly. The partition walls of brick are nearing completion and the outside entrance, of elaborate design, to the collector's office, the police court, etc., has been built in and but remains to be painted.

COUNT VON HAESELER.

To Be Made Scapegoat For Verdun Failure.

Field Marshal Count von Haeseler, who has been the crown prince's guide and inspiring spirit since the beginning of the war, has been recalled from the western front and has arrived in Berlin. The supreme military authorities have selected him as the scapegoat for the failure of the attacks on Verdun.

NEW NAVAL BILL IS READY FOR REPORT

Total Cost Will Be at Least $230,000,000.

Washington, April 22.—The naval appropriation bill will be reported from the house committee on naval affairs next week. It will provide for an expenditure of about $230,000,000 for the fiscal year of 1917, carrying a larger increase for ammunition, submarines, aviation and other auxiliaries to the navy. It looks now as if the increases will exceed Secretary Daniels' recommendations.

As framed the bill provides for four capital ships, two battle cruisers, two dreadnaughts and fifty submarines that can actually accompany the fleet and dive.

An effort is being made to provide for four battle cruisers and two dreadnaughts, the cruisers to cost $21,000,000 each, the dreadnaughts from $18,000,000 to $19,000,000 each. It is believed that the bill will carry appropriations for them.

Chairman Kitchin of the house ways and means committee and Chairman Simmons of the senate finance committee have practically agreed on a plan to raise revenues to pay for preparedness. They will tax incomes, inheritances and war munitions to raise the extra $175,000,000 that will be needed next year, and they will retain a portion of the present emergency tax law to collect between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

ICE AVALANCHE SPREADS RUIN

Leaves Minnesota Lake In High Winds Doing $25,000 Damage.

Bemidji, Minn., April 22.—Two inches of snow, lowered temperature and diminished winds stopped the huge ice pack, fifty feet high, moving across the Red Lake Indian reservation after $25,000 damage had been done.

The ice piled up on the shallow Red lake and was blown by a gale across the swamps, destroying everything it met. Three small lake steamers were destroyed before the ice left the lake. Snow and low temperatures froze the pack to the ground, stopping it.

United States Tars Make Record.

New York, April 22.—Uncle Sam's gunners have set a new record in American naval marksmanship, it was learned at the New York navy yard. The Atlantic fleet, which was recently engaged in battle maneuvers at Guantanamo, bettered all former marks for distance in long range target practice with the twelve and fourteen inch guns by more than 50 per cent and, incidentally, surprised naval authorities by the accuracy they showed at the long distances.

THE PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT, SOCIAL LEADERS AND CRIME.

An accessory is rightly held responsible, often equally so, with those committing a crime.

Liquor is responsible directly or indirectly for from 50 per cent. to 90 per cent. of insanity, pauperism and crime and for a tremendous increase in the sickness and death rate (and not excessive use of liquor either, but so-called moderate use).

The records of 50 years experience of the Temperance General Life Association of London show the death rate of their abstaining policyholders between the ages of 25 to 45, to have been only 55 per cent. of the death rate of their moderate drinking policyholders.

Liquor is manufactured and sold under license from United States, State and municipal authorities, and various excuses are given for permitting it.

First: "The Production of Revenue."

Revenue which is produced by debauching the people is an expense not an income and more than the amount raised is spent in apprehending and punishing the criminals and in caring for the insane and paupers, the sick and injured who are created by drink.

Second: "The hardship to those engaged, if the business were stopped."

Every man engages in business at his own risk and from the ruinous nature of his trade, to his customers and their families, the liquor man should be the last one to receive any kind of protection against loss from the closing of his business.

Third: "People will drink and respectable, law-abiding saloons, controlled through license, are better than the blind pigs of no license places."

Yes, people who are bound to drink will drink and a certain percentage of that type will drink themselves out, but not all will and then we will not be educating our young people, our boys and girls, to drink, by making it respectable (?).

Places of business which make their profit by debauching the people are not respectable nor are the saloons law-abiding.

Even in Plainfield, where they are controlled better than in most places, the records of the police, city judge and charities organization show that they are not law-abiding. Only lately the Mayor found it necessary to issue an order that disturbances and fights of drunken men on the streets must be prevented. The penalty for selling to drunken people and minors is revocation of license.

It is time for the city authorities to act and impose this penalty and not merely fine and imprison those arrested for being drunk, leaving the chief offenders, the saloon keepers, free.

Deal with the Cause not the Effect. Eliminate the Cause and there will be no Effect.

Yes, and so are the laws against disorderly houses, gambling, lotteries, unrestricted use of automobiles, expectoration in public places, theft, murder, arson, assault and battery, abuse of animals, the building, factory, tenement house, sanitary, health and quarantine laws and a thousand other laws, but no outcry is ever raised against them.

But the moment you talk of suppressing the traffic which produces most of the infractions of the above criminal laws the howl goes up that you are interfering with personal liberty. The personal liberty which permits the filling of a man with liquor and then turning him loose, with self-control gone and passions inflamed, to go out and commit crimes of violence or to go home and beat up his helpless wife and children should not only be interfered with; it should be stopped with an iron hand. And the only way to stop it is to stop the manufacture and sale of liquor; to tear from even moderate drinking the guise of respectability in which it now masquerades and, through education and example, to teach people the necessity of giving up even moderate drinking in the homes as well as in public places.

And here is where the partnership between the Government, the social leaders and crime comes in: The Governments set their seal of approval and, through taxes and license fees, participate in the profits and so become partners in the business, therefore they are responsible for its actions and effects, its crimes and casualties. The social leaders (and, unfortunately, in many cases the women are worse offenders than the men) insist that no function is complete without liquor and so it is served at lunches and dinners, at card parties and weddings. At dances punch is served without restriction to young and old alike; boys and girls being served just as freely, if they want it, as the old stagers, and the result is only too apparent. The beginning of a crop is the sowing of the seed and so it is with drink and I say without fear of contradiction that the greatest responsibility for the drink habit rests upon the leaders of thought and society who are moderate drinkers themselves. The insidious social pressure which is continually pushing people, young and old, toward drink, in ways too well known to need recounting, is responsible for the crop and it is time that the mothers and daughters, the sisters and friends joined with the men at the head of large business interests, who have, after careful study, decided that, to have efficiency, drink must be eliminated and who are now bending every effort to accomplish that result as a business proposition. Also to bring the thought home to others, I would like to ask the minister, shielded by training and his cloth, whether he thinks it right to indulge in drink and then read from the Bible that strong drink is a mocker and preach about the force of example, the necessity of self-denial and that we are our brothers' keepers.

Scientific tests having shown that even a small amount of alcohol causes the hand to lose its steadiness and the eye and brain their keenness to an astonishing extent will the physicians and surgeons stop and think whether they have the right to use alcohol and so endanger the lives of their patients by wrong diagnosis or treatment or unsuccessful operation?

A surgeon told me some time ago that many an unsuccessful operation was the result of the surgeon taking alcohol to steady his nerves and he is a user of liquor himself.

Will the judge, strong of mind and clothed in his robes of office, consider while sentencing to imprisonment or death some man who robbed or murdered after losing control of himself through liquor purchased in the government licensed saloon, whether he is consistent in drinking his cocktail, his wine or his whiskey instead of using all his influence, and the influence of his high office, against the cause that produces the criminals he sentences?

Recently, in Philadelphia, a crusade was launched by members of some of the first families to abolish cocktails, cigarettes and liquors at society dinners and it was decided that the cocktail especially must go because of its baneful effect upon the younger set. If our social leaders will stop and consider what alcohol is doing and if they will look around among their relatives and friends and note the disasters among them from this cause and then join in a movement to study all sides of this question and abolish the use of liquor in Plainfield, beginning by abolishing it from social functions and the home, I shall feel that this editorial has not been written in vain.

The Village Sleuth

The terror of the criminals is Uncle Jabez Hand;
He is the marshal of this town, we'd have you understand.
He's built on Sherlock Holmes style,
Has old Sleuth beaten by a mile;
Nick Carter in his palmy days was never half so grand.

When anyone spits on the walk, the marshal's right on deck.
He rounds the evildoers up in record time, by heck.
He knows the ways of all the crooks,
Enough to write a dozen books;

When someone robbed the postoffice of 90 cents in stamps,
He was the hero of the hour and took in sixteen tramps.
They ate our grub for sixty days—
The marshal has the village craze;
He let the populace take turns at lookin' at the scamps.

When Grandma Harkins lost a pie she'd set outdoors to cool,
The marshal got upon the trail and pinched the grammar school.
By taking all of them he did
Round up for sure the guilty kid.
For downright detective work he ain't nobody's fool.

You Never Can Tell.

At twenty she was slim, good looking, nimble on her feet and always looking her best when she stepped out the door, says a Missouri exchange. Then it was he went crazy about her and wondered if she ever would be his. At fifty she was about the general shape of a sack of flour, only a great deal larger. She looked like a frowsy Amazon and she walked like a crippled duck. But thanks be to the gods, the youth who loved her daughter never had a thought that the latter would in her time look and get around like her mother. No man can see thirty years ahead even when it turns back and steps on his feet. You never can tell.

One Fighting Editor.

"If somebody don't get busy about the Mexican situation," say the peace loving editor of the Norborn (Mo.) Enterprise, "and stop these stunts, we are going to go down there ourselves with a couple of sixshooters and drive the whole passel of jellyheaded, Chilli glomers into hades head first, lock the gates and turn on the big blaze." If the editor's batting average in the mortality league is as high as the foregoing would indicate, the "Chilli glomers" had best beware.

What the Boys Are Singing.

American soldiers going into Mexico have a new song. It was composed by a poet in the engineering corps, and is sung to the tune of "I'm On My Way to Mandalay." It follows:

"I've got to go to Mexico,
For Fighting Freddie says it's so;
I've got to fight with all my might
So the Stars and Stripes may blow.
Look out, Villa, for I wouldn't be yer, when us boys see yer; that's why
I've got to go to Mexico;
I'm going to say goodby."

"Fighting Freddie" is Major-General Frederick Funston.

ATTENDS COMMUNITY CENTER CONFERENCE

Among those attending the National conference on Community Center Work yesterday, in session Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and today in the Hotel Astor, New York, were the following from Plainfield: Miss Lillian Lamson, C. L. Riley, E. S. Krans and A. B. Jones. During one committee meeting, Miss Lillian Lamson, supervisor of the Recreation Work in Plainfield, gave an address of the work in this city and the many features conducted under the auspices of the Center. Representatives were present at the conference from practically very State in the country and even from Canada. The growth of the work in the United States was resumed interestingly by the various delegates present.

Although Community Center work has been conducted in Belgium, England and other European countries for many years, it was not introduced here until seven years ago. The first Center was opened at Rochester, N. Y., and the remarkable popularity of the feature from the very outset promised it to become a big factor in the life of the public.

Since the organization of the little club in Rochester, thousands have sprung up all over the country, each helping its members and co operating with them. Every Center is self-supporting and self governer. During the conference yesterday announcement was made that in the city of Chicago there were forty centers at the present time, all doing excellent work.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Fate Of a Proud Princess.

The Fiddler Sang For the King.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"ONCE upon a time," daddy began when the children curled up beside him, "there was a great king in a far country of the east who had a beautiful daughter. But she was so proud and selfish that nobody loved her, and all the princes who cared to marry her were soon told that they were not good enough for her. She made fun of all of them."

"The king held a great feast and asked all her lovers to come. So they all sat in a row—kings, princes, dukes, earls, counts, barons and knights. Then in tripped the princess, and instead of saying something pleasant to each she said something spiteful. The first was too fat. 'He's a round tub,' said the princess. The next was too tall. 'What a maypole!' she cried. The next was too short. 'He's a dumpling,' she giggled. The fourth was so pale she called him 'Wallface,' and the fifth so red she greeted him 'Coxcomb.' So she made fun of everybody, but she laughed most at the king, who was there. 'Look at him!' she cried. 'His beard is like a mop. I shall call him Grizzle Beard!'"

"Was she rude?" asked Jack.

"But her father, the king, was very angry when he saw how his daughter behaved, and he vowed that, whether she wanted to or not, she should marry the first man who came to the door, whether he be prince or beggar.

"Two days later there came a traveling fiddler, who began to play under the princess' window and beg. When the king heard him he ordered the dirty fellow to be brought in. So the fiddler sang for the king and his daughter, and he sang so well that he begged a boon. The king said, 'You have sung so well that you shall have my daughter for your wife.'

"The proud princess begged and prayed to be spared such a fate. But her father said, 'I have sworn to give you to the first man who came in, and I must keep my word.' So her tears did no good. The parson was sent for, and she was married to the fiddler. Then the king said: 'Now get ready and go! You cannot stay here! You must travel on with your husband!'

"So the fiddler left the palace and took his wife with him. Soon they came to a great forest. 'Pray, whose forest is this?' asked the fiddler's wife. 'Old King Grizzle Beard's,' said her husband. 'Unlucky wretch that I am! Would that I had married King Grizzle Beard instead of you!' she moaned."

But instead of going on daddy glanced at the clock and kissed the children good night.

"Thank you, daddy!" they called back at him.

Novel Parasol Trimmings

Following the trimming tendency in dresses and wraps many of the newest parasols are bordered with ostrich feathers, either in a straight fringe effect or gracefully curled. There is a fancy for a trimming in a color that contrasts with the parasol, and so one finds white taffeta with a black feather edge, black with purple and many of the vivid colors brightening the gray and beige sunshades that have come into notice during the last few weeks.

Other Feather Trimming.

However, all the feather trimming is by no means confined to ostrich. One notes the wing feathers of small birds overlapped to form an interesting and unique border. The effect is extremely striking when the feathers are in natural color posed on white, blue or pink taffeta of the parasol.

The peacock is again in favor, despite the unlucky association that has always attached to Juno's bird. The brilliant hues of that feather make an excellent foil for the delicate sunshade colors designed to carry with lingerie dresses or gowns of light-hued taffetas. Sometimes a single feather is posed at one side of the parasol.

Artificial flowers also come in for parasol notice. They are used as fringes or to entirely cover the dress accessory. Sometimes flowers are used to conceal or to define the ribs, and then they are placed on the inside of the parasol.

Indeed, the fancy for interior decoration is also noted in the employment of applique birds of velvet, satin or tissue, of irregular size, placed against the lining of the sunshade.

There are many odd shapes. Some of these are merely triangular; others are rectangular, and then there are those that simulate the form of a butterfly with wings outspread. The latter are of taffeta with a large lace inset in black or white which gives the butterfly motif.

Coaching Parasols.

There are parasols of white or natural pongee, whose hand embroideries have been executed in Japan; and for summer uses those of white linen, decorated with French and Philippine hand embroideries, will be found to accord excellently with the lingerie frock.

Coaching parasols are offered in plain, striped or flowered silks, as plain as in two-tone taffetas. This season finds the black and white stripes just as highly favored as they have been during the last three or four summers.

The stick handle is preferred for the practical sunshade, but for the fancy parasol there are variety of shapes and woods, embellished in a number of novel ways.

Ostrich Favored Again

The ostrich is popular once again. One finds ostrich boas, ostrich millinery conceits, fans, dress trimmings and the decoration of ostrich in every conceivable accessory where it can possibly be used.

In the course of the last three seasons women have accumulated ostrich feathers, which, because of their lack of fashionable status, have been relegated to the limbo of the neglected. Now is the time to recall the old tips and plumes and to have them renovated and brought quite up to date through the services of the expert workers in ostrich feathers.

If plumes are not in too bad a condition they may be made into beautiful fans; or they maye be converted into fringes for dress or hat trimmings. Then always there is the boa—a comfortable and dressy accessory—which will be just the thing to complete the summer wrap or street frock.

Uses For Discarded Feathers.

Very smart feather ruffs or boas may be made from erstwhile plumes, and if they are dyed a royal purple, a brilliant green, battleship gray or one of the soft blues additional beauty is gained thereby.

Discarded paradise sprays may also be put through a process of rejuvenation and made to appear quite new.

Frequently they are used for dressing the evening coiffure, and, of course, they are always in fashion for hat decoration. Sometimes they are combined with ostrich to give a filet effect.

Self Trimming Modish for Taffeta Frocks

Dresses of plain taffeta and of striped and flowered taffeta are good for "best" wear. These are simply made and usually finished with lingerie collar and cuffs. Sometimes the belt is of suede, of patent leather or of velvet or satin ribbon.

Sashes are reserved for the party frock, which may be of tulle, plain or novelty taffeta, crepe charmeuse, embroidered net, colored organdie or any of the delightfully printed cotton voiles or crepes which are unusually beautiful this spring.

Self trimmings are fancied for such dresses. They run from narrow plaitings small ruchings or self cordings, sometimes interspersed with embroidered sprigs or other motifs. It is considered good taste to have the sash of the old-time blues and pinks and sometimes the two are combined.

For the older girl the semi-decollette bodice is provided but her young sister usually wears a collarless guimpe and short puff sleeves.

Summer Styles for Girls

Frocks for little girls show waistlines which are Empire or Greenaway, and also the long French sash line that is placed near the knees. For the tub frocks, pique is used. For the afternoon frocks, lawn, net or light washable silks.

The slip worn underneath net or organdie dresses may be of fine organdie or a light tub silk. These underslips are often a delicate color of yellow or pink.

Very charming short boleros of the same material are worn with matching skirts. These skirts are attached to a little sleeveless top, which servies also as a slip.

Beaded Neck Chains

The neck chain of crystal beads in dull colors and engraved is a popular fad. Women are wearing such chains especially with sports coats.

One of the most popular models consists of oblong beads about one and one-third inches long and one inch wide, made of green engraved crystal with a dull finish. They are set about two inches apart and mounted on a silk cord, the colors and shades varying according to desire.

Another chain has engraved round balls placed about one and a half inches apart with smaller beads between. Of course these chains are not cheap except in the imitations, and cost about $40. One reason for their popularity is that the more elaborate jewelry does not look well with sports coats.

The crystal bracelet is also very smart, in most cases matching the neck chain.

Other Novelties.

There are many other beaded novelties, among them being the chain appearing on the wrist bag. One bag which is considered very chic is made of blue faille with blond tortoise shell beads set at intervals on the wrist strap of the faille. The frame of the bag is made of shell. It has the long elaborate chain of beads.

Another has a handle of graduated dark shell beads, which also appear in the decoration. It is made of Nattier blue and brown striped faille with appliqued motifs of brown velvet. The model was also seen in black and white silk and black beads imitating onyx.

To use for evenings these bags are made in pink or other pastel shades of velvet. If in blue, turquoise beads are used and for pink, coral.

The old-fashioned beaded handbag is coming into vogue again. In fact, every one who has anything made of beads may bring it forth and feel safe to use it, as all sizes and all varieties of beaded bags will be used.

NEWEST BATH ROBES.

The newest bath robes are those made of striped waterfall material, which is much prettier and wears much better than plain goods. They are made after the usual model, having a cord of the same material with silk tassels at the ends to confine the robe at the waist.

The neck and sleeves of these robes are finished with a narrow edging of muffion, a new, soft, grayish-brown imitation fur. This gives them a dainty touch.

DANCING FROCK FOR A GIRL.

For a little girl of modern taste is a dancing school frock all of bright green pussy willow taffeta, with frills and frills up the skirt almost to the waistline, and a prim little square necked bodice fastened to the ruffled skirt by a cording.

A guimpe of white tulle drawn up on tiny black velvet ribbon at the round neck and having puffy, short sleeves, goes under the prim little green bodice.

HATS RE-MADE.

It is something of a comfort to the practical woman to know that the fine straw of last season may be brought right up to date by a new process. Skilled hat makers reconstruct the discarded chapeau and from the apex of the crown to the edge of the brim it has all the appearance of actual newness, being cleaned, bleached and colored.

Planked Steak.

SCRUB the plank and while it is damp place it in the oven. Pan broil a porterhouse steak one and one-half inches thick four minutes. Spread one-third of the sauce on the heated plank. Remove the steak to the plank. Place a tomato which has been stuffed with well seasoned breadcrumbs and tomato pulp and baked at each end and at the center of each side of the plank's edge. Between the tomatoes arrange a border of mashed potatoes close to edge of plank, using a pastry bag and tube. Mashed potatoes for this purpose must be of such a consistency as to hold their shape and to remain fluffy. Since one border would not give enough potatoes for a family service it is necessary to put another border of potatoes on top of the first one. Cover and heap canned peas which have been washed, serrated and sauted in butter over all places where wood of plank shows. Spread the rest of the sauce over the top of the steak and cover it with mushrooms which have been drained, rinsed under faucet, aerated and sauted five minutes. Put plank in its rack and place it in a medium oven for about ten minutes to finish cooking.

Duchess potatoes are often used for planked steak, but they are not so desirable as the plain mashed potatoes, because they are more dry. This is due to the egg in them.

The cost of a planked porterhouse steak one inch thick, with one can each of peas and mushrooms, four tomatoes and about five potatoes, is $1.27.

Various accompaniments for the service of beefsteak:

Maitre de Hotel Butter.—Butter, lemon juice, salt, pepper, parsley; hollandaise sauce variations.

Brown Mushroom Sauce.—Mushrooms, butter, flour, consomme or brown stock, salt and pepper, lemon juice.

Tomato and Mushroom Sauce.—Same ingredients as mushroom sauce, with the addition of bacon or uncooked ham and tomatoes.

WOMEN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY MEETS HERE

Seventy women attended the annual meeting of the Women's Home Missions of the East New Jersey Baptist Association that was held in the parlors of the Baptist church yesterday. At the morning session held at 10:30 the Rev. J. M. Moore, of New York, gave an interesting address about mission work, and the year's business of the association was also cleaned up. At noon a luncheon was served and was followed by the afternoon session at 1:45. Miss Freda Keater, a missionary of the New York Central Park Baptist church, gave a long talk about her work, and Miss Susan Mendenhall, who is connected with the educational movement of the United States and Canada, made the last address of the meeting when she described some of the work being done in her field of endeavor.

The election of officers resulted in the same persons as held office during the past year and were: President, Miss Forater; vice president, Mrs. Keely; treasurer, Mrs. E. T. Nason, and secretary, Mrs. McWhood.

GREAT SHAKESPEARE PRODUCTION MAY 23

The Shakespeare tercentenary celebrations in New York will reach their culmination on the evening of Tuesday, May 23, when the first representation of "Caliban," the Shakespeare Masque by Percy MacKaye, written for this occasion, will be given under the auspices of Mayor Mitchell at the greatly enlarged and temporarily reconstructed stadium of the College of the City of New York. The production, employing the services of several thousand persons, will be given for five successive nights, and preparations are being conducted upon a scale which will make it possible for 100,000 spectators to observe it during that period. The artistic setting of the Masque, no less than the reconstruction, is in the hands of Joseph Urban, associated with whom in the costuming are Robert Edmond Jones and Mrs. John W. Alexander. The stage director is Richard Ordynski, and the interludes, in which great masses of men, women, boys and girls are to take part, will be under the direction of Garnet Holme. Mrs. Robert Anderson will "put on" the dances. The instrumental music, composed by Arthur Farwell, is to be rendered by an invisible orchestra of 200.

Three separate stages and what is called the Ground Circle will be required. The Ground Circle, upon which the huge interludes are to be illustrated, will be situated between the points of the immense horse-shoe supporting the seats. The stages, one behind the other, are situated at the northern extremity of the stadium, across the points of the horse-shoe but some distance away. The one nearest the audience is lower than those behind, and each has its separate use.

While the speaking roles number not more than thirty, there will be over 1,000 voices in the choral messages, and some of the ensembles will embrace between two and three thousand persons. The total cost of the production is estimated at $100,000, which has been subscribed from public spirited motives.

The business direction of the Masque is in the hands of Everard Thompson. Associated with him are Miss Mary Porter Beegle, Professor Allan Abbott, Dr. William E. Bohn, Cranston Brenton, John Collier, Miss Laura Sedgwick Collins, Mrs. August Dreyer, Max Eastman, Mrs. William Einstein, Mrs. Simeon Ford, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Dr. George F. Kunz, Howard Kyle, Miss Olivia Leventritt, Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, W. Forbes Morgan, Jr., Mrs. H. Fairfield Osborn, Miss Florence Overton, Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, Prof. Edmund Bronk Southwick, M. J. Stroock and Mrs. J. Norman de R. Whitehouse.

Among the prominent members of the theatrical calling actively interested in the Shakespeare celebration are Winthrop Ames, David Belasco, Augustus Thomas, E. H. Sothern, Mrs. Fiske, Daniel Frohman and Franklin H. Sargent.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

FITZ, JR., WILL NEVER MAKE A FIGHTER.

Rumor has it that young Bob Fitzsimmons is planning to make his debut in the professional fight ring. His one ambition is to retrieve the ring honors lost by his world famous dad but unless he has improved wonderfully since the days when he trained in the local quarters with Fitz, Sr., he probably won't stand the ghost of a show with present day ring artists. Young Bob is husky, clean-cut and can take his own part where fists are used. He would be singled out by any football trainer as a finely proportioned gridiron star but football and pugilism are two different arts and it is well not to expect too much of him in the roped arena. Considerable grooming would be necessary to mould him into a prize ring notable of his father's calibre and inasmuch as the slam-banging and teaching he received at the hands of the former champ haven't smoothed off the rough edges it is safe to conclude that he will remain "in the rough" as long as he lives. The youngster is not an apt student and is inclined to be "bull-headed," a characteristic that often peeved the old gent when the two were sparring in their Plainfield quarters in an endeavor to smooth out the wrinkles in old Bob's tactics that he might gain favor in the eyes of the New York State Boxing Commission. Do not expect too much of the boy for he'll never be the fighter his father was and he would have to be just as good as Bob, Sr., to get a whack at the crown today.

Along with seven other organizations promoting golf the Plainfield Country Club has been listed in the Jersey division by the committee in charge of the championship details for the Metropolitan Women's Golf Association. This scheme should prove a big factor in promoting the sport among the fair sex throughout the State this summer and the plan is one that will increase and stimulate competition among the crack female golfers both in Jersey and other States. It is safe to conclude that Plainfield will be well represented and the local players should be able to hold their own with the best brought forward.

It is not too much to expect that every able-bodied young man enlist in the rifle club which will be formed at a meeting in the Frost building Monday night. While it is certain that everyone able to handle a gun will not be on deck, hopes are entertained by the organizers for an attendance sufficiently large to warrant further steps. The United States government is backing the project in Plainfield and every red-blooded American citizen living about these parts should accept the opportunity to become acquainted with firearms. Preparedness is the big topic of discussion in both social and State circles these days and the formation of rifle clubs similar to the one proposed for Plainfield is going to prove one of the biggest assets in preparing adequately for war.

Baseball will be given its official introduction to local fandom today for the 1916 season. Although the city league curtain raising is still a week in advance a number of good practice games are slated for this afternoon and these will afford those interested their best chance to wise up on the relative merits of the league entries. Grooming has been going on for the past three weeks and the tentative rosters will be handed in at the league meeting in the Press office Monday night. As usual some surprises are anticipated and the managers predict that they have bagged the greatest collection of stars a league was ever blessed with in these parts.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Ten per cent. of the patrons of each of Plainfield's four banks arriving at the institutions with checks in their hands yesterday and finding out for the first time that Good Friday is a legal holiday.

Sign in Jake Moldezky's jitney bus: "If you spit on the floor at home, spit on the floor here, because we want you to feel at home."

House on West Fourth street, near Plainfield avenue, with a new extension in front just completed and having a glass paneled door, evidently taken from the demolished Vanderbeek building, bearing the startling inscription: "William N. Runyon, V. W. Nash, Jr., law offices."

Man at West Front street and Sycamore avenue allowing three cars marked "Union" to go by and stating to inquiring cop that he had been told to take a "Main Line" car for Bound Brook.

Excited woman who saw auctioneer's red flag in front of house on West Fourth street calling up the Board of Health and asking what kind of contagious disease was quarantined at that address.

Four union carpenters watching one lone non-union carpenter at work on the new building at Park and North avenues until a messenger could bring the union official having the power to "fire" the unfortunate off the job.

If it's advertised today it is likely that it is of timely interest to you today.

Sometimes a store will decide to perform a real "stunt" in value-giving on some special line. You may be sure that in all such instances the ad-readers will have earliest knowledge of the details.

It is proper that the housewife should know as much about the business of buying for the home as her husband knows about the business in which he earns his income.

PLAINFIELD STARS ON AMBOY OUTFIT

Some Well Known Local Ballplayers in Action Tomorrow at That Place.

If the weather man does not object, local professional baseball tossers will open their out-of-town season tomorrow. The Perth Amboy Pacers, who have been under the guiding hand of Billy Pfau for some time, are again going to be the representative ballists of that city. In fact, the outfit is going to do the representation stunt for the first time this season with the Degnon Grays at Long Island City tomorrow.

The Pacers represent Plainfield just as much as they do any place else. With our own Cliff Randolph hurling them over the pan and with "Nibs" Hand stopping the stray ones, the battery certainly does bear a homelike appearance. Tommy Mullen, whom the News' scribe calls "the vivacious young second sacker," will perform in the outer works along with Charley Meara, who is the property of the Boston Braves, and who had a tryout with the Yankees, and Mickey Loeser, another good ground gainer.

"Nibs" Hand and Tommy Mullen will play with the Washington, N. J., team in the Schwab (Steel) League during the coming season. However, Cliff Randolph will remain on the mound for the Pacers, and will be aided with the job by Stevens, a new artist. Stevens will get his first real workout when he faces "Doc" Hendriquez' Poughkeepsie Cubans next Friday. Cliff Randolph will pitch against the same team in the same city on Saturday. The Cubans are the same boys who represent Jersey City on Sundays, and who upheld the fair name of Long Branch last season. They have registered many notable victories and have hung one on the Yankees, Giants, Reds and Browns.

Harry "Moose" McCormick, former Giant and renowned pinch hitter, will play with the Degnon Grays tomorrow.

SPORT BRIEFS

Five of the baseball circuits will get into action during the coming week. On Wednesday, the International, the Three Eye, the Central and the North Carolina Leagues blossom out, and the Eastern League gets under way on Friday.

The best college runners in the Middle West are competing in the events at Drake University today. The field events also bring together the cream of the athletes from the universities.

Many country clubs of the Middle West are sending their best horseflesh to the Washington Horse Show, which will be held at Washington Court House, Ohio, on Monday and Tuesday.

Polo comes into prominence on the Coast the coming week, the Burlingame and San Maeto Clubs having arranged a joint tournament. The feature of the meet is the play for the Circuit Cup of the Pacific Coast Association.

The Philadelphia indoor show, set for the final three days of next week, is the center of horse interest in the East. Entries are from the leading stables, and many classes will be judged.

Yale and Pennsylvania varsity crews and second crews will meet on the Schuylkill at Philadelphia today. Roland Harriman, son of the late E. H. Harriman, will probably be at stroke oar for Yale varsity.

DUNELLENITES AHEAD BY NARROW MARGIN AT FINISH

The West End avenue field was the scene of a conflict yesterday afternoon, when the Dunellen Athletic Association trimmed the Sophomore class of North Plainfield High School by the close margin of 3-2. After the first few innings, both contingents settled down and played errorless ball, the contest being fought in a nip and tuck manner. Moraller and Huff were the opposing boxmen and both had puzzling deliveries, the former striking out nine men. The hitting of Monenzeek and Snyderwein was directly responsible for the triumph of the Dunellenites, while the clouting of Grey, Boose and Burner was the most effective for the losers.

MARTIN DISPLEASED WITH ENVIRONMENT?

So Says the St. Paul Dispatch in Commenting on the Plainfielder.

"Jack Martin, the Saints' peppery shortstop in 1915, is not a happy athlete this spring. At Pine Bluff, where the Saints played the Brewers, he confided that he almost decided not to report at all, and would not have done so if his wife had not urged him to. The Brewer environment does not seem congenial to Jack, who is accustomed to the sort of athletes that Kelley has on his roster, but nevertheless Jack will play a real game of baseball while he is on Timme's payroll. He just loves the game and plays it for all that is in him.—St. Paul Dispatch."

We would add that perhaps Jack will feel more at home now that Josh Devore has been added to the Brewer roster. Jack and Josh were the principals in a little exchange deal in the latter part of July, 1914. Josh was sent to the Braves in exchange for the local boy. At that time Devore was a member of the Phillies, to whom he later returned, and who sent him to Milwaukee.

ONE OF DRISCOLL'S MEN A VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

George D. English, captain and catcher of the varsity baseball team of Seton Hall College, South Orange, died yesterday at the college infirmary of pneumonia. He was stricken after a game played with Tufts College on April 12, when, although suffering from a severe cold, he insisted on playing. His home was in Whitman, Mass.

Dave Driscoll, former manager of the Plainfield Pets, is the coach at Seton Hall.

The Army baseball team is scheduled to entertain Seton Hall at West Point Wednesday. It is now unlikely that the game will be played.

In the High School gymnasium next Tuesday night the Zephyrs and the Athenians, colored basketball players, will stage what they term a "Scream." The "Scream" will be in the form of a battle between the boys, who will wear hobble skirts, and the girls, who are content to wage an uphill fight. Those who will take part in the travesty are: Athenians, Green, Vaughan, Venable, Daniels, Loyd, Butler, Hedgemen and Nate Clay. The Zephyrs will line up with the following on hand: Misses S. PARKER FIELD WORK A BENEFIT TO CITY

George W. Wriston Has Accomplished Wonders With Juvenile Associates.

If the present plans of George W. Wriston, supervisor of Parker Field, bear fruit this season will be a banner one in the history of that popular playground. Under the able guidance of Mr. Wriston great things have been undertaken at the Randolph road resort and success has marked each well-directed effort. This year the supervisor plans to eclipse all former records and it looks as though he would succeed.

Aside from the fact that it keeps the boys off the streets and away from evil associates, the Parker Field Baseball League has done another thing. It has developed stars, many of whom are now members of City League teams, and several of whom are the shining lights on scholastic and professional clubs. It is very hard to band together a batch of youngsters, organize a league and keep it running. Enthusiasm runs high but arguments demanding competent arbitration are bound to arise and, in fact, have frequently arisen. That the league established by Supervisor Wriston has been so successful, is due to his thorough understanding of boys and their sports.

A glance at the records made by a few of the former playground league stars will bear out the statement that the work being carried on at Parker Field is very beneficial and is in the hands of the right party. Of the boys who were stars in the Parker League, "Art" Kyle is a splendid representative. He can hit and is a corking fielder. His value to P. H. S. this year and in the past is pronounced. Benny Rosenson gained much practice in the "Kids" circuit and Oscar Dilts, Wren Townley and Frank Mullin cavorted around out there during the summer months. "Bus" Dunham, "Babe" Gleason, Johnny Dixon, Sidney Butler, Box Apgar, Phil Mills, Dick Lawton, Kid Brennan, Jim McCarthy, Vincent Mullin and many other diamond lights got their start at Parker Field. The spirit of true sportsmanship fostered at Parker Field has made itself evident wherever these fellows have performed.

If the sporting public of this city would provide a few baseball and bats the boys would have all that they need to make their summer months, months of clean, wholesome enjoyment.

The North Avenue boys spent a profitable afternoon yesterday, trimming the Washington School nine to the tune of 17 to 15. The argument was featured by consistent clouting, in which art the winners proved themselves very adept.

Reilly, hurling for the victors, was a puzzle to his opponents, and kept the bingles few and far between.

JUVENILE SAND LOT ARTISTS HAD BUSY AFTERNOON ON LOCAL DIAMONDS

Youthful diamond artists selected yesterday as "Opening Day" and the lid was pried off in big league style. The St. Mary's School team, composed of youngsters in the grades, took the Washington School artists into camp, turning the trick to the tune of 13 to 12. The battle was close throughout, this fact being due to the heavy clouting of Anthony Deady, Tommy Kyle and Barney Sachar. Each of these lads hammered the hide off the pill and stole every base in sight.

Kyle, who is a brother of the renowned "Art," of P. H. S. fame, is, like his brother, a first sacker. At that position his ability is undisputed and he demonstrated yesterday that he can handle anything that comes his way.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by. At that time the managers of the various teams will post the names of their official scorers and will also make known the rosters of their teams. The appointment of official scorers is necessitated by the fact that Nat Bernstein has offered a cup to the champion slugger of the circuit. To insure a square deal for all, the league officials have instituted the new custom.

Mills, Dunham, Apgar and McDowell have all stolen bags to their credit, McDowell and Mills leading the pilfering with three bases each.

In fourteen innings Victorson fanned fourteen men, walking two. Hutchcroft whiffed six and passed thirteen in eight frames. Davidson fanned three and walked one in two innings, while Eder struck out five and walked one in three innings. Dealaman fanned four.

PEERLESS A. C. DEFEAT LIBERTY A. C. 18 TO 11

The Peerless A. C. is supposed to have a "rep" and it is the general opinion of juvenile "fans" that they did have it yesterday afternoon when the Liberty A. C. endured the pathos of an 18 to 11 defeat on Soccer Field.

Under just what name the victims prefer to sail is hard to ascertain and it is impossible for one to find out inasmuch as Manager "Cholly" McCarthy, carrying out the theory that "to the victor belongs the spoils," walked off with the score card.

However, here is the lineup as accurately as Joseph Guinee, the little Trojan of the Liberty nine, can remember it:

THE SPORT CARD.

Weather permitting, the Plainfield Tabs and the Netherwood Champions will mingle on the Emerson Avenue Field this afternoon. This will be the final workout for the two outfits, who, by the way, were runner up and victor in last season's City League race. Jack Denny and Winters will probably be in the points for the Abstainers while Stewart and Moran will compose the opposing battery.

P. H. S. GAME OFF.

Owing to wet grounds, New Brunswick High School called off the baseball game scheduled to be played at that place this afternoon with the Plainfield High School cohorts. The next game for the Red and Blue will be with South Side, of Newark, on Parker Field Monday afternoon.

SUBURBANITE'S OPENER.

The Queen City baseball team will meet Bob Hamilton's South Plainfield team at the latter place next Sunday. Both teams will be idle tomorrow.

SCARCITY OF LABOR.

The scarcity of unskilled labor is being felt at Dunellen, where sewer contractors have found it difficult to get men for the work there. When this work was started a year ago there were any number of men to be found willing to work for $1.60 a ten-hour day. Now the men are getting $2 and only working nine hours, and the contractors are having trouble maintaining their force at the required strength. Commencing with Monday the contractors announce that they will pay $2.25 a day.

O. H. HAMMOND MAY RUN FOR CONGRESS

Assemblyman From Somerset. It is Said, Seeks Hutchinson's Seat.

Somerville, April 22.—Assemblyman Ogden H. Hammond, who was on the Lusitania, and who lost his wife when it was sunk, may be a candidate for Congressman to succeed Elijah C. Hutchinson, who voted for the McLemore resolution warning Americans off ocean-going vessels.

Both are Republicans. That they would actually engage in a primary fight cannot be said at this time, as Mr. Hutchinson's attitude toward running again has not been definitely established.

Mr. Hammond, too, may decide to await until next year and run for State Senator to succeed William W. Smalley, should the latter retire at the end of his term. Mr. Hammond has made no announcement as to his plans.

He has represented Somerset county in the Assembly for two years. He is related to John Hays Hammond.

AUSTON GULICK DIES IN FORTY-FIFTH YEAR

Auston Gulick, aged 45 years, whose home was on West Third street, near Spooner avenue, died in Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday. He was a patient at the institution one week undergoing medical treatment. Mr. Gulick was the son of Henrietta and the late Jacob Gulick, and had lived in Plainfield practically all his life. He was a mason by trade, having learned it with his father, who was a contractor for many years. Recently he had been employed by various local firms.

Beside his mother, who only recently returned to Plainfield after a several years' stay in Mexico, Mr. Gulick is survived by one sister, Mrs. Edith B. Schlick, of West Third street, and two brothers, Charles and George Gulick, also of West Third street. The funeral will be held at the home of Mrs. Schlick, 695 West Third street, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

More Men for Pershing.

Columbus, N. M., April 22.—Troops are being assembled to reinforce General Pershing's expedition. The Seventeenth Infantry has arrived from Eagle Pass, Texas, and the first battalion of the Twenty-fourth Infantry from Del Rio, Texas. The Sixth Cavalry is expected here from various points along the Texas border in the next two or three days. Trial flights were made today by two or the new aeroplanes of high power, ordered recently by the War Department for the use of the expedition. Supplies are being rushed to all the stations along the 400 miles of communication of the expedition, so that all will be prepared to stand a siege if attacked by any hostile force. The body of Private Alfred Hartman, of the Thirteenth Cavalry, was brought here today. Hartman died of dementis, it was stated by army officers. The bodies of those killed in the affray at Parral have not been brought here.

GRANTS MERCHANTS' REQUEST.

P. J. Windfeldt and A. B. Hutchinson, of the Westfield Retail Merchants' Association, and L. C. Whitehall, of the Plainfield Merchants' Association, went to New York, Thursday, and interviewed Superintendent Cristy, of the American Express Company, on the subject of having an express car on the 10:30 a. m. train from New York. Mr. Cristy agreed to grant the request and start the express service, Monday. At present the express is not received here until noon.

BOROUGH COURT CASE.

It cost Peter Blimetti, an employe of the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company $5 for a night's lodging last night. He was obliged to pay this amount to Recorder Hand in the borough court this morning for breaking in the ice company's stable, on Somerset street, while under the influence of liquor and going to sleep on the stablesman's bed. Entrance was gained by breaking a window.

GAME OFF.

The game scheduled to be played between Hope Chapel and the Y. M. A. of Bound Brook at the latter place this afternoon, has been called off on account of inclement weather.

BERLIN TO TAKE HER OWN TIME

Gerard Cables Germany Will Be Deliberate.

MAKES BAD IMPRESSION.

American Ambassador Told That the United States Insists on Immediate Reply—Teuton Officials Take Pessimistic View of Eventualities.

Washington, April 22.—The American note to Germany on the abandonment of her present method of submarine warfare is now officially before the German government, Secretary of State Lansing announced.

Ambassador Gerard reported that he had delivered the note to the Berlin foreign office. He accompanied his report with information which is not encouraging.

Germany, it now appears, is not inclined to take any immediate action one way or the other on the president's demand. The first news that has come from Berlin was that the foreign office will consider the American note at its convenience, and this is understood to have made a bad impression here. Officials of the state department said the German excuse that no consideration could be given to diplomatic matters on holidays was a poor one.

Gerard's Instructions.

It is understood that Ambassador Gerard has been given very specific instructions relative to the scope of the American demand. This is said to be the highly confidential cable which was sent the American ambassador in Berlin.

Mr. Gerard now understands that the United States government insists that Germany immediately declare and effect an abandonment of present submarine methods without further discussion and argument of any kind.

A declaration from Germany that submarine methods against merchantmen will be brought within the prescribed scope of existing international law would not be acceptable to the United States, it was explained. Germany must declare that this submarine warfare has been brought within these confines and must, furthermore, demonstrate from now on that this is the case. The sinking of a single ship illegally, whether Americans are on board or not, would automatically vitiate Germany's declaration if it was proved that a German submarine was responsible.

Wide Scope of Note.

State department officials explained that, although the president in effect demands the abandonment of submarine warfare against merchantmen, he could not have worded his demand in this way for the reason that the United States would have no right to ask that Germany refrain from using submarines as other belligerents use cruisers or other warships.

Thus, it is explained, if Germany desired to have submarines begin a campaign against commerce carriers by intercepting them, exercising the well established right of visit and search and then sinking them after adequately providing for the safety of the passengers no objection could be raised. But as this is considered obviously impracticable the effect of the president's demand is that submarine warfare against commerce carriers must be discontinued altogether.

Officials at the state department agree with the German contention that submarines are obviously not constructed for this kind of work. The craft, in the first place, are too small effectively to prey on merchant ships and keep within international law at the same time.

A submarine challenging a large vessel and then endeavoring to fulfill the dictates of international law would very probably be sent to the bottom in short order by the guns of merchant ships which those vessels have the right to carry for defensive purposes, or if the merchant ship or passenger ship were met in the open sea the inability of the submarine commander adequately to provide for the safety of the passengers or crew would be, it is explained, a stumbling block to the submarine's effectiveness. Germany has contended that because of this commerce carrying ships must be sunk without fulfillment of international law.

Effect of Demand.

President Wilson now says that international law must be complied with or submarine warfare abandoned. As it is impossible, according to both the American and German viewpoint, for submarines to obey this law and be effective at the same time, the practical effect of the president's demand is the abandonment of submarine warfare against merchantmen.

In explaining the disadvantages which submarines would suffer in attempting to carry on a cruiser warfare against merchantmen state department officials admitted that certain features appeared to involve unjust risks for the submarine commander. It was admitted that a submarine commander attempting to obey international law in an attack against an armed merchantman might fare very badly and would certainly risk his life and the lives of his crew.

"But it is not a question of whether this is just," an official of the state department explained, "it is the law of nations, and the United States is abiding by the law as it stands and not by new versions of international law which any belligerent may wish to make applicable for its own benefit."

It is partly because President Wilson strictly adheres to international law that German officials take a pessimistic view of the present critical relations. Germany contends that international law was framed before submarines were used as weapons against merchantmen and that consequently it cannot apply to the present submarine campaign against merchantmen.

The prediction is made at the German embassy that in spite of the president's note the German government will be forced to allow submarine commanders to sink freight ships around the British isles under the present methods. The kaiser will not yield, it is declared, unless England agrees to obey international law and thereby enable Germany to discontinue its campaign of reprisal.

COLONEL LIKELY TO INVADE WEST TWICE

May Arrange Tour to Antedate Conventions.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., April 21.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, according to present plans, will speak in the big convention hall in Kansas City, Mo., on Memorial day, just eight days before the Republican and Progressive national conventions are scheduled to convene in Chicago. The colonel received a formal invitation by telegraph from representatives of several patriotic and business organizations of Kansas City.

It is not at all improbable that, should conditions prove favorable, the colonel will, after the Kansas City address, make a short and strenuous tour, touching Omaha, Des Moines and Denver. Such a tour would keep the colonel in that part of the country until convention time and make it possible for him to reach Chicago on June 7, the day set for the opening of the conventions.

If this course is followed out, and it now seems highly probable, it would plunge the colonel in the thick of the fight to arouse the country just as the men who will control the Republican national convention are preparing to decide the course to be followed. Roosevelt advisers are satisfied that with the colonel on the stump in the middle west such an overwhelming sentiment for his nomination would be aroused that there could be no doubt of the result in the convention.

Developments between now and the date of the Kansas City address will decide finally the course which Colonel Roosevelt is to pursue in regard to the proposed tour. The chances are all in favor of his making the trip.

Kansas City gave President Wilson a big reception on his recent tour in behalf of his preparedness program. The Roosevelt leaders are predicting that the reception the colonel will face will be of even greater proportions. The people of that section, they say, are strongly in favor of adequate preparedness and want Colonel Roosevelt as president if a crisis is to be faced in the affairs of this country.

SPECIAL NIGHTS AT TABERNACLE SERVICES

April 26 will be Masonic night at the Tabernacle. Local Masons will attend with a commandery escort to Blue Lodges and chapter, all in full uniform. They will be preceded by a band.

Tuesday evening members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. are to go to the Tabernacle service. They will meet at the Junior Hall at 7:15 and march to the Tabernacle. Delegates from surrounding towns are expected to be here for the event.

The local Lodge of Elks has accepted an invitation to attend the services on the evening of May 9. A big crowd of Elks is expected to turn out and those in charge of the building will reserve a large space for their accommodation.

GIVEN SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

For throwing dish water and cans into the yard of a neighbor and for calling the latter all sorts of names, Mrs. George Hartfelder, of 36 Summit avenue, was given a suspended sentence of $10 when arraigned before Recorder Hand in the borough court this morning. Mrs. Charles Tamm in making the complaint against Mrs. Hartfelder said that she had been acting in the manner above described for sometime past.

Washington as a Business Man.

Washington was a man of extraordinary activity. It was his custom to rise at 4 o'clock, and he claimed that a great deal of his work was done while others slept. "My manner of living," he wrote, "is plain, and I do not mean to be put out by it."

It was said of him, "At the time of his marriage it is no great strain of metaphor to say that Washington had now his first chance to sit down since the days when he had pored over his school copybook." After the war and his first term as president Washington found his estates run down and unprofitable, yet he so redeemed his fortunes by his application to his affairs and by good business judgment that he died the second richest man in America at that time.—Christian Herald.

Light as a Cure.

Professor E. C. Titus in an address states that light is a much better cure for disease than a hot water bag or poultice. He says that when rays of light fall on the skin some are arrested by one layer of skin and some by another, while some are not stopped until they have penetrated the subcutaneous tissues. When the light is thus arrested it produces radiant heat, which has a higher penetrating power than convection heat, such as generated by poultices, etc. Radiant heat penetrates two inches or more, while convection heat is excited principally on the surface.—Exchange.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

A New Departure In Service

SERVICE

In line with our constant effort to be of service to our patrons, we have adopted a plan whereby we propose to pay our customers' household bills each month, charging the total to their account and doing away with all the bothersome detail that the householder experiences in paying from ten to thirty or more bills, monthly.

Under this plan the depositor sends us one check for the total of all the bills he or she wishes to pay, and we attend to the payment of the individual bills. In this connection we also propose to purchase commutation tickets for depositors, charging the amount to the depositor's account and delivering the ticket to the depositor a day or two before the first of the month, doing away with the inconvenience that he now experiences each time it is necessary to renew his ticket.

If you have no account with us at present, we will be glad to have you open a household account, that will enable you to take advantage of this service.

If any additional information is desired, it may be obtained at the bank, or our representative will call if you prefer. We feel sure that an investigation of this new system will speedily convince you of its many advantages.

HIPPODROME TRIP ATTRACTS MANY

Plainfielders Flock to Daily Press Office for Tickets to Big Theatre Party.

RATE IS A BIG BARGAIN

Only $1.75 for Railroad Fare and Best Reserved Seat in Big Playhouse—Well Known Residents in List of Ticket Purchasers.

Sixty-four seats for the Daily Press excursion to the New York Hippodrome were sold during the first half-hour of the sale this morning, the number passing the highest expectations of those in charge. Other applicants for accommodations on the big pleasure seeking outing to be conducted next Monday night streamed into the Press office all the afternoon and indications are that the 300 mark will be reached before tomorrow. There are 5,697 seats in America's biggest playhouse and the Daily Press has the best at its command. A large number of fine reservations may still be had but application must be made for these as soon as possible. The sale will be continued this evening and up to the time of leaving next Monday night.

JOHN JHILIP SOUSA,
Whose Band Plainfielders Will Hear Next Monday.

Miss Ethel Hall, of 973 Arlington avenue, was the first on hand. She bought three tickets and was closely followed by George Patterson, of 239 Netherwood avenue, with two more. Other early visitors included Dr. T. S. Davis, four; J. W. Schomp, 166 Grove street, three; Arthur Walls, Essex street, four; Wendell Messner, 203 Stebbins place, five; Harold Eckert, 937 West Fifth street, one; M. S. Ackerman, 131 Crescent avenue, three; Charles E. Steiner, 24 Jackson avenue, two; T. E. Currin, Jr., 62 Mountain avenue, six; Stanley Day, New Market, two, and George Ord, 622 East Second street, eight. These are only a portion of the first hour buyers, it being impossible to keep a complete list of those contemplating the visit to see "Hip, Hip, Hooray" with the Daily Press party.

Arrangements have been made with the railroad so that the special train will stop at Dunellen and the last Union trolley car will be held at the Watchung avenue depot until the Press train arrives so that Scotch Plains people may reach home. It will stop both ways at Fanwood, Clinton avenue and Grant avenue.

Charles A. Goettler, of the New York Hippodrome staff, is taking personal charge of the seat sale at the Press office and his familiarity with the seating arrangements at the Hippodrome makes it possible for him to advise those planning the trip concerning the best seats for individual likings. A chart of the seating plan is also on view and may be consulted before buying. The train schedule and other details may be found in the advertisement on another page of this issue.

The fact that some of Plainfield's best known citizens are planning to take advantage of the wonderful offer is proof enough that it will be a success.

While a few of the attractions have been mentioned, it needs to be emphasized that the Hippodrome show employs over 1,200 people, most of whom are on the stage at different times. There are a score or more of unusual scenes, making some of the most effective stage settings that New York has ever seen. The show this year is the finest that the Hippodrome has presented, the skating scenes alone being unique at this theatre, and they occupy but a small part of the time.

Sousa's "Ballet of the States" gives that great bandmaster an opportunity to lead his organization in the playing of a number of his best marches, and the Hippodrome management a chance to present the big chorus in effective costumes, appropriate to each of the forty-eight subdivisions of the nation.

Toto, the funniest clown in the world, does a number of remarkable

RAILROAD MEN TO HONOR W. E. HOYT

Plainfielder Will Be Guest of Honor at Testimonial Banquet in New York.

In celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of his birthday, William E. Hoyt, of Crescent avenue, this city, one of the best known railroad men in the East will be tendered a testimonial dinner at the Hotel Astor tonight by the railroad representatives of New York city. Covers will be laid for one hundred. C. C. Thorn, Eastern passenger agent for the Southern railway, will be the toastmaster, and those from this city in attendance will include LeRoy J. Ellis, Eastern passenger agent of the Norfolk and Western railroad, and J. E. Prindle, travelling passenger agent for the Norfolk and Western.

Mr. Hoyt was born April 24, 1856, in Buffalo, N. Y. His railway service began in 1874 as tonnage clerk of the Canada Southern fast freight line. After being several times promoted in the service of the Canada Southern fast freight line he went to the Chicago & Alton in 1879 as traveling passenger agent, becoming soon after, Eastern passenger agent of the same road, with headquarters in New York. He entered the service of the Gould lines in 1884 as Eastern passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific, and he has been identified with the system ever since, having held his present position since 1886. Mr. Hoyt has been a resident of Plainfield for a number of years, and is a member of Plainfield lodge of Elks.

LARGE SALE OF TICKETS FOR "THE MYSTIC ROSE"

The reserved seat sale for "The Mystic Rose," which is to be given at the Plainfield theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, under the auspices of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, opened this morning at the box office of the theatre at nine o'clock. A long line was in waiting and a steady stream of people kept treasurer Dave Rogers busy exchanging and selling seats.

At noon it was said the house was almost sold out for Tuesday night, with a good sale for Wednesday night, but rather a light sale for Monday, the opening night. Mr. Skilling, the composer, states that the principles and big chorus will be fully prepared for the opening night.

The committee wishes to state that any one desiring to make arrangements for box parties should take the matter up with C. F. Stout, treasurer of the committe, direct. Only one box has thus far been taken, and this for Tuesday evening. Mr. Stout can be reached at the CourierNews office or the Elks' Club.

ORVILLE T. WARING TO WED MRS. C. A. MARSH

The fact that a marriage license was issued on Friday last to Mrs. Mary Cartherine Marsh and Orville T. Waring, of this city, by the local Board of Health, became known today, the announcement being received with considerable interest on the part of the many friends and acquaintances of the couple. It is understood that Mrs. Marsh and Mr. Waring will be married within a short time.

Mrs. Marsh is the widow of the late Craig A. Marsh, for many years one of the leading lawyers of the State and corporation counsel of Plainfield. Mr. Waring, who is a widower, is the president of The Plainfield Trust Company, and a director of the Standard Oil Company, of New Jersey. He is the executor for the estate of Craig A. Marsh. Both families have been prominent in the social and business life of Plainfield for many years.

HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE IN EARTHQUAKE IN HAITI

Shock Felt at Washington.

Washington, April 24.—Two earthquake shocks of great intensity, one apparently only 1,600 miles from Washington, were recorded by Georgetown University today. The first, according to record, began at 11:31 last night and continued until 12:07, with its center 1,600 miles from this city. The second commenced at 3:08 this morning and lasted until 4:12. It was seemingly about 2,400 miles from Washington and was of such intensity as to swing the needles loose from the recording chart.

Santo Domingo, April 24.—The Island of Haiti sustained considerable damage during severe earthquake shocks last night and early today. Communication with points in the interior was broken off. There is heavy loss of life reported.

3,000 MEN AND WOMEN PLEDGE EFFORTS TO RID PLAINFIELD OF OPEN SALOONS AFTER THEY HEAR BIEDERWOLF'S SERMON FROM A PRESS EDITORIAL

Crowds at the Three Services Since Saturday Afternoon Total 16,000.

150 CONSECRATIONS

Dramatic Scene When He Found "Old Glory" Held Down by Whisky Jug—"Smash It," Yelled the Crowd.

Almost half of an audience of more than 6,000 people that heard the first "booze" sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf, arose and walked to the front of the Tabernacle Saturday evening and pledged in prayer their efforts in the fight to rid the city, State and Nation of open saloons. Many were church people and professing Christians; others were among the almost 2,000 converted here by Dr. Biederwolf, but some had never before walked the sawdust trail here or anywhere else.

Dr. Biederwolf preached to almost 10,000 people again yesterday, more than 3,000 at the afternoon service and twice that number at night. Conversions and reconsecrations during the day totaled 150. Ninety-one of them came forward last night to give their lives to God.

Yesterday afternoon the evangelist gave his famous lecture on "Russellism," which he pronounced a "ghoulish heresy," and last night he delivered an inspiring sermon on "The Resurrection."

Saturday evening, Dr. Biederwolf preached from a copy of the current edition of the Plainfield Daily Press. He held it in his hand when he came onto the platform and, after calling the name of the paper, said that it contained a "fine editorial," and he believed he would just preach from it. "It is a splendid outline for a sermon," said the evangelist. Throughout the entire evening he held the editorial page of the Press in his hand and referred to it frequently.

A delegation of almost 100 members of the local Women's Christian Temperance Union occupied seats of honor at the Saturday evening service. They marched into the Tabernacle bearing banners showing that a dozen States were dry. In the rear was a banner borne high above the others, which carried the words, "New Jersey is Going Dry." It was cheered loudly. "Mac" led the chorus choir in giving the W. C. T. U. delegation a Chautauqua salute, and Dr. Biederwolf thanked them for the inspiration of their presence, saying that the world owed more to the Women's Christian Temperance Union than to any other organization in existence. He said they had passed more bills through Congress than any other body, and that when others in the ranks sometimes felt that they had gone too far ahead with the colors, they never became discouraged but kept on fighting until the ranks came up to the colors.

The National Male Quartet sang "The Walls of Jericho Fell Down Flat," and Mr. Sluyter sang a clever and pleasing solo, "Down in the Bottom of the Glass," both being appropriate to a temperance sermon.

In asking for the collection, Dr. B. S. Hudson said that if Plainfield did not do better, the finance committee was going to have a hard time paying the debts contracted.

In answering the statement that saloons saved Plainfield from bankruptcy by paying high licenses, Dr. Biederwolf asked how many bars there were in the city. One man said seven and another eleven. He said he knew more about it than they did, and put down the number at seven. He then asked how much license each one paid. The answers ranged from $1,000 to $1,200, and again the evangelist expressed surprise that taxpayers who voted for the saloon and permitted it to run, knew so little about the business. The license in Plainfield is $1,200 a year, he said, for retail houses, and $300 for wholesale houses. He got a total of $10,000 a year that the saloons paid Plainfield people for the privilege of doing business, and said that he was adding on a thousand or more for good measure.

"If there is a farmer in the house, I want to ask him how much a good hog weighs," said the evangelist, and from the rear of the Tabernacle there came an answer, "Two hundred pounds."

"That would be a pretty good hog, but we'll put it down. Now, how much are hogs selling for just now," he asked. His answer from the same man was "nine cents a pound," which caused the evangelist to remark that Plainfield was getting its meat pretty cheap.

"Here we have it," he cried, after figuring a few seconds with a pencil. "Hogs are bringing $18 apiece, and you folks are selling out for forty cents. Don't you think you're a pretty cheap crowd."

"A man who is so low down as to sell out to this dirty business for a few paltry pennies when he knows its damning each year uncounted thousands of our boys and girls and sending them down to graves of shame and to a drunkard's hell, deserves to have his own boy become a drunkard and his girl marry a drinking man and have her heart broken and her home wrecked and her life crushed. The boy and girl don't deserve it! Almighty God, spare them! But you deserve it. God pity your miserable soul.

"We erect monuments to our soldiers, who, by their sacrifice and their death, save our country; and if it is the revenue you get from this accursed thing that's saving you from bankruptcy, don't you think it is about time to build a monument in Plainfield to your drunkards. Make it big and costly—they deserve it. Chisel a saloon with a Lemp and Budweiser sign on it. Put on it in bold relief a drunken sot lying in the gutter and a fellow with snakes wrapped all around him, and above it chisel a pinched-faced, broken-hearted mother with a babe in her arms, and cut an inscription down below and let it run like this: 'In grateful memory of the beer-guzzlers and drunkards in general who, by buying booze, have furnished the revenue to save this burg from bankruptcy.' Then on the Editorial Was Contributed by R. Henry Depew.

The editorial in Saturdays Daily Press which Dr. Biederwolf used as an outline for his wonderful sermon on "Booze" at Saturday evening's Tabernacle service was written by R. Henry Depew. It was one of the series of contributed editorials that the Daily Press has been running for some time and which have become so popular with local readers. That the editorial accusing the United States Government of being an accomplice in all the crime that Whisky causes because it is a partner in the whisky business, should have been printed on the day of Dr. Biederwolf's first temperance sermon was purely a coincidence. It was written three weeks ago by Mr. Depew while on a train, and was scheduled for publication Saturday before Dr. Biederwolf ever came to Plainfield. The contributed editorial is a weekly feature of the Daily Press.

CARRANZA DENIES STORIES OF FIGHT

Says His Men Did Not Attack U. S. Soldiers—Lopez Captured

El Paso, April 24.—A report that Carranza troops had attacked a body of American soldiers at a point near Satevo yesterday was emphatically denied this morning by Gen. Gavira, commander of the Constitutionalist headquarters in Jaurez. Gen. Gavira said that he had received no report of the engagement, and that his inquiries all brought official denials, even from Carranza.

The invasion into Mexico is still halted. Gen. Guiterrez, commander of the soldiers in control of the State of Chihuahua, has ordered that no advance be made. He proposes to fight if American soldiers move one foot further into Mexico, and has so notified Consul Letcher, who has forwarded the threat to Washington. More United States troops are being mobilized at Columbus, New Mexico, to be used in guarding the thin communicating line between the invaders and their base of supplies.

Will Execute Lopez.

Pablo Lopez, who led the raid into Columbus, has at last been captured by Carranza troops, and will be executed at once, according to an official announcement made today. The Villa bandit was shot through both legs by United States soldiers in the fight at Columbus, and had been deserted by all but three of his men when arrested. He was weak from the loss of blood and from hunger.

BRONZE MEDAL AND $2,000 FOR CONOVER

Carnegie Hero Fund Commission Recognizes Bravery of Former Plainfielder.

The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission in its annual report for the year announces the fact that G. Elliott Conover, son of Rev. Garret Conover, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Asbury Park, is among those who have been presented with a bronze medal and $2,000 for educational purposes in recognition of his bravery at Manasquan on June 21, 1914, when he saved Ruth K. Decker, aged 21 years, and attempted to save Sarena V. Roome, aged 21 years, from drowning.

The young women became distressed while bathing in the Atlantic Ocean, and a strong current carried them away from shore. There were heavy breakers, and the surf was rough. Conover and a young woman were on the beach, but there was no other person near. Conover threw off his coat, ran ten feet through the water, and then swam about forty feet to Miss Decker. He grasped her and swam on his back for about forty feet before he touched bottom; then he helped her to the beach. She could not stand alone. Although the young woman with whom Conover had been begged him not to go, he entered the water and swam about fifty feet to Miss Roome.

Conover tried to aid her as he had Miss Decker; but in less than two minutes he left her, feeling that his strength was failing. He swam about fifty feet toward shore and then returned to Miss Roome, who was floating. She had become unconscious. Conover grasped her and remained with her about a minute; and then, realizing that he soon would drown with her and seeing others getting a boat, he again left her. He reached the beach in an almost exhausted condition. Men in a boat saved Miss Roome, who was revived.

Make Advances in Verdun Fighting—Roumania Again Said to Be Sending Grain for Armies of the Kaiser—Dover Raided.

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg recently conferred with the Kaiser at general headquarters.

There is a growing feeling in Germany that the Imperial Government should make every possible concession in order to maintain peaceful relations with the United States. VON IGEL'S PAPERS BEFORE PRESIDENT

Wilson to Decide Question of Their Return.

Washington, April 24.—So important is the outcome of the controversy with Germany over the papers seized in the office of Wolf von Igel, confidential secretary of Captain Franz von Papen, recalled German military attache, that President Wilson personally will pass on the demand of Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador, for their return to the embassy.

Mr. Wilson is aware of the general character of the documents and knows the arguments advanced by the department of justice for their retention and the basis for the demands of Count von Bernstorff for their surrender. His decision is not expected to become known until after the conference between Robert Lansing, secretary of state, and Count von Bernstorff.

In passing on the case it became known the president will have before him a long statement prepared by the department of justice giving all the details surrounding the seizure of the papers and the reasons why they should be retained for use in the prosecution of German conspiracy cases. This statement the department of justice officials sent to the state department with photographic copies of the documents.

The Hsinyu was a vessel of 1,629 tons. She was built in 1889 and was owned by the China Merchants' Steam Navigation company of Shanghai.

ARMY NOT TO BE RECALLED NOW

President Yields to Pleas of Funston.

FORCES TO BE REDISPOSED

Shifting of Base Contemplated—Negotiations With Carranza Will Be Continued and Pursuit of Villa Temporarily Halted—Belief Is That Further Trouble May Be Expected.

Washington, April 24.—The American forces in Mexico will remain there for the present at least.

Announcement to this effect was made by Secretary of War Baker following a conference with President Wilson. The president approved a recomendation from Major General Funston, indorsed by Major General Scott chief of staff, that there should be a redisposition of the forces of General Pershing pending diplomatic negotiations now in progress between the state department and the de facto government of Mexico. The secretary said

General Funston recommends a redisposition of the forces in Mexico for the purpose of recuperation and pending opportunity for further co-operation with the force of the de facto government of Mexico. His recommendation has been approved and its execution left to his discretion.

The conference between the president and Secretary Baker followed a long vigil kept at the war department by the latter pending the receipt and deciphering of a lengthy code dispatch from General Scott, who went to San Antonio to confer with General Funston.

Negotiations to Go On.

Secretary Lansing, while admitting that the negotiations with Carranza would now go on, declined to state when he would send a formal reply to Carranza's request for a withdrawal of the troops or whether such reply will be preceded by informal conferences held either here between himself and Arredondo, Carranza's ambassador designate, or at Mexico City between Special Agent Rodgers of the state department and General Carranza.

General Scott is expected to remain a few days longer on the border in conference with General Funston. Secretary Baker took the ground that he could not discuss in detail the recommendation of General Funston, but would not deny that one of the steps that probably will be taken will be a relocation of the border base from Columbus, N. M., to Presidio, Tex.

"The statement made," explained the secretary with reference to the formal announcement he issued, "indicates nothing whatever as to the time of withdrawal of the American troops. The whole subject of their presence in Mexico is under arrangements and negotiations conducted by the state department."

The secretary added that the proposed redisposition of the forces has nothing to do with the attack which was made by Carranzistas at Parral on the American force under Major Tompkins, which incident he said appeared to have passed over with no recurrence of hostile outbreaks.

Must Expect Trouble.

At the same time it is understood in war deparment circles that the whole purpose of the joint report of General Scott and General Funston is that the military steps to be taken must be made with the possibility, if not probability, of further trouble with the Carranza forces.

In the meantime the chase after Villa has been temporarily halted. Although the American troops are said to be in good condition from the standpoint of health, their long chase has tired them out, and owing to the lack of hay feed for the horses of the cavalry, General Funston reported, are showing such signs of wear that a large number of remounts will have to be secured. The opportunity for "recuperation," therefore, is needed.

From a military standpoint, army officers explained, the redisposition of the troops proposed might precede either as an advance or withdrawal of the expedition. What it probably means, it is agreed, is that General Funston, pending further developments of the negotiations between the state department and Carranza, finds it imperative to concentrate his forces and guard against all eventualities.

Teutons to Vote Anti-Wilson.

New York, April 24.—Victor Ridder, the brother of Bernard Ridder, editor of the Staats-Zeitung, is reported as saying that the German-American vote was being organized in this country in a campaign against any presidential candidate not acceptable to the German-Americans and that the start of that campaign was being made now in an effort to see that no congressmen or senators were returned to Washington who were not in opposition to President Wilson.

Catch Slayer of Seventeen Americans.

El Paso, Tex., April 24.—Pablo Lopez, who commanded the Villa bandits that massacred seventeen Americans at Santa Ysabel, Chihuahua, was captured in a cave a short distance from Santa Ysabel by a detachment of Carranza soldiers and is now being taken to Chihuahua City, with three of his bandit followers, for execution, according to a message from Santa Ysabel received by General Gabriel Gavira at Juarez.

James R. Nugent to Retire.

Newark, April 24.—Reports have gained currency of late that James R. Nugent would shortly retire from active participation in politics. It was learned from a friend of Mr. Nugent that the former city counsel would "stick" in the campaign now opening and would do his accustomed share of the work up to the finish of the general election in November and that he would then retire and give some one else an opportunity to assume leadership.

"The Modern Moloch"

Great "Booze" Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Saturday Evening.

A lot of people think it's wrong to steal because God said: "Thou shalt not steal." They think it's wrong to lie because God said: "Thou shalt not lie." They think it's wrong to commit adultery because God said: "Thou shalt not commit adultery." But it has always been wrong to steal and to lie and to commit adultery. It is wrong to do these things, not because God said so, but God said so because they are wrong. And when a town sows the whiskey bottle and they both reap crime and shame and sorrow and prostitution and adultery and divorce and disease and misery and wretchedness and woe and hell and damnation in general, it isn't because of any arbitrary judgment of Almighty God, but it's because a harvest of this kind is the legitimate outcome of just that kind of sowing, and that's why God said what He did in the text.

The army of Israel had been handing it to the heathen about right, but when Joshua led them up against the town of Ai he got what was coming to him. The heathen nearly wiped them off the face of the map. And Joshua couldn't understand it and he got down before the ark and asked God why it was, and God said: "Joshua, there is an accursed thing in the midst of the army." When the city of Jericho fell God told the people of Israel not to take anything out of it for themselves because He had put a curse upon it. But there was one Jew there by the name of Achen, and he saw a fine Babylonian garment and it was too much for him. He forgot that God had a pretty sharp eye. And so he hid this stuff away in the ground inside his tent and God told Joshua instead of whining at the disaster at Ai he'd better get up and clean out his camp. "There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee." And when Joshua had purified the camp of the transgressor and his accursed stuff, he went up to that town where he had been defeated a few days before and God was with him and didn't he show that town of Ai a few things Well, I should say yes.

"There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee." There is more than one accursed thing in our midst. We all know that, and they're sucking like vampires at the life blood of the nation.

Mormonism.

There's this adulterous religion they call Mormonism. Uncle Sam ought to throw his boot at that dirty devilish thing and forget to take his foot out when he does it and kick it over the Rocky Mountains far enough to land it somewhere out in the bottom of the Pacific ocean.

And then there's the curse of public prostitution.

And then gambling is another curse that's in our midst

And there's the Godless, soulless, monopoly, and there's anarchy and other curses in our midst, but if you look for the curse of curses, the crime of crimes, the open sore of this land that search will lead you straight to the painted windows and the gilded doors of 200,000 licensed saloons where 900,000 men whose moral character we, the people of legal statute, declare to be good, pour out the liquid poison of violated harvests and gloat in devilish delight while their passion-bound victims gulp it down and stagger on to hell.

It is the American Moloch. I'll tell you what Moloch was. He was the Fire-God of the Ammonites, a huge idol made of brass and placed on a brazen throne just outside the city of Jerusalem to the south. Both the throne and the image were hollow and they kindled a furious fire in them and when the image was red hot fathers and mothers would rush up and hand their little children, the boys and girls, over to a priest and he would lay them in the awful embrace of this hissing demon who sat there with his redhot arms stretched out to take them in, and while the child would writhe and scream they would pound their tom toms and beat on their drums to drown its voice lest the father would be moved to pity and rush in and try to save it from its horrible death.

It was a method of sacrifice, and Israel in her apostacy, was guilty of its practice. But God pronounced the sentence of death upon every one of the Jewish race who had anything to do with it.

A Great Sacrifice.

I say the open licensed saloon is the American Moloch and what are we going to say to God about the 100,000 boys we sacrifice every year by casting them into the fiery arms and devouring bosom of this devilish institution we have built up on every side around about us

One day George Stuart was preaching down in Kentucky, and while he was preaching a poor Irish woman with a face that was intelligent but printed over with lines of sorrow, came down the aisle and, with her hands lifted up, said: "Mr. Stuart, Mr. Stuart, the saloons have got my boy." And George Stuart's big heart ached and he said: "How many women in this audience can hold up their hands and say with this woman: 'The saloons have got my boy.'" And he said you ought to have seen the hands go up. Some of them in kid gloves and some were in black gloves; some were white and tender and some of them trembling and all to say: "The saloons have got my boy. And he said "I don't know what kind of stuff you're made out of, but I am made of the stuff that proposes to stand by these sad, stricken mothers with their uplifted hands, and help them save their boys out of the clutches of the dreadful saloon." And the men sprang to their feet and cheered and cheered. And I want to ask you men, what are you going to do about it tonight?

And yet, men, here we are tom toming and trying to drown our conscience with our drums of specious and wordy arguments that haven't got even a tone of respectability about them.

You say you have got no right to take a man's personal liberty away from him. If a man wants to drink and wants to get drunk he's got a right. The man who talks like that is a cowardly, un-American, hellish man. You haven't got that right, even from God's standpoint, who gave you a body and a soul and you have no right to damn and destroy them. But from my standpoint your personal liberty stops where my personal right begins.

The people of every town have interests in common. If you were the only man in Plainfield you could do as you please. You could build your barn on your lawn—you own it—and dump your manure on the sidewalk. You could build a slaughter house in the middle of the street. If you had an automobile you could tear through town without a speed limit until you broke your fool neck. If you had a wife and no children and your wife died you could throw her body in the public square and let it rot. But then there are 25,000 other people in Plainfield, and you haven't got the liberty to do any such thing.

There's a law that is higher than the law that governs a man's own selfish desires and the man who howls about personal liberty and thinks he has a right to drink in the face of all the suffering and the sorrow and the bloodshed that this damnable thing has caused is not only a ranting, unreasoning fool, but he's a monster and a brute without a right to his own even to live and it'll be a good riddance for the rest of the people when he dies. There's no brain base enough to conceive, and no mouth mean enough to utter a more unmanly, un-American, un-Godly sentiment than this tom toming about personal liberty.

"Well," you say; "It's hardly a square deal for the saloon keeper. He's got all his capital in his business, and if you close him up, you'll ruin him financially."

Well, in the first place, if you did, you wouldn't be doing more than he's done for hundreds and maybe thousands in this land.

May Have My Job.

A saloon keeper's wife said to a poor woman one time:

"I don't know what I am going to do. My husband has been in the saloon business for fifteen years and he has never worked, and he don't know how to work. And now they've put the saloons out and what am I going to do?"

And that other woman said: "I'll tell you. You say your husband has been in the saloon business for fifteen years. Well, my husband has spent all his money in your husband's saloon for fifteen years and I've had to wash for a living and take care of the children. But now my husband is working and is saving his money and takes care of me and the children and I don't have to take in washing any more, and you can have my job."

But in the next place it isn't so because in the big majority of cases the saloon fixtures and the equipment are the property of the brewers and distillers, and these blood-suckers have made their fortunes already out of the misery and poverty of other people, and they could lose the whole blooming business and yet be worth as much as nearly all their customers put together."

I'd put the brewers and distillers out of business and I wouldn't give them a blooming red cent, but if this dirty booze business could be dumped into hell forever, I'd be willing to see a law to reimburse the saloon keeper if he needs it; but do you suppose we're going to let this hellish business go on with its train of wretchedness and crime and damnation and death for any fool reason like the one we've been talking about. God pity us if we're such big fools!

"Well," but you say; "We'll put the licenses up and that'll do away with the dirty joints and disreputable places and we'll make the saloon respectable."

And don't you suppose whiskey will eat out your boy's stomach and bloat his body and damn his soul whether he drinks it over a mahogany counter or a greasy pine board, no matter what the gang may pay for the license? And if I had to choose between the gilded palace and the low dive for my town, I'd take the dive instead of the palace every time. You take the low-down, foul-smelling, dirty vermin-infected booze hole with a dirty, red-nosed, sore-eyed, ragged, puking, drunken bum loafing around in it, and that place will have no attraction for your boy as long as he has one-tenth the decency of a hog.

Drags Boys In.

He won't go there. But the gilded palace with its shining decanters and mahogany counters and French plate mirrors and beautiful pictures and well-dressed patrons—that's the place that'll drag your boy in every time and there he'll learn to drink and get his ticket punched for the joint around in the alley.

A man who is so low down as to sell out to this dirty business for a few paltry pennies when he knows it's damning every year uncounted thousands of our boys and girls and sending them down to graves of shame and to a drunkard's hell deserves to have his own boy become a drunkard and deserves to have his own daughter marry a drinking man and have her heart broken and her home wrecked and her life crushed. The boy and girl don't deserve it! Mighty God spare them! But you deserve it. God pity your miserable soul.

We erect monuments to our soldiers who, by their sacrifice and their death, gave the country; and if it is the revenue you get from this accursed thing, that's saving you from bankruptcy, don't you think it's about time to build a monument in the public square for the drunkards? Make it big and costly; they deserve it. Chisel a saloon with a Lemp and a Budweiser beer sign on it. Put on it in bold relief a drunken sot lying in the gutter and a fellow with snakes wrapped all around him, and above it chisel a pinched-faced, broken-hearted mother with a starving baby in her arms and cut an inscription down below and let it run like this: "In grateful memory of the beer guzzlers and drunkards in general who, by buying bobze, have furnished the revenue to save our town from bankruptcy.' Then on the base stone put: "Erected by the boob mutts of this town."

"Well," but you say: "If you don't have the saloon you'll fill the labor market with unemployed men and so reduce wages." That kind of talk always makes me feel like I'd swallowed a fly. It makes me sick. Nobody but an idiot would talk like that. John Burns, the labor leader, doesn't say so. John Mitchell doesn't say so. T. V. Powderly, ex-president of the Knights of Labor, doesn't say so. John Lennin, the treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, doesn't say so.

How many men have the saloons thrown out of employment by making incapacitated, drunken bums of them?

Whiskey Employes.

How many men did this low down damnable whisky business employ last year? Just 62,920. That's only a drop of water in the great ocean compared with the vast army of employed men in this country. There are 7,000,000 of them. Now watch this: We spent for booze last year $1,800,000,000. We spent the same amount exactly for bread and clothing. To make the booze it took 69,920 wage earners and to make the bread and clothing it took 498,658 of them. The wages paid to make the booze was $15,252,000, and for the bread and clothing the total wage was $244,196,000. There isn't a decent mention in which the same amount of capital invested as in the liquor business won't employ twice as many men as the whiskey interests do. And if you'd take the 20,000,000 people who are living near the poverty line now and let them create a demand for food and clothing such as every man, woman and child has a right to have, we'd have a big job on our hands to find enough men to run the factories and the farms and the shops.

"Well," but you say, "It can't be done. The saloon is too powerful to be overthrown." Man, you talk like a lunatic. More than three-fourths of the United States is dry territory now, made so by the sovereign vote of the people. Why, there are people right here in this tabernacle who will see the day when the sun will cease to shine forever upon an open-licensed saloon anywhere in this land, that I know. You vote, if you are a loyal American citizen.

Overthrow it!

It's toppling now and I'd advise interested parties to get out from underneath it before the crash comes.

A Kansas City saloon keeper, who has been in the business twenty-two years, recently announced that his place was for sale at a bargain. "My reason," he said, "for quitting the liquor trade is not that I am old or rich, or troubled by my conscience. I simply have decided to get out while the getting out is good, for I believe that I can read the handwriting on the wall."

"Well," but you say, "Prohibition don't prohibit."

Any man who has studied the prohibition situation in other states knows it prohibits, and if he's honest about it, he'll admit it. Your old anti-prohibition argument hasn't got a leg to stand on.

Booze-Fighters' Side.

1. Booze-fighters by the thousands will tell you prohibition prohibits.

I've got a letter here written by a circus stake-driver from Portland, Me., to a fellow in New York city, who gave me the letter. He says, "Friend James: I'm having a good time and making lots of money," and after awhile he goes on to say, "I don't drink because you can't buy a drink up here for love or money." He closes by saying: "A good drunk when we meet again." That looks like it's doing a little something up there, don't it?

2. Commercial testimony proves it. Whose testimony is worth the most? The testimony of honest merchants and men with commercial interests, some of whom had honest doubts about the matter until it was tried, or the testimony of a lying gang who are fighting for the hell-born business for the sake of the money they get out of it?

3. The governor of every state where it has been tried will tell you it prohibits.

4. The official figures prove that your argument is all hot air. The internal revenue commissioners at Washington tell us that at a recent election, when 375,000 square miles of territory went under dry rule that the money received by the government from the liquor traffic the following year was almost $17,000,000 less than the year before.

5. Then I can prove it by the whiskey gang itself. The "Bar and Buffet," one of the whiskey organs, says "The right given to the voters of a given county, city, or township, to vote for or against saloons, is the deadliest blow the liquor business has ever received, because it is generally proven that wherever local option spread the saloon business has ceased to live." Now, what have you got to say about that, you old windbag? If prohibition does not decrease the amount of liquor drank, then why in the name of hell are the liquor makers, the distillers and the brewers doing their dirty worst to defeat all such legisaition?

Don't Prohibit.

You say: "The law don't prohibit." Well, no law prohibits, whether it's written with indelible ink on the statute books of man or written by the invisible finger of God on tablets of stone God says, "Thou shalt not steal," but men do steal anyhow. God says, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," but men do commit adultery anyhow. We've got laws against murder and theft, but men do these things anyhow, and you can enforce one law as much as you can another if you haven't got a set of spineless or low-down grafting officials on your hands who haven't got the backbone or the decency to do it. But because men violate laws anyhow does not give us any respectable ground for repealing them and saying, "Here, for $100 you can have a license to steal anything you can get your hands on; for $500 a year you can have a license to attack any girl by daylight or dark and defile her body with your hellish lust." Here's a fellow in Pennsylvania who applies for a license to steal horses. Why not give it to him, because men will steal horses anyhow? He says he will promise not to steal any horse on Sunday or on legal holidays or after 11 o'clock at night; he says if he doesn't steal them someone else will, and to prohibit it only makes sneaks and liars out of men and causes them to do it under cover. He says he's a man of good moral character and deserves the license more than a saloon keeper does his, because he obligates himself not to cause men to beat their wives, damn their children into the world, commit murder and raise hell in the community. He says he only wants to steal horses. Why not, as long as you continue to license men of good moral character, this rotten whiskey gang, for a few hundred dollars to make straggling, spewing, drunken sots and vagabonds and wife-beaters and murderers out of once clean, respectable men?

Your talk is the jibbering of a fool. No men, not one word can be said in defense of this, the most hellish institution the great field of the underworld ever established on this earth.

And if I were to name the things that have had the most damning, withering, blighting effect on the commercial life, on the home and the individual and the church and society in general, and then trace them back to their legitimate source, I would be compelled to locate every one of them to a very large extent in the whiskey jug.

An Awful Blight.

When I see the awful blight of property in this richest land God's sun ever shone upon; see its almshouses peopled and 20,000,000 people facing want and know that $2,000,000,000 goes every year for strong drink, I know then that the biggest part of it all must be traced back to the jug.

When I read our awful record of crime and see the great army of men and women filling our prisons and our penitentiaries and read the police records and hear the testimony of the judges, I know then that 75 per cent. of all this crime must be traced back to that jug.

When I see the sodden imbeciles of our inebriate asylums, the insane institutions of this land filled with the sad victims of mental ruin, and read the universal verdict of the medical profession of the effect of alcohol on the brain cells, I pity the victim in his misfortune and trace with the official statistics, 65 per cent. of it all back to that jug.

When I see the rampant anarchy of our times breathing out its threatenings against the established government and hear it incite our youth to utter disregard for law and know that the saloon is the common rendezvous of all our anarchistic agitators, I know then that you can trace it all back to that jug.

When I see the tragedies of the might-have-beens, the brilliant intellects burned out, the Poes, the Rileys, the Burns, the Lambs and others like them, and then learn something of the secret that crippled their souls and debauched their lives and robbed us all too soon of their song, I trace it all back to that jug.

When I see this unclean, adulterous curse of hell we call divorce, with its rancor and revenge, its crushing cruelty and bitter blight that has settled down like a dark pall over the homes of this land, then read that in a neighboring state 4,760 divorces were granted for drunkenness alone, while thousands more were granted for cruelty and neglect growing out of intoxication. I trace 54 per cent. of it all back to that jug.

When I see the political debauchery of these times, the graft exposures, the prostitution of suffrage and trusted men selling their country like another Judas for a price, and know as every intelligent citizens, knows of the liquor interest's domination and blighting influence in politics, I am driven once more to the same conclusion and trace by far the biggest part of it all back to that jug.

A Shadow Over Children.

When I see the shadow that is thrown every year over lives of children by the poisoned heritage of contaminated blood and know that they must all go down in their pathetic and unequal struggle for a foothold in life because the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generations and then know that 200,000 of them are the offspring of drunken, intemperate parents, I trace it all back once more to that jug.

And when I see the mental suffering, the heart aches, the scalding tears and the murdered hopes of womanhood, and read how, but the other day, a young husband went to his home and when his beautiful wife ran to meet him, shot her dead and even while kneeling over her dead body, and in a frenzy begging her to live and speak to him once more, his darling child ran into his arms and kissed him and, with the kiss, crash went a bullet through its brain, and know that rum possessed the man and then remember that more than a thousand wives last year shared an equally fatal and sometimes even more dastardly fate at the hands of drunken, crazed, infuriate husbands, I lay, of course, the charge for it all at the mouth of that jug.

And when I think of Old Glory, that has always waved for freedom—for freedom from tyranny's galling yoke—that tyranny that makes one man to be his brother's slave. I say, with you, it ought to wave for freedom from a tyranny worse than that—the tyranny of rum, and the propaganda of its infernal traffic that enslaves the whole being, soul as well as body, with chains the heaviest and bloodiest the anvils of hell ever forged out and in the name of God and home and native land I unfurl Old Glory.

The stars and stripes held down by that jug with its boodle politics and commercialized legislation—and the stainless emblem of liberty prostituted to the infernal use of the liquor traffic, do you wonder that I hate, with all the concentrated energy of my soul and heart and mind, this curse that hides its serpent bite and adder sting in the dregs of the cup—hate it for its cruelty; hate it for the homes it has wrecked; for the hearts it has crushed and the graves it has dug; hate it for its unmeasured arrogance and its grasping greed; hate it for its own black criminal heart that laughs at law, despises decency, and mocks at God, and do you wonder that I draw this weapon and ask you men today in the name of mother and wife and daughter and innocent children, in the name of homes and of God, what shall I do with the whiskey traffic and I'll be on the job.

Then he smashed the jug.

"The Resurrection"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

There are interesting subjects connected with the Christian religion, but none more interesting than the Resurrection. There are other important subjects, but hardly so important or with such a reach of significance as this one, for, "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain and your faith is vain," and "if in this life only we have hope in Christ we are of all men most miserable," and this Gospel I preach is a fake and it isn't worth half a hallelujah more than Buddhism or Theosophy or Unitarianism or Christian Science or any other system of ethics as a religion to save your soul and keep it out of hell.

You know Renan, the old French infidel, wrote up the life of Jesus and when he had brought it along as far as the Cross where Jesus died, Renan wrote the word "Finis," as if that was the end of it all, and the fellow that printed the book, his publisher, as unbelieving and even more bigoted than Renan himself, put on the fly-leaf after that lying, dismal word "Finis," a woodcut of the crucified Saviour. There He was, hanging on the cross, with drooping head and matted hair and pale, bloodstreaked face. Everybody had deserted him; the storm clouds had gathered in the sky and black-pinioned birds were circling through the gloom and everything about the scene spelled defeat.

Well, Jesus did die that way. But He didn't have to. One word from those silent lips of His and all heaven would have rushed to His rescue. I think it was all God could do to keep them back anyhow. I think Gabriel pulled his sword and wanted to lead them. I can almost see him and hear him. I can just see him hang out over the ramparts of heaven and shout, "Oh, Jesus, if you want us to come, just lift your hand and wave it; you can do it as easy as if it wasn't nailed. Nod your head, Jesus; just make some sign and there'll be something doing the world will never forget."

"It is Finished."

But Jesus said, "No, Gabriel, I can't do it; God and myself know why I am here, and it's best for me to die." And He bowed His head and cried, "it is finished," and He was dead.

Yes, it was finished. But what was finished? The redemption of the world, and when Renan wrote that word, "Finis," he bore witness to a mightier truth than ever he dreamed. But he didn't mean it that way. He meant the thing was all up and that when they laid Jesus away in the tomb of Joseph of Arimtheaahe, he rotted away like any other dead Jew.

But it was not finished. They laid Him in the tomb and they said "We'll seal it and put a Roman guard about it because He said He would rise, and we'll fix Him and show the world He was a faker." That's what they said and that's what they did. But do you remember about old king Chanute going down to the beach and commanding the tide to roll in? Well, that was a dead easy thing to expect compared with expecting that Jesus would stay in the grave when He had said that He would rise. For the bars of death could not hold Him.

Renan said the Resurrection of Jesus was a myth and that the theory of a resurrected God came out of the passion and a strong imagination of Mary Magdalene, a hallucinated woman. And Strauss and Weissaker and Haeckel and a lot of other infidels and Christless unbelievers have said other things and done everything under God's heaven to get rid of this fundamental thing upon which the whole superstructure of the Christian faith is reared. No wonder the old Devil has trained all the heavy artillery of hell against this fortress, for, when it goes, the throne of God must; it's all off with religion, and that would make hell howl with delight.

Now there are three questions I want to ask and answer about the Resurrection.

First. Could God raise Jesus from the dead?

Second. Did God raise Jesus from the dead?

Third. Why did God raise Jesus from the dead?

First. Could God raise Jesus from the dead?

Why a Thing Incredible.

When Paul preached the Resurrection those old Epicurian and Stoic philosophers up in Athens called him a "babbler" and a "setter forth of strange gods." But Paul said, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible that God should raise the dead?"

Now I am not going to waste any time with the so-called scientific arguments against the possibility of this thing. Admit God and impossibility must hike.

Most of the scientific objections to Christianity are born out of unbelief anyhow, and when they are not, it is amusing to see how unthinking belief makes an ass out of itself by using them to knife religion, until some old tablet is dug up or something turns up to tell science where to get off.

You know the science of chemistry once analyzed man and found that the brain, in its final analysis, culminated in phosphorus. My, how the discovery startled us! Phosphorus composed the "Hallalujah Chorus," painted the Sistine Madonna and wrote Tennyson's "In Memoriam," and then the wiseacres went on and had it doped out for us that phosphorus was the basis of everything. It was about the time than an old skeptic, who always took great delight in trying to argue his old darkey neighbour out of his faith, thought he had him cornered at last and said to him, "Mose, it's all up with your religion now."

"How do you make that out," said Mose.

"Well, you say the Bible teaches that all the dead shall be resurrected and we have just found out that everything is made out of phosphorus,

There was a great American flag draped over a chair on the pulpit during the sermon on "Booze," and after his dynamic denunciation of whiskey and its evil influence, Dr. Biederwolf closed with the following eloquent peroration:

"And when I think of Old Glory, that has always waved for freedom—freedom from tyranny's galling yoke—the tyranny that makes one man to be his brother's slave—I say with you that it ought to wave for freedom from a tyranny worse than that, the tyranny of rum, and the propaganda of its infernal traffic that enslaves the whole being, soul as well as body, with chains the heaviest and bloodiest the anvils of hell ever forged; and in the name of God and home and native land I unfurl Old Glory."

Here the evangelist grasped the flag and started to wave it above his head, but it caught, and as the upper folds fell loose there was revealed a giant jug, labeled "Whiskey," that held the flag to the chair.

"What! The Stars and Stripes held down by that jug, with its boodle politics and commercialized legislation and the stainless emblem of liberty prostituted to the infernal use of the liquor traffic. Do you wonder that I hate, with all the concentrated energy of my soul and heart and mind, this curse that hides its serpent's bite and adder sting in the dregs of the cup—hate it for its cruelty; hate it for the homes it has wrecked, for the hearts it has crushed and the graves it has dug; hate it for its unmeasured arrogance, and for its grasping greed; hate it for its own black criminal heart that laughs at law, despises decency and mocks at God; and do you wonder that I draw this weapon [here he picked a heavy axe from the platform] and ask you men today, in the name of mother and wife and daughter and innocent children, in the name of homes and of God, what shall I do with the whiskey jug?"

From all over the house there came shouts of "Bust it!" "Smash it!" and with one mighty swing the jug was smashed into a thousand pieces.

Russellism is a "Ghoulish Heresy," says Biederwolf.

Charles Tate Russell, known to some as "Pastor" Russell, is a shrewd business man, said Rev. William E. Biederwolf yesterday afternoon, in his lecture on "Russellism," but his whole theory is concocted for the one purpose of making a religion that is attractive for the wicked and unbelieving—the man who wants to live in sin.

Dr. Biederwolf pronounced "Russellism" a "ghoulish heresy," and at the close of his lecture he prayed that "all caught in its meshes be released from its unholy entanglement and led to the pure worship of Jesus Christ, His Son, the complete manifestation of the infinite Godhead from all eternity, in whom is all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, God of God and Very God of Very God, who is and who was as who is to come."

Despite the threatening clouds that brought rain a few minutes after the meeting began, the Tabernacle held more than 3,000 people when the service opened. Men and women were there in about equal numbers. It was said that a goodly number of believers and followers of the teachings of "Pastor" Russell were in the audience, and in opening his lecture, Dr. Biederwolf explained that his criticism was to be made in all fairness and honesty and in kindness. If he misquoted C. T. Russell, he said, at any time during his lecture or did him an injustice, he would be glad if someone in the audience would come forward after the meeting. When shown where he had been unfair to Mr. Russell, he promised to make the correction over his signature in both of the daily papers of Plainfield and to destroy at once every book he had ever written on the subject.

Dr. Biederwolf told the pastors present that they ought to preach on "Russellism," or "Millenialdawnism," as it is sometimes called, more often, as practically all of those in this faith and in others that were away from the church were former church members who had been led away through ignorance.

His lecture on "Russellism" will be printed in full in tomorrow's issue of the Daily Press.

After a number of selections by the chorus choir, the quartet sang a song. Mr. Roberts, second bass, was one of the number for the first time in a week, having recovered from his slight illness.

In asking for the daily collection, Secretary Estes, of the Y. M. C. A., said that if the meetings were to close with the afternoon service and Dr. Biederwolf and his party take a train out of Plainfield immediately, so much good had already been done that local people had received wonderful returns on their investment. He asked for a liberal donation to the expenses of the campaign, saying again that every dollar received was used to pay local expenses.

"Plainfield people have shown more good sense and courtesy than those of any other city I have ever visited," Dr. Biederwolf said at the afternoon service. "They do not criticize, and for this I am thankful; but I have a complaint to make as well as something nice to say." He then urged a greater co-operation on the part of the church members of the city, saying that not more than twenty-five per cent. of the professing Christians were taking an active part in the work, when every one should be doing his or her part.

Dr. Biederwolf announced three afternoon meetings for this week. Wednesday afternoon he will preach on "The Christian and the Card Table"; Thursday afternoon will be "Mothers' Day," and Friday afternoon he will preach on "Spiritualism." The Mothers' Day service is said to be one of the most beautiful and impressive of the entire campaign. On account of the special program, this service will start at 2:30 p. m., although the others begin at 3 o'clock.

6,000 Hear an Easter Sermon on "Resurrection."

An Easter crowd of fully 6,000 people—there were only a few seats left in the big timber Tabernacle—heard a beautiful Eastern sermon last night when Dr. Biederwolf preached on "The Resurrection." He proved by all the accumulative logic and calmly-collected facts the doubts and jeers of Atheist, Infidel and Agnostic.

In discussing the various teachings or "isms," as he called them, Dr. Biederwolf said that he had already talked on "Russellism," and that he would preach on "Spiritualism," Friday afternoon, also on Christian Science at a later date. He deplored the large number of new cults of this kind in the country today and called attention to the fact that two men in different educational institutions of position and strength were teaching boys to doubt the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. One of them, he said, is Prof. Miller of Princeton, and the other, Prof. Foster, of the University of Chicago.

"If I had a boy," said Dr. Biederwolf earnestly. "Oh, I hate to say this, men. I hate to say this about my alma mater; but if I had a boy and wanted him to grow up an infidel, I would send him to sit at the feet of Miller of Princeton or Foster of Chicago."

This statement received applause from the ministers' section to the left of the evangelist.

The Rev. Dr. Anderson made the opening prayer. In asking for the collection, Arthur N. Harris said that expenses of the campaign would be approximately $10,000, and he urged that everyone give as liberally as possible. The committee wants to clean up all expenses by next Sunday, he said, after which all the collection will go to charity.

Dr. Zelie read the scripture lesson, the quartet sang a selection, and "Mac" sang a solo, "He Knows."

Before his sermon, Dr. Biederwolf again urged Plainfielders to throw open their homes to cottage prayer meetings. He said that this work so far had been very discouraging, and he asked that all members of the cottage prayer meeting committee meet Mr. Backemeyer and himself after the service.

In the course of his sermon, Dr. Biederwolf spoke of the teachings of Mrs. Eddy. Some of her followers, he said, expected her to rise from the grave a few days after her death. "Do you know what Billy Sunday said he'd do if she did?" he asked. No one seemed to know, and he said, "Well, come up after the meeting and I'll tell you." But some of the ministers urged that he tell it then. "He said he'd eat a polecat for supper!"

Following this reference to Billy Sunday, Dr. Biederwolf added the information that he was not related to Sunday. "Every town I go into," he said, "they get it in the paper that I am Billy's brother-in-law. I am not."

At the close of the sermon, ninety-one people came forward to consecrate their lives to Christ.

DESERTER TO BE DEPORTED

Imbriani Expects to Be Shot on His Return to Italy.

Boston, April 24.—By a decision of the federal department of labor Domenic Imbriani, a stowaway, will be sent back to Italy with a prospect, as he believes, of being shot as a deserter from the army of that country.

Imbriani is twenty-four years of age. He arrived at this port on the Cretic from Naples, Feb. 11, and was captured, with four other stowaways, by customs guards while trying to escape from the ship at night.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by. The man who has a diploma from the School of Experience is pretty well fixed.

"GETTING THEM WHILE THEY'RE YOUNG."

Bob Ingersoll, the greatest orator of his day, was an agnostic. He doubted the existence of God and he talked and preached against the Christian religion through all his life. Ingersoll has never been equaled for his oratory in the history of this country, but with all his logic, all his eloquence, he was unable to bring a single soul to his convictions. One day a friend asked him why it was that he had no followers.

"I will tell you," said Col. Ingersoll. "They get them while they're young."

Ingersoll was right. "Getting them while they're young," is not the only reason for Christians, but it is one of the strongest ones. "Train a child up in the way he shall go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Saturday evening the Rev. William E. Biederwolf preached on "The Whisky Jug." His sermon was a bitter denunciation of the whisky traffic and all that it means to mankind. Whether or not he presented the case fairly has nothing to do with this editorial, although ninety-nine per cent. of the people, whether addicted to the whisky habit or not, will admit that he was right in every utterance. No honest man, including saloon keepers and drunkards, will attempt to defend the whisky traffic, except for the few pennies profit there is in it. They may plead for high license, for regulation, or for a limited authority to sell, but even the brewers and distillers are satisfied with a restricted trade.

Restricted trade! To whom shall sales be restricted? Drunkards are barred by all laws of decency and of humanity. They why not bar infants?

Saturday afternoon a reporter for The Daily Press saw a mere babe in a saloon in Plainfield. The child, a boy, was not more than five years of age. He came in with his father and stood for at least fifteen minutes while the weak, careless, criminal parent took several glasses of beer. The reporter remonstrated with the bartender, but was told that nothing could be done.

Later in the evening he visited the same saloon. (No matter what his business there—he is of age and his sins are his own.) Again he saw a child playing in the barroom—a smoke-filled, curse-stricken, beer-soaked barroom. A father had brought the boy in, and for almost a half hour the innocent infant pulled at the coat tails of his parent and begged to "Go." The reporter again urged that the father be ordered to leave and take his child with him. He was told to see the proprietor.

He saw the proprietor. "I can do nothing," was the weak answer. "There is no law to keep a father from bringing his child in here."

No law for this? There is a law that says a man who fills his own worthless hide with alcohol shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor and fined or imprisoned, and yet none which takes from him the right to lead his trusting, toddling son, with open eyes and open mind and open heart, into temptation that strong men break down before and become as weak-willed infants? If there is no law for this, then every man who ever sat in the Legislature of New Jersey, even for a day, should hang his head in shame when his eyes meet those of a respectable man or woman, and when he meets a staggering, drunken wretch on the street, he should take off his hat and stand aside, muttering as the drunkard drags by, "Forgive me, for perhaps you are one that I helped sentence to such a life."

No law for this! Then the Daily Press will help make a law, it must threaten and beg every man who goes to the Legislature from Union county as long as its press prints and its editor can push a pen.

"They get them while they're young!"

No wonder the saloon men are so defiant, so reckless, so independent. So long as they can get them while they're young they have nothing to fear from Dr. Biederwolf or any other man or woman whose heart bleeds for the youth of Plainfield and the country.

When the Press reporter suggested that Mayor Calkins, Judge De Meza and Chief Kiely would support a saloon keeper who ordered a mere infant out of a barroom filled with drunken, swearing men, the proprietor said, "I'll see my lawyer about it." There is no law, he said, to support him in keeping babies out of a barroom. We believe there is. If there is not the three officials named above are men and will protect him in making such a law of his own—protect him or any other saloon man in Plainfield. If they do not decent people who vote will put someone in office that will, for no man with the self-respect of a pup would willingly lend aid to such debauchery of innocence.

Seeking recognition for the work which the colored men have done for the Republican party, Rev. I. W. L. Roundtree, a Trenton negro, is asking the voters of that party to send him to Chicago to the national convention as an alternate at large. The honor is an empty one, and the request by Mr. Roundtree is reasonable. It is said that David Baird, the head of the Baird-Dalrymple combination, has declared in favor of Mr. Roundtree. The Trenton Times has figured it out that if the 25,000 to 30,000 colored voters in the State turn out next Tuesday and vote for this man of their own race, with the assistance of the Baird followers, they may succeed in pulling him through. This is made more probably by the fact that but little interest is being shown in the primary election, due in a large part to the fact that the Republican voters cannot express their preference for a Presidential candidate, so that the vote tomorrow will probably be light. Mr. Roundtree is well known in all parts of the State, and his very modest request is deserving of consideration at the hands of every party man who believes in fair play.

In commenting on the matter of a small Board of Freeholders, and an election on the subject this year, the Daily Press was under the impression that those who are circulating petitions were in favor of submitting the matter at the November election. The plan, however, is to have a special election in June, at great expense to the taxpayers. This seems entirely uncalled for. If the Union county people want the change, and it seems that they do, there is plenty of time to vote on it in November at the general election, thus avoiding the expense of the special election. It is to be hoped that the matter will be held over until November.

DO NOT EXPRESS YOUR PREFERENCE FOR PRESIDENT in the space at the bottom of the primary ballot tomorrow. If you do you will invalidate your entire ticket. The printing of a blank space at the bottom is in error, according to the Attorney General. This suggestion does not hold in North Plainfield, where the ballots were printed correctly.

What a difference time makes! Shakespeare, after having been dead three hundred years, gets a lot of space in the papers. If he had tried to do as much when he lived, the editors would have said it was a press agent dodge, and chucked it all in the waste basket.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

The Baseball Hero.

Though he is short on parlor etiquette and eats peas with his knife;
Though he couldn't dance a two-step or waltz to save his life,
He's the idol of adoring throngs of misses just the same,
For he hits up near .300 in the great and only game.

With the parlor conversation he's as mum as any clam,
But he's idolized as much as any William Faversham,
He's as innocent of grammar as Josh Billings e'er could be,
But he's never missed a grounder when 'twas needed, don't you see.

He is very short on Ibsen. Never heard of Henry James.
If you'd speak to him of Materlinck he'd ask how many games
Maeterlinck had ever played in. He is mighty shy on lore,
But with three men on the bases he can pound out hits galore.

He has got a country mansion and a bangup touring car,
And he travels 'round the country like grand opera's greatest star.
He makes all the other idols look prosaic, quiet and tame,
For he is the season's hero in the great and only game.

Uncle Abner

If all the loafers in this country had to go to work there probably wouldn't be enough work to go around.

Straw votes show which way the hot air blows.

Any feller who thinks that horses are gon' out of style ought to try and buy one.

So fur as I am concerned, I would ruther have a good house and lot than an automobile, but I am some old-fashioned.

It is gradually gettin' so it ain't no sure sign of the mellenium to see a preacher smokin' a cigar or goin' to a show.

There are a lot of good points about Elmer Spink's new job. He is selling barbed wire.

Hod Peters says the high cost of livin' don't cut no figger with the feller who raises his own buckwheat and maple syrup.

Anse Judson says when his daughter is travelin' she kin carry twelve complete changes in costume in a leather handbag. Clothes don't take up so much room as they used to, but they cost just as much, if not more.

Men will never catch up with women in the good old art of sawing off a board with a pair of shears or a razor.

When a feller has got to have a lot of credit for everything he does, it is a cinch that he never does very much.

It must be tough for an actor to join a stock company and have to travel around with a lot of sheep, cows and hosses.

It's easy to accumulate money in this country. After a feller gets his first million, there' nothing to it.

Long flowin' whiskers used to be a sign of great knowledge but now they are a sign that a feller ain't got no chin.

- Proctor's Theatre -

AT PROCTOR'S ALL THIS WEEK.

A notable event in the history of local theatricals is the inauguration of Theda Bara week at Proctor's which begins today. The object of this move on the part of the management is to provide the patrons of that popular theatre with a different Theda Bara picture each day in addition to the regular program, and as Miss Bara is conceded to be the most popular of screen stars, Proctor's will no doubt enjoy a tremendous business throughout the week. Her greatest successes have been selected in commemoration of this event and all patrons who can do so are urged to attend in the afternoon to secure choice seats. Today the photoplay program includes Miss Bara in "The Two Orphans." Blanche Ring, the noted stage star, and now one of the leading Paramount actresses also is featured in "The Yankee Girl," the noted Broadway success that created a tremendous furore when it was produced. There are three comedies provided, the leading funmakers in each being Frank Daniels, Sis Hopkins and Ham and Bud. Tomorrow Theda Bara will appear in one of her most tremendous success entitled "Sin," Mae Marsh, who will be remembered for her excellent work as the persecuted little girl in "The Birth of a Nation," who is forced to jump to her death over a high cliff, is featured in her first Triangle production entitled "Hoodoo Ann," a story with a worth of originality and one that fits Miss Marsh's winsome personality perfectly. A Keystone comedy entitled "By Stork Delivery" will create an abundance of good, wholesome laughter, while the latest episode of "Mary Page" is also on the program. On Wednesday Miss Bara will appear at the head of a powerful Fox cast in "The Galley Slave," Robert Mantell, whose fame as a tragedian is world wide is seen in "A Wife's Sacrifice," and the 9th episode of "The Iron Claw" with Pearl White is an added feature. Announcement is made that in the very near future William Hearst's mammoth new serial production "The Mysteries of Myra" will appear.

She Thought Him the Most Beautiful of All.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Ugly Duckling at Last Becomes a Swan.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

"A STORY; a story, daddy!" cried the children.

"Once upon a time," daddy began, "a poor duckling which was so ugly to look at that nobody loved him lay all one cold winter beside a swamp and suffered all kinds of misery till spring came. When the sun shone warmly and he lay among the rushes so discouraged he hardly cared to fly he could hear larks singing and knew at last that spring was there. Suddenly he raised his wings and was surprised to find that they were stronger than they had ever been before. They bore him off through the warm air, and before he knew it he found himself in a large garden where apple trees were in full bloom and the air was sweet with lilacs. Oh, the spring freshness after a winter in a frozen swamp was so happy!

"The duckling looked all about him and saw three beautiful swans coming out of a thicket. Their rustling feathers glided over the water, and he thought: 'Those royal birds will kill me because I am so ugly. But better be killed by them than to be snapped at by ducks, pecked by hens and nearly freeze winters.' So he dove into the water and swam toward the swans. They darted toward him with ruffled wings, and he cried, 'Kill me!' and waited for death. But what he saw reflected in the water was no longer an ugly duckling, but a beautiful swan just like the others.

"So he knew at last that it does not matter at all having been born in a duck yard if only you come out of a swan's egg.

"He felt quite glad of all the misery he had known, for now he knew better how to enjoy his good fortune of being a beautiful swan, and all the other swans swam around him, stroking him with their bills and liking him. Some little children came into the garden with corn and bread, which they threw into the water. The littlest one cried, 'Oh, there is a new one!' and the others shouted for joy and danced about. They threw a nice piece of bread to him and said, 'The new one is the prettiest of all—he is so young.' And the old swans bent their necks and did him honor. He felt quite shy and hid his head under his wing. He was too happy to think, but not at all proud. A good heart never becomes proud. He remembered how everybody had always called him ugly, but now these swans and the children called him the most beautiful of all. The sun shone warm on his feathers, and the lilacs bent down into the water. He rustled his wings and raised his slender neck. 'I never thought of being so happy when I was the ugly duckling,' he said."

"Here's a good night kiss for you, daddy," said the children.

WOMEN SHOULD GET THE HABIT AS WELL AS MEN

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexion; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's idigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

CARROT AND LENTIL SOUP.—To make this truly vegetarian soup soak a cupful of lentils overnight. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, add the lentils, a large carrot cut in slivers and an onion cut in thin slices. Heat without browning. Add a quart of water and a pint of milk and boil gently for an hour or so until the carrots and lentils are tender. Rub through a puree sieve and return to the fire. Add salt and pepper, three tablespoonfuls of cooked rice and a little minced parsley and serve when hot.

Drain and run through a colander. Season with pepper and salt, add one tablespoonful of butter and two of cream. Mix well, make steaming hot again and serve.

Carrot Jam.—Boil the carrots until tender, peel and press through a colander. To every pint of pulp add a pint of sugar and the juice of a lemon. Boil steadily for about twenty minutes or until the mixture jellies.

Creamed Carrots.—Boil carrots until tender in salted water, rub off the skin with a rough cloth, cut into inch lengths and put them into a white sauce, which you have made by cooking together a tablespoonful each of butter and flour until they bubble, pouring a cupful of milk upon them and stirring until smooth and thick. Leave the carrots in this for a few minutes, season to taste and serve.

and if all the millions and millions who have died and who are to die are to be given resurrection bodies, there won't be enough phosphorus to go around."

"Oh," said Mose, "der's no difficulty 'bout dat. Don't de Bible say the dead in Christ shall rise fust? Dey'll be plenty of phosphorus for dem what rises fust, but you and de oders like you will have to scratch 'round for your phosphorus."

The Simple Faith.

I like that simple sort of faith in the word of God anyhow. I like what Kuyper said, that great and learned Dutch statesman. My, but it's great. Listen to it. He said:

"No, my friends, the possibility of this thing which we are not going to argue. Admit God and incredulity will vanish into thin air. Do you expect to limit the God who out of nothing created the heavens and the earth, the God who hung the planets upon the air and sent them whirring and whizzing along their course crossing a thousand tracks of other worlds with minutest precision, the God who flashed a ray of created light through a water drop sparkling with His glory and left it upon heaven's transparent curtain half circled in all the bewildering colors of the rainbow, the God who made the inanimate and called into being every living thing, the author of life Himself?" "Why," said Paul, "should it be thought a thing incredible that God should raise the dead?"

Of course He could do it. And if He couldn't do it, then we haven't any God. That's all there is to it.

Second. Did God raise Jesus from the dead?

The Old Testament prophesied His resurrection. Jesus said He would rise. But did He rise?

1. There was an angel there who said He did. He said to the women on Easter morning, "I know that ye seek Jesus who was crucified. He is not here. He is risen. Come and see the place where they laid Him."

"Oh," you say, "that's all a lie worked up to help pull the wool over our eyes."

Alright; it takes more than an angel to make some people come across anyhow with their stubborn, unreasoning unbelief.

Jesus appeared eleven times after His resurrection. You say, "How do we know?"

I say, "The Bible says so."

You say, "The whole thing's a fabrication and the writers lied."

Not a Fabrication.

Examine the account with a microscope and you can tell mighty quick, it's not a fabrication. Why did they represent a weak woman suffering to carry away the body of a full grown man? If that was a lie that was to be manufactured and I had written it, I would have made her say, "Tell me where you have laid Him and I will get a dray and haul Him away." Why did they make Christ fold up that napkin so carefully? I would have made him tear it from his face, slam it into a corner and jump out on the run. And in a dozen other ways it's a mighty poor story if they made it up. Why did they write it up that way? Because that's just the way it happened. That's why.

3. The disciples said He did.

"Well," you say, "that's a lie too."

Well, but the disciples died for it and nobody but a fool will die for what they know is a lie.

4. The enemies of His resurrection have never been able to present one iota of evidence that He did not rise. The Apostles went up and down the land and hurled the doctrine into their very teeth and they never peeped except to say the Disciples stole the body. And that's a fool thing to say, as I'll show you now.

5. Now, if Jesus Christ did not rise from the dead, how are you going to account for the empty grave?

If all the infidels on this side of hell were to go into session for the purpose of exploring and overthrowing the resurrection of Jesus, I could hurl the empty sepulchre into the midst of their diabolical deliberations and utterly confound and confuse them.

The Empty Grave! Say that, and you have got them going. For they all have to admit it. The most bitter opponent does. Even old infidel Schenkel says, "It is an indisputable fact that in the early morning of the first day of the week following the crucifixion, the grave of Jesus was found empty."

Well, then, if there was no resurrection either His friends or His foes took the body away. Of course, His enemies didn't take it away; for if they had they would have produced it as the most effectual way of shutting the mouths of the Disciples who were preaching everywhere that God had raised Him from the dead.

Infidels' Advances.

Let us look, then, at some of the theories the infidels advance to get rid of the Resurrection.

1. Some of the infidels and critics of the Resurrection say the Disciples stole the body and then deliberately tried to deceive the world. That's the bluff the Jews tried to get away with. They gave large money to the soldiers, saying, "Say ye His disciples came by night and stole Him away while He slept."

But that's a fool argument. These disciples laid down their lives for this thing, and no man would die for what he knew was a lie. Men will die for error, but not for what they know is a fake. Men lay down their lives for what they believe. Even old Strauss says, "This much must be acknowledged, that the apostles firmly believed that Jesus had risen."

Come again, Mr. Infidel.

2. Well, some of them say He never died. He was just in a swoon. The odor of the spices and the cool air of the tomb revived Him and He came back and got up and left the tomb.

But there are four arguments that knock this old swoon theory into a cocked hat.

1. It makes history out of a joke. In the first place, old Strauss puts it right when he said that a man who crept forth half dead from the grave and crawled about a fit subject for a hospital could never have so impressed on the morals of the world.

2. It makes the disciples out a set of consummate asses. They recorded all sorts of things about Him after His resurrection that couldn't be true if He knew and which would arouse the keenest antagonism of those hard-headed Jews and the criticism of Gentile philosophy and challenge the dictum of science, upon a statement so flimsy and so easy to have a hole knocked through it as that. Give Him credit for a little sense anyhow.

Remoulded Their Lives.

4. It makes Jesus out an unprincipled monster. The disciples thought He had died, but He knew He hadn't. And yet this thing that remoulded their lives, this thing that furnished them the ground of their hopes, this thing they depended upon to convert the world, this thing for which they laid down their lives, He knew was a lie, and yet He never told them. You can't put anything over on Jesus like that. You must admit He was decent, if nothing else.

Come again, Mr. Infidel.

3. Well, some of them say the disciples had a brain storm. They were hallucinated. They thought they saw Him, but they never did. This is the famous vision theory. The hallucination theory is a better name for it. Old Renan and Strauss are the biggest guns in this theory.

Well, when you're talking about absurdity, you've got to go some to beat that. It's the limit. I can beat it to a frazzle in a dozen different ways.

1. If it was only a vision, how did it happen to last so long sometimes? Visions are usually over in a minute and at most a few minutes, but to walk to Emaus and other appearances lasted a long time. The theory's absurd.

2. He appeared to the disciples at the same instant and 500 saw him on one occasion. Who ever heard of this many men having the same vision at the same time? These old infidels deny one miracle and want us to substitute 500 miracles in its place. The theory's foolish.

3. If they were visions, how did they happen to end so suddenly? Hallucinated enthusiasm don't usually work that way. You'd expect more glorious visions and more frequent ones as the time went on, especially round about the time of Pentecost when people were so wrought up and in the days of persecution when they especially felt the need of his presence. But at the end of forty days they suddenly stopped. The theory's silly.

4. After the disciples found out He had really risen, they expected Him to appear in Galilee. The angel and Jesus Himself said He would and yet that very night He appeared to them at Jerusalem. If the so-called appearances were only visions and so depended on the mental state of the disciples, how are you going to explain this? It's up to you, you old four-flusher. The theory's nonsensical.

5. Any one of these arguments blows your hallucination theory into smithereens, knocks it into a cocked hat, whips it to a frazzle and puts it out of commission. But say, old skeptic, here's one that will get you. If, as old Renan says, the hallucinated imagination of Mary and the disciples gave to the world a resurrected God, how are you going to account for the fact that, in spite of what Jesus said about His resurrection, they were not expecting Him to rise?

They went on the third morning to the tomb to anoint a dead body, not to behold a risen Lord.

When they found Him gone they did not even think of Him as risen, and Mary said to the disciples, "Some one has taken Him away and we know not where they have laid Him."

When the disciples were told of His resurrection it is said, "They believed not."

The two disciples on the way to Emaus, after they had been told of his resurrection, told Christ all that had happened, but said they did not know what had become of Jesus.

Terrified and Frightened.

And finally, when He did appear instead of gasping at the fulfillment of their so-called dream and hallucination, it says, "they were terrified and frightened and supposed that they had seen a spirit."

Hallucination! Nothing! The theory's a joke. The trouble is with the fellow who got it up. He had something worse than hallucination of the brain. And yet you'll find a lot of little cap and gown professors in our universities today, like Miller at Princeton and some of the same kind at the Chicago University, who in their inordinate desire to get rid of the supernatural, will pump that stuff into their students as a brilliant discovery of their own self-estimated colossal and stupendous intellect.

Talk about being progressive. They're nothing but theological craw fish, crawling back to Renan and Strauss and back to Porphy and Celsus and other old moss-back lobsters of ten centuries ago. There's nothing to it. Jesus did rise from the dead. Mrs. Eddy says He didn't die but was alive in the tomb demonstrating Christian Science.

I suppose that's what she's doing now. But she's not getting there quite as fast as He did. They said she'd rise, but Billy Sunday says if she does he'll eat a pole-cat for supper.

III. Well, if God could raise Him and if God did raise Him, why did God raise Him? For four reasons.

1. He did it to make good the word of His blessed Son and to establish once for all and beyond all doubt the truth of His glorious divinity. I read in Romans, 1:4, that Christ was "declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead."

If, as the English poet says, the Syrian stars look down every night upon His grave, how are you going to explain His repeated claim that He would rise on the third day except that He was a liar or a lunatic?

He asked the Jews why they were stoning Him and they said, "Because you're a blasphemer." Well, He did prove it, and if He was in His right mind it was either so or it was the rankest blasphemy. And Jesus said He would prove it by His resurrection and God had to raise Him to make good His word and so prove Him to be what He claimed He was. Where does Unitarianism get off in the light of the Resurrection To perdition with the idea that Jesus Christ was only a good man.

For Our Justification.

2. He did it to furnish every believer the God-given assurance that He is justified in Jesus Christ. It says in Romans 4:25, "that Jesus was raised for our justification."

You know Jesus said He came to offer His life a ransom for many (Matt. 20:28), that He would die to make atonement, and He did. But if God hadn't raised Him from the dead we never would have known that the atonement was accepted, and so, "He was raised for our justification." And it doesn't make any difference how much you have sinned in the past, God will count you just for Christ's sake if you want Him to, but there's no way to escape the damnation of hell if you turn your back on Jesus Christ.

3. He did it to let me know that there isn't any doubt about the judgment to come. Paul said, "God hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by Jesus Christ whereof He hath given assurance unto all men in that He hath raised Him from the dead."

You know Jesus said the hour was coming when the dead would hear His voice and rise; they that had done good unto the resurrection of life and they that had done evil unto the resurrection of judgment." And they laughed and called Him a fool and God put His own seal on the claim by raising Him from the dead. There's nothing more certain in God's universe than there's a judgment day coming.

Oh, you say you don't care for the judgment! No, but you won't be in it two minutes until you'll change your mind so quick it will make your heads swim.

You're like the white fellow that beat the nigger into town. A couple of boys had gone for walnuts and coming home climbed the stone wall of a cemetery to divide them and in getting over they dropped two on the outside. A colored fellow came along a few minutes later and heard them counting them out. One of them said, "I'll take this one." "I'll take this one." "I'll take this one." He went tearing into town and ran right into a white man and nearly knocked him down. "Befo' the Lord Massa," he said, "de resurrection morning am come and the Debil and the Lord am out in the graveyard dividin' up the dead."

"Oh, Mose," said the white fellow, "you're nutty; you oughtn't to be so cowardly anyhow."

"Well," said Mose, "come on out here and you can hear it for yourself."

They went back and listened with their ears close up to the wall, and they heard the voices saying, "I'll take this one," "I'll take this one," "I'll take this one." Just then they finished and one of them said, "Now we'll get them two outside and we'll be done." And the white man beat the nigger by four blocks into town. Oh, no, you wouldn't care for judgment? You're a brave one, you are.

They, Too, Will Rise.

4. He did it so that everyone united to Jesus Christ by faith may know that they also are going to be raised from the dead. Do you remember what Paul said about the resurrection? He said, "Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at His coming."

I know the Devil sometimes gives you a good run for your faith and maybe you begin to doubt a little. You go and stand by the grave and see the coffin go down and something seems to say, "Will I ever see that dear one again?" And your own heart says, "No," everything around you says, "No." Then you think of the words of Paul, "if ye believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep in Jesus God is going to bring Him when He comes," and you brush away your tears and hear the voice of Jesus say, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in Me though he were dead, yet shall he live," and "Thy brother shall rise again; thy father shall rise again; thy mother shall rise again; thy sister shall rise again," and you thank God and sorrow not as others who have no hope.

Everything depends on the resurrection of Jesus Christ. That's the cornerstone upon which the whole superstructure of Christianity rises; undermine it and the whole business drops. It's the keystone of the arch; knock it out and the whole thing falls with a crash.

If Jesus Christ did not rise from the dead, how do I know that He is the way, the truth and the life?

How do I know that he that believeth on the Lord Jesus Christ shall be saved?

How do I know that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin?

How do I know that He has gone to prepare a place for me and that He will come again and received unto Himself?

How Do I Know?

How do I know that death has lost its sting and the grave has been swallowed up in victory?

How do I know that the spirit of God who raised Jesus Christ from the dead shall also quicken my mortal body?

How do I know that when He shall appear I shall be like that?

How do I know that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in me?

How do I know that the promises of this book are worth any more than the ink it took to print them or the paper it takes to hold them?

I don't know. There's no way to know. If Jesus Christ did not rise from the dead then I have nothing to do but to take a chisel and a hammer and go out to the grave of my loved ones and chisel away the beautiful words: "I am the resurrection and the life," and cut in their place the cold, icy and heart-breaking words, "I do not know; I have no way to tell." "If Christ be not risen," Paul says, "our preaching is in vain and your faith is vain also" and "of all men we are most miserable."

But, thank God, He did rise. They sealed His tomb, but it couldn't hold Him. He lay there cold and dead in the grave. All earth had given up its hope but all heaven knew better. I think Gabriel must have said to the celestial choir, "Hold your breath a minute now for you'll need it," and as the minute of the world's mightiest miracle ticked off the breath of God swept through the sleeping clay and like a flash of light His glorious Son was on His feet again while heaven's angelic choir rose tier upon tier and row upon row and shouted, "Hallelujah! ! ! ! Christ is risen; The Son of God is alive."

Glory to Jesus!

"Up from the grave He arose.
With a mighty triumph o'er His foes.
He arose a victor from the dark domain,
And He lives forever with His saints to reign.
He arose! He arose!
Hellelujah Christ arose."

He's up there now at the right hand of God pleading his atoning death for you and for me. Don't you feel like waving Him a Chautauqua salute, and saying, "Hurry Jesus and come back again." For when He comes again even those who are asleep in Him will He bring with Him and what a day that will be."

It Was a New Tomb.

Excuse the personal reference, but I can't help it. I saw the place where they laid Him. All four of the Gospels say it was a new tomb, and it was. In fact it was unfinished.

The golden sunlight was streaming in through the open door, for the stone was not there. The Bible says Peter stooped down and went in and so would you have to stoop if you entered. I saw four niches for members of Joseph's family that have never been occupied and one commenced but never finished and then I looked into the place where I believed my Saviour to have been laid, but Hallelujah! He was not there; He had risen. I can seem to feel the tears running down my cheeks now as they do then in that solemn presence. I bowed myself and how long I stayed I do not know. But I said, "Oh, empty tomb of Christ, tell me something of that strange morning," and it said, "Biederwolf, it was strange, indeed. Outside the birds were singing their morning carols and the sun was just shooting his silver arrows through the gates of the eastern skies but in here it was all dark and quiet and suddenly it seemed as if the blazing sun itself had dropped into the tomb and two angels appeared.

"One sat down quietly at my head and the other at my feet. Then the earth shook and I heard something snap like the breaking of a seal and the stone commenced to roll back and Jesus, who had been lying here cold and dead for three days and nights, stirred and stood up. He didn't make any fuss about it. He first took the napkin off His face and said, "Good morning, Gabriel. Good morning Michael." He folded the napkin and laid it by itself and then took off the linen clothes. He said, "Gabriel stay here, Michael stay here and tell the women when they come to anoint my body, what has taken place; I'll see you a little later in the Father's house," and just as He started through the door He disappeared and was gone. It certainly was a strange morning. When they hewed me out of this old rock I never expected anything like that. And I said, "Thank you, old tomb, and after I had waited long enough to ask God to help me be a better man I stepped through the door and walked away and I said, "God pity a man who has no resurrected Saviour; God pity a man who has no living hope and who has no faith."

I've been living with Him now for 20 years in my weak and humble way but I am walking with my eyes toward Heaven where I shall one day see Him and I want you to come and put your hand in mine and promise God you'll walk with me until the journey ends in the glory lit presence of the throne of God. Come on.

Though the weather was not all that it might have been to please the children, five hundred of them followed some of the members of the Biederwolf party and a small faction of the Dutch Arms Band to the great pine temple, where they listened to an interesting talk by Dr. Biederwolf.

"Mac" proved to be a great favorite with them, and soon had them learning a cheer which they yelled at the top of their lungs. "Mac" introduced Dr. Biederwolf to them and told them to call their full name when he dropped his handkerchief. Each one seemed to be so anxious to be sure to have the evangelist hear his or her name that the response was deafening. "Jonah and the Whale" just tickled the youngsters, when sung by Mr. McEwan.

The Saturday night service will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to be present, for the evangelist left no stone unturned as he flayed the liquor traffic. He rendered his climax so well that he received round after round of applause and cheers. A full acount of this will be found in another column of this issue.

Delegations of the W. C. T. U. of this city and the surrounding towns and cities were present in a body and marched in, carrying placards bearing the names of the States which are already dry and those which have voted dry and the law will go into effect in a short time. One of the cards called for a dry Plainfield, while another said the same for New Jersey.

Tomorrow night the Y. M. C. A. will be present in a delegation. So will the Jr. O. U. A. M.

"The Walls of Jericho Fell Down Flat," rendered by the National Male Quartet, and "Down in de Bottom of de Glass," sung by Mr. Sluyter, proved to be just what the congregation were waiting for.

Dr. Biederwolf paid high tribute to the W. C. T. U. as an organization having done more for the fight against the saloon than the church of Jesus Christ than any other organization in this country. After the evangelist had finished these remarks, the members of the W. C. T. U. gave a cheer for him. This caused Dr. Biederwolf to remark that it was the first time he had ever been cheered by any other similar organization in his nineteen years' experience.

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong led in the opening prayer for the afternoon meeting yesterday.

It looked natural to see Mr. Roberts step upon the platform in the afternoon meeting for the first time in almost a whole week to fill his regular position in the National Male Quartet.

Wednesday afternoon Dr. Biederwolf will speak on "The Christian and the Card Table." His afternoon meetings have been interesting and helpful, and he deserves good support at these meetings.

Mr. Estes had something to say about the offering.

Dr. Biederwolf challenged anyone to prove that he was historically wrong or that he misquoted any of "Pastor" Russell's words in his address on "Russellism or Millenial Dawnism."

The meeting which was to have been held in the First Baptist church tomorrow afternoon for High School girls has been postponed until the next Tuesday, May 2.

"Mac" sang a great solo in the afternoon meeting, "Christ Redeemeth."

Thursday will be a big day, for it is "Mothers' Day." A big meeting will be held in the Tabernacle, beginning at 2:30. The dear old shut-in mothers will receive flowers, and some of the old folk will be brought in automobiles to the Tabernacle, where they will listen to a talk by Dr. Biederwolf.

Arthur N. Harris, as did Estes in the afternoon, reminded the people of the necessity of clearing up the expenses as soon as possible, and also emphasized the fact that Dr. Biederwolf does not receive one cent of these offerings. His money comes on the last day, when he receives a free-will offering.

Watch this paper closely for news about "Mothers' Day."

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

That a bad beginning foretells a good ending is the belief of some people. Even baseball enthusiasts sometimes wax sentimental and count their chickens in this way. Saturday was about as poor a day as one could anticipate for the baseball curtain raising and not a few fans were disappointed by not being able to carry out their plans for an afternoon's diversion. Some teams started their programs as scheduled but the weather was anything but favorable and no idea of the playing merits of any one combine could be garnered.

City Leaguers will convene in the Daily Press office tonight. Important business is on tap and every delegate should make it a point to be on deck when the roll is called. One of the surest roads to failure is neglect on the part of representatives to attend league meetings of this kind and if we're going to have a healthy organization we will have to have a full attendance at this important session tonight.

Although the other nine teams on the circuit have not yet completed their schedule the Cadillac quintet has cinched the championshop in the Elks' house tournament. In winning the alley title the Cadillac team, which is captained by J. E. Waldorf, established one of the most remarkable records ever hung up in a local bowling event. Pitted against competition of a high calibre the winners came out ahead in twenty-five engagements and lost but two. The percentage is a remarkable one and little doubt exists as to the identity of the best five-man team of pin-splitters in the Elks' Club. Why not give this same outfit a whack at Junior or Senior League representation this fall? Primarily each bowling tourney should have as its obejct the selection of the most suitable aggregation to represent the club in outside events and with Mr. Waldorf at the helm this five should prove itself a capable and reliable color bearer.

Plainfield will have at least one representative in the annual Penn relays even if Plainfild High School should decide not to send delegates to the monster track and field classic this year. Although Ralph Runyon will compete under the colors of Penn State College he will be recognized as a Plainfield entry, having been taught all he knows about athletics on local soil and in local gyms. Ralph is expected to win first laurels in the pole vault and running high jump this year and we haven't a doubt but what he will make good. As the years roll by Runyon adds inches to his records in these two events and by the time he lands in the senior class at Penn State there is every reason to expect that he will be a world beater.

What has become of Jack Fritts? This question naturally arises every time a big athletic meet is staged and particularly where the name of Ralph Runyon is mentioned. Fritts might be given credit for teaching Runyon the fine points of the athletic game. He labored many afternoons with the Plainfield youngster, giving him tips on how to better his marks and deserves a large share of the praise for bringing him around to the point where he is fit to meet the best in the game. Fritts would like nothing better than to oppose his old pupil in the two events in the Penn relays but his position in New York requires closer attention than the one he had here did and as a resuult he has been forced to pass up athletic competition. His name is missed by all who love sports and we would like nothing better than to see him don running togs again and compete against the younger generation.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Conductor of a Union trolley car on West Front street inviting slow death from infection by biting half dollar to test its genuineness.

Young man on Liberty street with a hopelessly crippled limb looking pointedly at passersby and singing, "You Made Me What I Am Today."

Time, late last Saturday night; scene, North avenue station of the N. J. Central; action, well known North Plainfield woman lurking in the shadows and watching each incoming train for a recreant husband whom she had been told had gone into New York early in the evening with an affinity; finale, wife wending her way homeward alone while disappointment showed plainly on the faces of nineteen taxicab drivers, station employes and curiosity seekers who had been put "hep."

Sign printed in large letters and hung conspicuously in a West Third street place of business: "Come in without knocking and go out the same way."

Excited young man who had just left the Biederwolf Tabernacle, Friday night, making the air blue with cusses on Giraud avenue when he found that someone had stolen his bicycle lamp while he was listening to the évangelist preach on "The Wages of Sin."

Prominent business man who has a multitude of cares but not too many to take a few minutes to thank a new policeman for his kind and courteous treatment of an old lady crossing West Front street during a rush hour of traffic.

HUSTLING BORO WILL HAVE A BASEBALL NINE

Although Dunellen was unable to secure admission to the City League it appears that the hustling borough is to have a baseball team anyway. After Dunellen's application to join the league was refused it was announced that Warry McLaughlin and Lou Dixon, the popular local battery, who were in back of the movement, had dropped the idea of giving Dunellen a team, but the demand for a team in Dunellen is so great that they recently reconsidered their decision. Elwood Waller, Jr., of Dunellen, has been interested in the proposition, and with his assistance McLaughlin and Dixon will endeavor to raise money to finance the undertaking. It is their idea to put a first class team in the field and to play all first class teams within a radius of 27 miles. It is figured that if a good attraction can be staged every Saturday that the team will draw heavily from the fandom of this city as well as Dunellen.

ATHENIANS vs. ZEPHYRS.

A basketball game of more than passing interest will be played on the High School court tonight, when the Athenians meet the Zephyrs in a regulation thirty-minute contest. Although the young men will be handicapped somewhat with hobble skirts, they claim that the fact will not hinder them in the least and they will show their ability even under the girls' code of rules. The game will start at 8:30.

WILL PLAY CHECKERS.

A checker tournament, under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee, will be conducted at Washington School auditorium, beginning Monday night, May 1. Joseph Edgar will act as chairman and a meeting has been called for tonight to make preliminary arrangements.

HANDICAP COMMITTEE WANTS CO-OPERATION

Westfield Club Sends Out Appeal to Members for Assistance.

The handicap committee of the Westfield Golf Club has sent out the following interesting letter to the club members:

"The handicap committee desires the hearty co-operation of all members in making the coming golfing season most interesting and successful.

"The usual number of competitions will be held and it is to be hoped that all members will make a point of entering.

"The greater the number of entries the greater the interest and the keener the competition.

"New handicaps, based on the Calkins system, will have to be arranged at an early date and the committee may find it necessary to withhold handicaps from members who have not furnished scores at that time. Therefore, the members should be careful to turn in all cards.

"The playing season will officially open with the commencement of the Spring Cup competition on April 29, and the cup will be awarded to the player reporting the best average of three net scores between that date and May 31, inclusive. This will probably be the last event played under the old handicaps.

"The committee will welcome any suggestion made in writing by members, and such suggestions should be handed to any member of the committee, or to the superintendent."

TWENTY-FIVE SHOOTERS COMPETE AT METUCHEN

Twenty-two shooters faced the traps at the Second Annual Sweepstakes of the Metuchen [illegible] and Gun Club, held on Gub Club [illegible] Metuchen, Saturday afternoon. [illegible]le from the trap breaking, having to wait for targets to arrive from Perth Amboy and a few other things, which marred the serenity of the dispositions of some (and nobody blames them), everyone had an interesting afternoon's sport.

The regular program consisted of four 10-target and one 15-target event. There was a silver loving cup for high gun of the entire regular program, and the competition for it was keen, straight scores being made in all events. Carey Nicholas, however, shot consistently well and took the trophy, with 49 breaks out of a possible 55; John Barclay getting second place with 48 breaks to his credit, while Hugh Tingley and Tom Brantingham, of Plainfield, and Rose, of Perth Amboy, tied for third place with 47 breaks each.

Nicholas won first place in the doubles event, breaking 15 targets out of 10 pairs, while Rose, Guest and Seidler tied for second with 14 apiece.

The Moss-Cramer tie for the Savage rifle, which has hung fire for so many weeks, was finally shot off at today's shoot in a special 25-target event, and although Cramer had only a handicap of 2 as against Moss' 6, he shot in good form, overcame Moss' lead of 4 and won out by 2.

In a special 15-target event, first, second and third places went to Brantingham (14), Nicholas (12) and Rose (11) respectively.

SILVER LOVING CUP FOR EUCHRE TOURNEY WINNER

The euchre tournament between St. Joseph's, St. Mary's and Holy Name societies of North Plainfield and Plainfield, respectivevly, and St. John's Society, of Dunellen, will begin in St. Joseph's Hall, Thursday night. The winner of the series will be awarded a silver loving cup. The succeeding two sittings will be held on the following Thursday nights in St. Mary's Hall and St. Joseph's Hall.

RUNYON ENTERED IN PENN RELAY EVENTS

Plainfield Boy Will Compete in Pole Vault and Running High Jump This Year.

Ralph Runyon, former Plainfield High School track captain and all-around athletic star, has sent in his entry for the University of Pennsylvania relays. He will represent Pennsylvania State College in the running high jump and pole vault, two of his specialties.

Since leaving Plainfield High School last fall Runyon has had the benefit of a college coach's training, and he has devolepd wonderfully as a result. Prior to this year he was handled principally by Jack Fritts, a fellow clubmate in the Pastime A. C., of New York, and coach of the P. H. S. track athletes. Runyon can now clear the bar in the high jump easily at six feet, and has done several inches over that mark In the pole vault he has a mark to his credit of over twelve feet.

His records at Penn State line him up as one of the premier athletes of the college world, and great things are expected of him in the Penn relays next month. His college friends are looking upon him as a sure winner in both events, and it is likely that he will not disappoint them.

Runyon is a Plainfield bred athlete, in fact he might be singled out as one of the products of Parker Field. On the local playground he did most of his training, and while a student at P. H. S. he spent a large part of each afternoon when the weather was favorable a running suit practicing or vaulting. Diligent training has made him a star.

He is yet in his 'teens and only a freshman in the Penn State College. What he will amount to in the athletic world before he reaches a senior is a topic for wide speculation. Runyon is adept at all branches of sport, and will probably make good in other lines at college. While at Plainfield High he carried the Red and Blue to victory in many preparatory and high school meets, and was without a per in the pole vault event in scholastic circles.

HURST STRONG ON REPARTEE.

Hugh Jennings, John McGraw and several other stars were once invited to accompany some rich New Yorkers to Europe. The latter were taking some race horses to the other side for the English meets. They chartered a boat and traveled in style, which was noted by Tim Hurst.

The following summer the umpire gave a decision which Jennings didn't like.

"You're blind!" yelled Jennings.

"You're crazy," answered Tim.

"Well, I may be, but I don't charge the American league $5 a day for board and then live at some sailors and soldiers' hotel and knock down the difference," howled Hughey.

"Ah, you don't, eh?" queried Tim, with a glitter in his eye.

"You bet I don't."

"Well, when I go to London I'll go on a gentleman's ship and not on a cattle boat!" shrieked Tim, and Jennings took the count.

RUBE MARSHALL LOOKS GOOD.

Detroit Players Like Manner In Which Young Pitcher Performs.

Ball players, who are all more or less superstitious, always have held that when some sort of a "nut" joins a team it is sure to win the pennant. The Tigers as now constituted have Rube Marshall, one of the most original birds that the game knows of. Marshall, despite his oddities, possesses a lot of pitching ability, and he has a fine chance to make the team.

He has caught the fancy of Billy Sullivan, the veteran tutor of pitchers, and Manager Jennings as well, and he will be carried longer than some of the performers obtained before he was. Marshall is one of the most willing individuals on the team. He is putting in a lot of time learning things he admits he does not know, and to the surprise of every one he is learning them without any apparent effort.

JAY GOULD IN RARE FORM.

World's Champion Court Tennis Player In a Class by Himself.

Jay Gould is still the greatest court tennis player in the world. He recently defeated Joshua Crane in masterly style at the Racket and Tennis club in New York city. It was the eleventh year in succession he defended his American title successfully. A few days later, with W. H. T. Huhn as his partner, Gould defeated Charles Sand and Payne Whitney for the championship in doubles. Gould was in remarkable form.

At present it looks as if there is not a man in the world who has a chance to take away his honors. Gould won the world's title from George F. Covey in Philadelphia.

Sullivan Making Star Out of Boehler.

Billy Sullivan, who is with the Detroit Tigers as instructor of pitchers, intends to make a star out of George Boehler. He has been with the Jennings forces for several years and always has displayed a lot of stuff, but has lacked control.

THROUGH THE GREEN

By "Joe" Greene.

Did you ever think that in keeping your eye on the ball instead of the point you aim at you do something contrary to almost every other rule of daily life. It took a woman to bring out the "truism" that in golf you do things backward. For instance, she said, "When you sew a button on clothing you look at the holes in the button, not the needle. In croquet your eyes are on the hoop—not the ball. Suppose you throw a brick at a cat—do you keep your optic on the brick?"

Apropos of the articles that have gone around setting forth the idea that playing golf shortened life, is the testimony of the head of a leading London commercial house, who recently died at a ripe old age. He said, "I have played golf for health, gone to business for pleasure and engaged in fishing for rest."

Two important tournaments will be added to the list of the professionals this summer if the present arrangements go through. One will be the big event of the Professional Golfers' Association, and the other is the revival of the "pro" tournament at Van Cortlandt Park.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Wean, of Park avenue, today announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Isabel Wean, to Sydney Howell Karr, of Big Pool, Md., formerly of Plainfield. No date has been set for the wedding.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

In his address on what he styles "Millenial Dawnism" at the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon, Dr. Biederwolf offered to publicly retract any misstatement made by him upon its being called to his attention, provided that proof of the error was submitted.

Relying upon Dr. Biederwolf's good faith in making that offer, several members of the International Bible Students' Association sought an interview with the noted revivalist at the Tabernacle immediately after the evening meeting.

The purpose for which the interview was sought was to call to the preacher's notice a halfdozen or more points in his discourse at which he had either mis-quoted Pastor Russell, or contradicted himself. As evidence of the exact wording used by Dr. Biederwolf, stenographic notes were and are available. As evidence that he misquoted the writings of Charles Taze Russell, president of the International Bible Students' Association and compiler of the six volumes of "Studies in the Scriptures," a set of that work was offered with page number and paragraph reference for comparison with Dr. Biederwolf's version of the same.

Mr. Roberts, who responded to the request for a hearing, pleaded fatigue on behalf of the preacher in excusing him from a personal interview. He offered to arrange an interview at the convenience of the applicants ,suggesting Thursday or Friday of this week, but when pressed for an earlier appointment suggested communicating with himself by telephone Tuesday morning.

J. F. Rutherford, a member of the bar of the State of New York, has written a pamphlet entitled "A Great Battle in the Ecclestical Heavens" which is a complete reply to the statements made by Dr. Biederwolf. Copies may be had of the local secretary, I. B. S. A., G. Harvey Bogert, 436 West Fifth street.

PATROLMEN'S BASEBALL LEAGUE TO REORGANIZE

Agitation has been started in Elizabeth for the reorganization of the Patrolmen's Baseball League, and Plainfield has been mentioned as one of the anchors around which the formation will be made. For two years pats the league has been more or less active, but it is the aim of the policemen now to put it on a firmly organized basis.

Plainfield has the makings of a good team, in fact, an even better one than we have had on previous years, and the local coppers are keen for the organization idea. Westfield, Elizabeth, Newark, New York, Jersey City and several other cities are also in line for a franchise on the circuit.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD COURTS HAVE A BUSY SUNDAY

George Martin and John Wicarish, both of South Plainfield, were arraigned before Justice P. F. Kaine of that place yesterday afternoon, on a charge of fighting. The former was fined $10, and the latter, $15. Officer Everhardt had a little trouble in landing the men in the lockup, as they resisted arrest. Justice Kaine gave the men a severe lecture after imposing the fines.

Frank Phillips, also of South Plainfield, thinking it was his duty to stop a fight going on in front of his brother's residence last night, received several hard blows for his trouble. Joe Gessik and John Eke were engaged in the fight, and Phillips tried to separate them, when the combatants turned on him. Phillips swore out a warrant for the arrest of Antone Eke and his son, John Eke. The case will be heard before Justice Kaine tonight.

The Ladder of Roses, a beautiful scene, has been the cause of drawing hundreds of people a second and third time to witness it, the climbing American beauties, as typified by a great number of handsome young women, being a great sight. LOCAL FIREMEN AID IN SAVING FINE RESIDENCE

Responding to a telephone appeal from Mrs. Edward F. Clark, Chief Doane sent the Nott pumping engine and a corps of men from headquarters to the Clark home on lower Park avenue, to help put out a fire at 8:30 Saturday night. When the apparatus arrived, after a splendid run, the firemen found Mr. Clark desperately fighting the flames in one of the lower rooms with a garden hose. He had cut a number of holes into the partition to better get at the blaze and through his own efforts held the fire back until help arrived.

He stated to the firemen that the blaze was caused by an open fireplace.

The Plainfield men relieved Mr. Clark with the garden hose and also used hand extinguishers, putting out the flames after fifteen minutes' work. The damage is placed at about $150. The property is located on Park avenue at the Oak Tree road corner and has only recently been greatly improved. It was formerly occupied by Colonel Harding. Mr. Clark, who is a counsellor at law with offices at 165 Broadway, New York, showed his appreciation to the Plainfield firemen by giving them a check for $10 for the pension fund before they started for home.

NEW YORK LIBRARY WORLD'S BUSIEST

London and Paris Collections Serve Half as Many Persons.

WAR INCREASES PATRONAGE

Thousands Use Documents For Business Research—Foreign Newspapers Popular—10,384,579 Books Borrowed During the Last Twelve Months, Not Counting Those Read In Building.

The New York Public library now leads the world in number of readers, according to the annual report for 1915. The large increase in the number of persons who use the library for research as well as for recreation has been due for the most part to the European war, according to E. H. Anderson, director.

As a result of the war the library has become an immense laboratory for scientific investigators, particularly those seeking information regarding new industries that have sprung up in this country. The report also says:

The newspapers are being consulted more than ever for statistics regarding the prices of securities and of merchandise. They are also being used by persons who wish to get first hand knowledge of the history of newspapers and of such subjects as advertising, headlines, cartoons and editorial articles. Writers of plays and short stories consult the older papers for local color. The war collection of newspapers from forty different European cities has been useful to newspaper reporters and a continuous source of interest to other readers. A test in December, 1915, showed the approximate daily average of persons entering the newspaper division to be 1,375.

"There has been a lively interest in the printed material relating to the technical side of the European war," according to the report. "Investigators have been studying opportunities for new industries, notably in the coal tar and petroleum products. Students came to find the cost of producing potash in Germany, the French standard gauge for nails, the effect of alkali on concrete, a method for spinning asbestos, a description of canal boats used on the river Arno, dimensions of German heavy artillery, etc. These are merely representative questions, taken from a great number of inquiries."

Many Newspapers Read.

The report says the immediate interests of today appear to be in the reading rooms devoted to current periodicals and newspapers.

"The volume of work performed by the library," says the report, "and the number resorting to it show constant increase. The average number of readers is almost double the numbers using the British museum of London or the Bibliotheque Nationale of Paris."

The number of books borrowed last year was 10,384,579, compared with 9,516,482 in 1914, and in the year 2,558,717 persons used the library rooms for study and reading.

There were 996,574 books and 312,853 pamphlets, a total of 1,309,437 pieces, in the reference department of the central library at the end of 1915. The circulation department, including the branch libraries, had 1,100,952 volumes. The total number of pieces in the library was 2,410,379.

Reviewing the work of the library, the trustees say: "All of this, it must be noted, has been accomplished without any corresponding increase in the invested funds of the corporation or in its income. The income for circulation is almost entirely derived from an appropriation by the city.

"We have been able to make our income and outgo balance only by cutting down expenditures for books and binding and by ruthlessly eliminating from our budget a variety of items for purposes which were strongly urged as desirable."

POSTAGE STAMPS LIGHTER.

German Dyes Exhausted In Washington, but Supply Is Coming.

Even when one sticks on a postage stamp one faces a shortage in German dyes. This was admitted by Director Joseph E. Ralph of the bureau of engraving and printing when his attention was called to a statement in the North German Gazette that lack of German dyes had caused a change in the colors of some American postage stamps.

"It is true," said Mr. Ralph, "that the lack of German dyes has resulted in a slight change in the color of our stamps. The red two cent stamps are lighter. The eight cent stamp, which used to be olive green, is yellowish green. Slight color variations may be noted in other stamps, as we have been without German dyes for about eight months.

"We have been forced to use what you might call adulterated colors, either imported or domestic. These cost more and are not so good. I recently paid in New York $1 a pound for 'reds,' whereas this color could be purchased a year ago for about 24 cents. The new dyes have only about one-fourth the coloring strength of the old.

"We expect to get in a shipment of German dyes within the next few weeks. Both England and Germany have agreed to let this shipment come through on the understanding that it is strictly for government use. When this is received the postage stamps will brighten up in appearance."

Delay In Answering Note Viewed Favorably.

SIGNS ARE AGAINST A BREAK

Germany Said to Be Determined at All Costs to Prevent Rupture With the United States—Von Jagow and Ambassador Gerard Hold Conference.

Berlin, via Amsterdam, April 24.—It is expected here that the middle of this week will see Germany's answer to President Wilson's virtual ultimatum on its way to Washington.

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial German chancellor, has returned from the general army headquarters.

Of all the signs and hints and omens with regard to the outcome of the crisis between the two countries this very delay of Germany's answer is the most significant. It points clearly to decided yielding on the part of the German government, a dignified and gradual but none the less complete accession to America's demand that the lives of American citizens must be safeguarded.

If there is any one in the United States who deludes himself with the idea that Germany wants war with America or that she is about to defy America by saying, "We can go no further; if you want a break you take the consequences," is sorely unfamiliar with the aims and the ways and methods of the German government in international policies.

Were Germany courting a break with the United States, were she thoroughly convinced that there is "not one scintilla of justification for the American demands," as some individual hotheaded editors have been asserting, then there would have been flashed across the cable inside of twenty-four hours after the presentation to the foreign office of the American note a brief, curt, decided reply telling the American government in so many words that what it asks is impossible to grant and that this is Germany's last word and closes the incident.

Even the kaiser's absence from Berlin would not have prevented that. The last paragraph of President Wilson's note is clear enough to be put into one or two code words and sent by the special wire running from the foreign office to the kaiser's desk at the imperial headquarters.

What is really coming to pass in Germany at this moment is a feverish preparation for a submission to American demands—not, to be sure, for a complete abandonment of the submarine warfare, but of that which is asked in Mr. Wilson's closing paragraph, a declaration and a putting into effect of an abandonment of its "present methods" of submarine warfare against passenger and freight carrying vessels.

No Mere Guesswork.

This is no mere guesswork or speculation. It is a statement based upon close observation of the things that have been said and heard here in authoritative quarters upon knowledge of the German government's aims and methods and direct statements made by men close to the governemental rudder, whose names can of course not be divulged at this time.

The delay in answering the American note is, it is true on the face of it, a direct defiance of President Wilson's request that Germany's declaration and the coincident putting into effect of a modification of the present undersea boat warfare be forthcoming "immediately." In reality it is, however, the most optimistic sign in the whole situation; also it can be stated positively that the foreign office has seen to it that the delay is explained in Washington.

Dr. von Jagow, the foreign minister, and Ambassador Gerard had an hour's conference. Immediately upon its conclusion the American ambassador is believed to have informed his government that there will be a delay and that accession to the American demand "immediately" is impossible.

When the German answer is finally written there will be embodied in it no doubt an explanation of the delay. It will be pointed out that the facts and assertions put forth by the United States government "were very carefully considered." In addition to this there may be an explanation that these facts and assertions served the foreign office to "supplement and complete" its own investigation of the cases and questions at issue.

Request For Evidence.

It will be remembered that Germany's last note requested the United States government to present any further facts that might be in its possession with regard to the attack on the Sussex and the sinking of the four other ships. That request was in fact the most significant passage of the note, for it was an indirect admission that knowledge of other facts might prompt Germany's realization that the Sussex was after all attacked by a German submarine.

Now the evidence offered by Washington is even to the most biased German so sweeping and so convincing that already there are many doubts expressed here whether the foreign office and the admiralty were in possession of all the facts.

For these reasons it is by no means impossible, but rather probable, that Germany will yet disavow the attack on the Sussex. With regard to the other sinkings, no disavowal or yielding in any form is expected. The German note will be couched in conciliatory terms; it will be a plea.

To prepare the German public for such a note is not an easy task after it has been for months led to believe that there will be no yielding in the submarine question. The preparation for such a sudden change of front as is now necessitated by the American ultimatum takes time, and that is one of the chief reasons for the delay.

Strictest Orders Given.

Meanwhile the strictest possible orders have been given to submarine commanders, orders which it is believed and hoped will preclude any attack or destruction that will force the United States to act on its ultimatum without awaiting Germany's answer. It is significant that there has already been an almost complete "lull" in submarine activity as compared with the wholesale sinkings which marked the whole of March and the part of April prior to the new German-American crisis.

Summing up the entire situation, these are the conclusions inevitably to be reached from a study of the "atmosphere" and the events of the past forty-eight hours:

Germany is determined at all costs to prevent a break with the United States—that is, a rupture of diplomatic relations as threatened by President Wilson. For whatever may be the views of the United States government, here there exists not the slightest doubt that if the two ambassadors and their staffs are sent home there will be war, and the German U-boats will sink practically "everything in sight."

Flowers of the Sea.

Like the land, the sea has its flowers, but the most brilliant of the marine flowers bloom not upon plants, but upon animals. The living corals of tropical seas present a display of floral beauty that in richness and vividness of color and variety and grace of form rivals the splendor of a garden of flowers. The resemblance to blossoms is so complete that some persons find it difficult to believe that the brilliant display contains no element of plant life, but is wholly animal in its organization.

Among the sea animals that bloom as if they were plants are included, besides corals, the sea anemone and the sea cucumber. It has been remarked that the birds and butterflies of the upper world are replaced by fishes of curious forms and flashing colors, which dart about among the animal flowers.—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

The Dead Man's Hand.

Charms as cures for sickness were common in England a century ago. Lady Wake, who was born in 1800, tells of a grewsome cure adopted for the removal of some birthmarks which disfigured her face. Her mother was persuaded that "a dead man's hand laid upon my cheek and hands would effectually remove the marks," she writes. "As a man could not be killed for the occasion, it was necessary to wait till some one died. An old man at last did die in one of the nearest cottages, and I was taken there in my sleep. I remember afterward being constantly stopped by the widow, who always examined my cheek in order to ascertain the state of her husband's body, as the marks, she told my nurse, would certainly fade away as he turned into dust. Whatever the cause of the cure, the marks in time disappeared."

Gunpowder and Artillery.

There is abundant evidence that the origin of gunpowder and artillery goes far back in the dim ages of the past. The Hindu code, compiled long before the Christian era, prohibited the making of war with cannon and guns or any kind of firearms. Quintus Curtius informs us that Alexander the Great met with fire weapons in Asia, and Philostratus says that Alexander's conquests were arrested by the use of gunpowder. It is also written that those wise men who lived in the cities of the Ganges "overthrew their enemies with tempests and thunderbolts shot from the walls."

Ball That Hit Napoleon.

There rests in the Paris musee the grapeshot ball which struck Napoleon before Ratisbon, April 23, 1809. The bullet, which caused but a trifling flesh wound, was picked up by an officer and treasured by him and his descendants until one finally gave it to the institution, where it is now on view. That was the great Bonaparte's only wound.

His Attachment.

The tramp looked over his dilapidated garments when at a safe distance from the farmhouse.

"I can't see," he muttered, "why such a big fuss is made over the dog's instinct in attaching himself to man!" —London Telegraph.

Experience—Plus Good Intent

EXPERIENCE—engineering skill—enable a manufacturer to do either of two things—skimp, and yet make the product look the part—or make it true all the way thru.

LOTS OF MONEY is made by skimping—no use blinking the fact. It's there. In the short run—big dividends for a few years.

SO AFTER ALL it simmers down to the matter of experience alone; not equipment alone; not facilities, but good intent.

WE RATHER LIKE THAT TERM, good intent. It means so much. It is so much to you as a buyer.

FOR SINCE YOU CAN'T see the heart of the metal—since you can't know till you've driven it a few months, just how well your car is made, the one thing you can tie to—your only real guarantee, is the Good Intent of the men who made it.

FOR IF YOU KNOW that those men honestly intended to put the best they knew into the making of that car, you know it must be a good car—Good Intent backed by long experience and recognized skill.

REO GOOD INTENT is proverbial; Reo Integrity is as well known in automobile circles as Reo Factory Facilities and Reo Experience—and those are conceded to be the best and largest in the industry.

LOCAL AUTO DEALERS EXPECT RECORD SALES

Plainfield Handlers of Motor Cars Optimistic Despite Gasoline Cost.

Despite the rise in the cost of gasoline and gloomy prospects for a decrease this summer local automobile dealers are predicting one of the greatest seasons in the history of the auto selling games. Already many cars have been disposed of by Plainfield dealers and orders for many others have been placed.

According to one of Plainfield's largest auto handlers the big cars seem to be the most popular this year and the output of this type will probably exceed that of the roadster model by a considerable margin. Little difficulty is being experienced in the delivery of cars and local buyers have been supplied with little delay.

When queried concerning the possible decrease in the cost of the fuel essential to running the cars local dealers are far from being optimistic. Present indications are that "gas" will continue to hover around the twenty-six cent mark and dealers and users may consider themselves lucky if it doesn't soar higher.

It would be hard to single out the type of machine that is the best seller in Plainfield for there appears to be a fairly even distribution of the leading models. Several new makes have been introduced here this year and in each case have proven good sellers.

HOLD UP WATCHMAN.

Not for a long time have mtorists hereabout been subjected to such a brazen hold-up as one reported from the neighborhood of Westwood. Complaints have been prepared for submission to the State highway authorities. An automobile, on approaching a temborary bridge over a small stream at Rivervale, near a roadhouse called Broodside Hall, on the road between Westwood and Tappan, N. Y., is hailed by a red-faced man who proclaims himself the watchman. He says: "I'm the watchman. You can't cross that bridge unless you tip me." When asked the other day if the structure was dangerous the watchman at first said it was not; then, when the tip was refused and the motorist became angry, he contradicted himself as follows. "It's not safe, and you must cross at your own risk, but you can't do that until you tip me. In this the motorists decided not to cross and made a detour of many miles.

ACCESSIBILITY IN A MOTOR CAR AND WHAT IT MEANS TO THE MOTORIST

(By Edwin A. Craig.)

The days when a driver had to carry enough tools to make any kind of a repair on the road are over, also the days when "he had to get out and get under," and yet accessibility means more today to the motorist than ever before. A man driving his own car usually wants to wear the same clothes he wears to business, and in the event of his having to make an adjustment, or even when giving the grease cups a turning down, he doesn't want to have to stand on his head nor climb under the car.

A few years ago a chauffeur was a necessary adjunct to the car, whereas today probably 90 per cent. of the medium priced and higher priced cars get along first rate without a chauffeur. Accessibility has done this probably more than anything else, bu not entirely. Some of the more up to-date automobile concerns have a system of monthly inspections by experts taking care of all of the looking over of the car for loose nuts and bolts, adjusting and tuning up the entire chassis and giving all working parts a thorough lubrication. Naturally this is not as well as a high-salaried chauffeur could do it and better than the average one would.

Then the fact that it occurs at regular monthly intervals insures the car against most of the ills that occur from neglect or abuse. In the writer's experiences every car requires their attention, the highest priced new car as well as any other. The storage battery operating the starter and lights, for instance, requires distilled water added to replace the water evaporated by the heat of the current from the generator to charge the battery and keep it strong. Also, the storage battery should be tested for specific gravity by use of hydrometer, and the reading mentioned to the owner, enabling him to make certain as to its condition until next inspection day.

The spring clamp nuts, it will be found, can be tightened due to the slight settling of the springs both front and rear. Failure to do this may mean a broken spring. Body bolts need tightening as a rule every other month, and so on to the cylinder nuts and many other important points where a "stitch in time" means a saving of expense and laying up of the car. Here, again, accessibility plays a large part. When inspection is going on if working parts, such as transmission, gears, differential gears, clutch plates and engine bearings are inaccessible, how can the mechanic, in going over the car determine their condition? Perhaps a roller bearing needs adjusting to take up wear or some part is not getting the lubrication it should and will soon go to pieces. These and many other troubles can easily be seen and quickly remedied if accessible and easily got at during an ordinary inspection.

When it comes to an overhauling or replacing of worn parts the amount of the bill for labor is more than cut in half if the designer of the car succeeded in making it really accessible. Take, for example, motor bearings, in some cars it is necessary to take the motor out of the frame and turn it upside down to take up crank shaft and connecting rod bearings, while in others these can be perfectly adjusted and all wear taken up by merely removing hand hole plates on one side of the crank case.

The clutch can be removed from some cars only by moving the transmission, drive shaft and entire rear construction, usually a day's work for two good men, whereas on one car the writer knows of the clutch (and it is a multiple disc clutch, too) can be taken out easily in a half-hour's time.

Possibly no one has given more time and attention to the matter of accessibility than R. E. Olds. He has succeeded in making each unit of the car so that it can be thoroughly inspected in a few minutes and easily removed and replaced if necessary, and so standardized each unit that a required new part for any year's model can be readily obtained on short notice from the nearest branch or agency of the Reo Motor Car Co.

PLAINFIELD ROADS NOT BAD AFTER ALL

When Those Surrounding the City Are Taken Into Consideration at This Time.

Road conditions in and about Plainfield and leading to principal points of interest furnish the main topic for discussion in local garages these days. For the most part the thoroughfares in the immediate vicinity of Plainfield seem to be the best while those on the outskirts are filled with ruts and bad holes. The main road through Dunellen is particularly bad and the upper end of Park avenue is not much better.

Park avenue has been in a deplorable condition the other side of Muhlenberg Hospital for some time past and the winter snows have not bettered it any. Bad bumps come close together and the autoist who travels over it must expect a shaking up.

South avenue going through to Westfield and Westfield avenue going through to Elizabeth are not so bad, in fact these are two of the stretches that appear to be in fairly good condition. One must expect the mountain pathways leading up to Watchung and over to Morristown and Summit to be in bad shape. They are in worse condition this year than in several years past and during the last two weeks some stretches have been well nigh impassable.

ANOTHER BIG EXPORT GAIN.

February exports of automobiles and parts made a gain of 138.7 per cent. over February, 1915. According to figures issued by the Department of Commerce, the exports in February last were as follows: $6,176,367; passenger cars, 5,651, valued at $4,063,429; parts, not including tires and engines, $2,173,409. For February 1915, the exports were 1,002 commercial cars, valued at $3,022,482; passenger cars, 2,230, valued at $1,785,330; parts, not including engines and tires, $564,976.

TO RACE FAMOUS CAR.

Harry S. Harkness, it is said, will drive the famous Blitzen Benzen this year, probably appearing for the first time on the Sheepshead Bay track. This is the car Bob Burman, now dead, drove a mile in 25.40 seconds at Daytona, Fla., in 1911, a record never equaled. Harkness has the car, which is over seven years old, at Sheepshead Bay, in his garage.

NEW FORD RECORD.

There were 58,329 Ford cars manufactured in March, valued at $24,176,585. This is a new monthly record, and is 14,450 more than were made in March, 1915. A new record for a day's output was made March 25, when 2,768 car were completed.

BRICK ROADS GROW IN FAVOR.

A rapid increase in the mileage of vitrified brick roads in this country is predicted in a new bulletin (No. 246) of the United State Department of Agriculture. Such roads possess distinct advantages—durability under all traffic conditions; afford easy traction and moderately good foothold for horses; and, third, are easy to maintain and keep clean. However, they are expensive to construct.

350 MILES ON GALLON OF OIL.

With economy as the object, one of the large automobile companies recently made investigations as to how far the average car should travel on a gallon of lubricant. As a result of several tests it was announced that 350 miles ought to be the distance for the car, but such a record can be maintained by giving the matter of economical lubrication constant attention, the officials said.

READY FOR GOOD ROADS CONGRESS

Auto Clubs of State Meet Next Saturday.

TO GATHER AT LAKEWOOD

Egan Bill Referendum to Be One of Important Items Discussed—Ocean County Association to Serve as Hosts. Attractive Program Has Been Arranged.

New Brunswick, April 24.—The program for the good roads convention in connection with the spring meeting of the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey next Saturday, in Lakewood, has been practically completed, according to an announcement made by Louis A. Voorhees of this city, secretary of the association. The convention will be called to order by State Senator Thomas A. Mathis of Ocean county at about 9 o'clock in the Lakewood hotel and will be preceded by a banquet beginning at about 6:30.

Perhaps the most important item of business before the convention will be the report of Joseph H. Wood, chairman of the legislative committee of the association. This will deal with the Egan good roads bill, which will come before the voters of the state at the general election in November. It is thought that Mr. Wood will outline a form of missionary work to be carried out by the association through the members of the club within its fold.

W. G. Schauffler, a former president of the state association and now a member of the executive committee of the Safety First federation, will talk on "Safety First and Its Relation to Good Roads." Augustus V. Hamburg, president of the association, who will turn the chairmanship of the convention over to Senator Mathis as a complimentary honor, is expected to talk on the work of the organization.

The Ocean County Automobile association, which will serve as hosts to the associated clubs, is making plans for the entertainment of the visiting delegations. A request has been made by the home club that the visiting parties arrive in Lakewood as early in the afternoon as possible, in order to take in the personally conducted tour through the Gould and Rockefeller estates and the Laurelton chicken farm, which is said to be the largest in the world. Visits to Pine park, the Cathedral drive, Cemetery hill, from which a viey of the coast from Atlantic Highlands to Bay Head is said to be possible, are also on the program. An emergency indoor entertainment has been arranged in case of rain on Saturday. The Ocean County club is also looking into the comfort of the wives and friends of the visitors.

MOTORCYCLIST KILLED.

Collision With Auto Results Fatally For Leon B. Gould.

Essex Fells, April 24.—Leon B. Gould, twenty-three, of Gould avenue, North Caldwell, was killed in a collision between the motorcycle he was riding and the automobile owned and driven by William H. Spowers of Rensselaer road, Essex Fells, which occurred on Roseland avenue, at the Erie railway crossing.

Gould was going south on the avenue when he met an automobile bus. At the same time he turned out to avoid the bus Spowers, who was driving up behind the bus, attempted to pass it and his automobile crashed into the motorcycle, throwing Gould off. Gould was taken into a nearby house, where he died shortly after from a broken neck.

Spowers was held in $2,500 bail by Police Recorder McChesney for the grand jury on the technical charge of manslaughter.

Gould, who was the son of Mahlon Gould, a prominent farmer, was in the electric supply business and leaves a widow and baby.

Named After the Saint.

St. George is always turning up on the Danube, from St. Georgen, in Baden, which disputes with Donaueschingen the claim to possess the real source of the river, to the St. George's branch, the southernmost mouth at the delta. Giurgevo is one more of the places named after the saint. It began as San Zorzo or San Giorgio in the fourteenth century, when it was founded by the Genoese. In modern times Giurgevo has twice made history. It was the terminus of Roumania's first railway, the line from Bukharest, opened in 1869, and in the Crimean war it was defended with stubborn fury by the Turks, costing the Russians 30,000 men to take it.—London Standard.

ROOSEVELTS READY TO DIE FOR COUNTRY

Colonel and Male Relatives Willing to Fight.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., April 24.—Theodore Roosevelt announced in a statement issued at Sagamore Hill that in the event of a war involving the United States he and his sons and his son-in-law will offer their services to the nation. He deplores, however, the policy of the administration in neglecting to prepare the country for such an eventuality. Adequate preparation and a firm policy, he asserts, would have made war impossible. Colonel Roosevelt said:

"In the event of such a war my four sons will go and one and perhaps both of my sons-in-law; I will go myself; the young kinsfolk and friends of my sons will go; so my words are spoken with my eyes open.

"It is of small consequence what happens to us of the older generation, but when I think of the young men my heart grows bitter that their fine and gallant lives should be sacrificed, not to the nation's need, but to the nation's folly.

"I would far rather see them dead than see them flinch from their duty when the honor of our people is concerned, but if we now go to war these young men and all their fellows will die in thousands of fever and dysentery and lung trouble in the camps, because we have not prepared in advance, because they and those who would lead and care for them have not been trained in advance.

"They will be butchered needlessly in battle because we have failed to prepare masses of artillery and machine guns and motortrucks and shells and aeroplanes and have failed to provide and train the men who shall manage all the formidable and delicate mechanism of war."

450,000 ATTACK VERDUN.

Paris Estimates Thirty German Divisions Have Been Used.

Paris, April 24.—In their attempt to take Verdun the Germans have made use of thirty divisions of troops, amounting roughly to 450,000 men, according to an official statement issued by the French war office. The statement indicates that more than this total of men have been used, since some of the divisions have been reorganized, their depleted ranks filled out, and they have returned to the front several times.

"It is worthy of note," the official statement says, "that the German command seeks to conduct the operations with the smallest number of troops possible, but to maintain the operations until the troops are completely used up."

TUBE STRIKE SETTLED.

Harrison Workers Gain Concessions in Hours and Wages.

Harrison, April 24.—The strike of 400 employees of the New Jersey Tube company has been settled. Liberal concessions were made to the men by James Close, president of the company, after two conferences had been held.

Hereafter the men will work fifty-five hours a week and receive fifty-nine hours pay, and they will receive a 5 per cent bonus on their wages from Jan. 1 to April 1, a 10 per cent bonus from April to July 1, and after that a 15 per cent bonus. They struck for a reduction in hours to fifty a week and an increase in pay of 7½ per cent.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

Expressing Money in Terms of Shoes

When a man leaves this store with a purchase, he has in his possession the same value as he had when he entered our doors. The only difference is that the value is now expressed by shoes instead of dollar bills.

That is the standard of value rendered here.

There is no such thing as obtaining greater value per dollar than this store offers.

No concern in all the world can make the same grades of shoes at less cost than they are made by the manufacturers who supply us.

No store can buy at less cost than we do.

No store can give greater value per dollar than we do.

A New Departure In Service

SERVICE

In line with our constant effort to be of service to our patrons, we have adopted a plan whereby we propose to pay our customers' household bills each month, charging the total to their account and doing away with all the bothersome detail that the householder experiences in paying from ten to thirty or more bills, monthly.

Under this plan the depositor sends us one check for the total of all the bills he or she wishes to pay, and we attend to the payment of the individual bills. In this connection we also propose to purchase commutation tickets for depositors, charging the amount to the depositor's account and delivering the ticket to the depositor a day or two before the first of the month, doing away with the inconvenience that he now experiences each time it is necessary to renew his ticket.

If you have no account with us at present, we will be glad to have you open a household account, that will enable you to take advantage of this service.

If any additional information is desired, it may be obtained at the bank, or our representative will call if you prefer. We feel sure that an investigation of this new system will speedily convince you of its many advantages.

With the success of the Daily Press excursion to the New York Hippodrome now assured, interest centers around the number who will take the trip. Tickets have been selling good and indications are that the 300 mark will be passed before train time next Monday. The necessary tickets for the show and transportation to and from New York may be had at the Daily Press office any time between now and next Monday, but early application will be the only insurance for good seats. The best accommodations at the Hippodrome have been secured for the Press party and the special train, which stops at Dunellen, Clinton avenue, Grant avenue, Plainfield and Fanwood, will have a seat for everyone.

An interesting experiment was made by Charles Dillingham at the Hippodrome. The question, "Where do the crowds come from" was heard so often, and the administration and advertising departments were so curious to have the question answered, that through a system of registration the name and address of the patrons attending "Hip Hip Hooray!" were obtained one evening early the past week. The result was most interesting, and the widely separated territory from which the huge audience assembled was really surprising.

On the evening selected, thirty-two different States were represented in the audience, and 259 different towns and cities. Five of the latter were in California; four cities in Kentucky; nine in Michigan; sixteen in Illinois; nine in Missouri, and nine in Colorado. In the commuting zone, within ninety miles of New York, from Connecticut, New Jersey, New York State, Long Island and Staten Island, 105 different towns contributed to this varied and cosmopolitan audience.

In the orchestra and first balcony, only a little less than fifty per cent. were New York residents, and in the family circle, seventy-five per cent. of the occupants were local playgoers.

Canada was represented by twenty-two visitors; seventeen gave their address in foreign lands—from Russia, Sweden, Brazil, England, France, Holland, Japan, China, Cuba and Scotland.

The amazing result shows that a New York success gains the patronage of the whole country quickly; that a New York playhouse has a clientele not confined to the population of New York; and that the New York Hippodrome today fills the field to which it was dedicated as a national institution.

MINORS CANNOT GO IN SALOONS

Mayor and Chief Declare They Will Not Allow It Here.

MAY BE NO STATUTE

Calkins Talks of Prohibition—Says Plainfield Can Have It Whenever Voters Say So—Would Like to Be Mayor Then.

There may not be a law on the statute books of Plainfield that states specifically that an infant son shall not accompany his father into a saloon, but there ought to be, according to Mayor Calkins and Chief Kiely, and minors of any age will not be permitted in saloons in this city.

Mayor Calkins did not have time to go into the case carefully this morning, but he said: "If there is any way to exclude children entirely from such places, they will be excluded, as they should be."

Chief Kiely pointed out that the law prohibiting minors from entering barrooms has always been enforced in Plainfield, and said that he would not countenance the presence of children of any age in these places.

Mayor Calkins even suggested prohibition for Plainfield as a means of reformation. He said that the city can make the change whenever voters want it.

"I have never taken any stock in the claim that prohibition could not be enforced in Plainfield," said the mayor. "Of course, preventing the sale of liquor here, if it is sold in the vicinity, will be difficult and will not prevent drunkenness entirely; but if Plainfield ever votes prohibition I should like to come back and be mayor again for just about six months in order to tackle the job of enforcement of the law."

"Plainfield can have prohibition whenever it wants it. The election of six councilmen pledged to another try-out along that line will make it possible. I have always said that our people have all the local option they need. It is merely a question of getting the votes.

"In the meantime my policy has been to hold the saloon proprietors to strict accountability. I have regularly visited the saloons and told them so. If evidence is presented of the slightest violation of the law, I will use all the power I have to secure a revokation of the license and to prevent another license ever being granted to the offender. Selling to intoxicated persons and minors is forbidden. Chief Kiely has co-operated with me in making it clear to licensees that there will be no leniency shown to violators. Whether the State law prevents minors going into saloons I do not know. I think it prohibits EXPOSING liquor sale to minors, and this would justify excluding children from bar rooms even in the company of parents.

"If there is any way to exclude children entirely from such places, they will be excluded, as they should be."

A Night at The Tabernacle

THE ENDING OF A SUCCESSFUL LIFE

Career of J. Hervey Doane, Called by Death, One of Constant Activity.

A STAUNCH OFFICIAL

Establishment of Bonnie Burn Sanitarium Result of His Untiring Efforts as a Freeholder—A Lover of Clean and Healthy Sport.

Under the auspices of the city's Masonic fraternities, the funeral of Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, whose death was announced in yesterday's Daily Press, will be held at 3:30 tomorrow afternoon at the late residence, 425 East Seventh street. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church of which the deceased was a member, will have charge of the customary religious service and delegations from other local organizations besides the Masons are to be in attendance. Interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

The news of Mr. Doane's death spread rapidly to all parts of the city and on every hand were heard comments upon his courageous battle and expressions of regret that one so able and efficient should be cut off in the zenith of life. To those who knew of his condition, the optimism and cheerfulness which he manifested to the end of his career was a source of inspiration and something over which to marvel. He maintained this to the very last moment and always comforted those around his bedside who sought to comfort him, and looked on the bright side of things though he realized that his life was ebbing away. The fatal illness first became apparent about two years ago, but it was not until last spring that Mr. Doane submitted to an operation in Flower Hospital, New York. His life hung in the balance for several months following and for a time it was thought that he would be restored to health. Instead he gradually grew worse, undergoing treatment for a time at Muhlenberg Hospital and later remaining at his home. An organic trouble was the primary cause of death.

J. Hervey Doane was born on what is now the Clark farm on Rahway road, July 25, 1858, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Osborne Doane. After completing his education in the local schools he entered the employ of Asa Collier at what was then No. 3 Park avenue, to learn the jeweler's trade. He quickly became proficient in all its branches and in 1885 Mr. Doane purchased the jewelry establishment of John A. Clare, at No. "13" Park avenue. This he retained for more than thirty years at practically the same stand, disposing of it only two weeks ago to George W. Hayes, who had been associated with him for a long time. Mr. Doane also took up the study of optical work and at the time his illness began was one of the most expert practicing opticians in the city.

As a young man the name of Hervey Doane was identified in Plainfield with everything that was the best and cleanest in healthful sport. At the outset baseball was his hobby and as one of the charter members of the old Plainfield Athletic Club, succeeding the Central Athletic Club, he gained a State-wide reputation as a pitcher. He was the first "underhand" mound artist demonstrating the old style of twirling and his work was watched by hundreds of people at every game. Later he became a member of the Crescent Club, the organization supporting the most historic baseball nine Plainfield has ever known. When the Crescent Wheelmen organized in the early "'90s" Hervey Doane was one of the charter members. This club

CRUISERS FIGHT IN NORTH SEA

London Reports Engagement Between Two Small Squadrons.

ENGLAND IS SHELLED

Naval Movement Follows Aerial Raids on London and Salonika—Serious Revolts in Ireland Are Reported Today.

London, April 25.—A German naval squadron was defeated by a British squadron in the North Sea today. An official statement issued by the Admiralty shortly after noon stated that the German warships were in flight, being pursued by the British men-of-war. The squadron consisted of battle cruisers, light cruisers and destroyers. Previous to the naval engagement, the German ships had shelled the English coast at Lowestoft, killing two men, a woman and a child. The damage done to property, however, was slight.

In an official statement by the Admiralty it was announced that two British cruisers and one destroyer were hit, but none were sunk. Just before the Admiralty issued its official statement on the naval battle, a press despatch had been received from Amsterdam, stating that British warships, while patrolling the Belgian coast off Zeebruge, came upon three German destroyers. The English men-of-war opened fire, some of their projectiles taking effect.

Serious Riots in Dublin.

London, April 25.—It was officially announced today that there were grave disturbances in Dublin yesterday and that the post office was seized. Soldiers, however, arrived and restored order. Twelve persons were killed. It is believed that the outbreak was arranged in connection with the attempt of Sir Roger Casement to land arms and ammunition in Ireland, which was frustrated by the sinking of the auxiliary German cruiser that transported the cargo and by the capture of Sir Roger. At the same time it was reported yesterday that there were disturbed conditions in other parts of Ireland and that an attempt had been made to wreck a train near Maryborough, southwest of Dublin.

Statement of Casement Case.

London, April 25.—The press bureau today gave out the following statement regarding the capture of Sir Roger Casement:

"Sir Roger Casement, who was arrested in an abortive attempt to land arms in Ireland from a German vessel, was brought to London on Sunday morning. He was met at Euston station by officers from Scotland Yard and is now being detained in custody of the military authorities. Evidence relating to proceeding in Germany in which Sir Roger figured since the outbreak of the war will be produced at the trial."

Seventy Bombs on London.

London, April 25.—Seventy bombs were dropped during last night's Zeppelin raid. One man was injured. Four or five Zeppelins took part, according to the prese bureau.

British in Air Raid.

London, April 25.—It was officially announced today that eight British aeroplanes have bombarded the hostile camp at Quatia, in Egypt, near the Suez Canal. The camp was destroyed and the hostile troops, the aviators reported, apparently began to withdraw from that district.

To the People of Plainfield and Vicinity:

The undersigned, residents of Plainfield and vicinity, speaking voluntarily as individuals interested in the highest welfare of this community, and believing that the visit of Dr. Biederwolf at the present time is most opportune, heartily commend the services now being held in the Tabernacle to the serious attention of all our fellow-citizens.

We are confident that the community will be permanently benefitted through the message which the evangelist is preaching with such zeal and persuasiveness. His sermons have already made a deep impression, and are contributing in a marked degree to a movement for the uplift of the people. Thousands are reading the sermons, but you must hear them delivered in order to appreciate the vividness of his presentation and the power of his appeal. Every fair minded observer (whether or not he agrees with everything the evangelist does or says) cannot fail to recognize the value of the work now being accomplished among the people regardless of race, class or creed under the inspiration of his inspiring leadership. The fine music of the quartet and Mr. McEwan's great choir, the clear cut presentation of every day truths, the attractive environment, the hearty co-operation of religious workers of many faiths, all contribute towards making this an opportunity for participation in Union Evangelistic work of mighty proportions—an occasion which has not been afforded for years, and which may not occur again in our lifetime.

We desire and invite the active co-operation of every one in Plainfield and vicinity toward making these meetings an overwhelming success, by reaching every man, woman and child. We are sure that each will do his part, by attending the meetings, by recommending them to others, and especially by urging them upon the serious attention of the young people upon whom the leadership of this community must so soon devolve.

KING'S DAUGHTERS IN THREE PLAYLETS

Trio of Excellent Productions Will Be Presented May 8 in P. H. S. Auditorium.

Members of the Cup Bearers' Circle of King's Daughters have a treat in store for Plainfield play lovers in the presentation of three excellent productions in the Plainfield High School Auditorium Monday evening, May 8. Owing to the fact that the original date contemplated by the Circle would conflict with Dr. Biederwolf's program of meetings the committee in charge decided upon May 8 and the tickets may now be had at Miller's drug store.

The trio of separate entertainments include "The Open Door," "That Brute Simmons" and "Our Aunt from California," giving the public an opportunity to see all on the same night for the price ordinarily charged for one. The Circle will be assisted by Walter L. Righter, a well known interpreter of Scotch songs. He has made a pronounced success of this line of work and his appearance is a treat in itself. The quartet made up of members of the Watchung Troop of Boy Scouts will also assist.

Many of Plainfield's best known society folk, a number of whom have previously appeared in amateur theatrical productions here and elsewhere, are rehearsing the various roles and each part has been assigned to an individual especially qualified to portray its best points. Mrs. Maxwell Perkins and Brown Rolston carry the roles in "The Open Box," while Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, Walter L. Righter and Harold Underhill appear in "That Brue Simmons." "Our Aunt from California" requires the largest cast of the three and the following will take part: Miss Dorothy Burke, Mrs. Jesse E. Waid, Miss Edith Griscom, Mrs. Edward C. Suffern, Mrs. Edward J. Waring, Miss Hope Ivins and Miss Katherine Titus.

EASTER DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB A SUCCESS

The annual Easter dance at the Park Club last night was one of the most successful social functions in the history of the club. The member and guests numbered nearly 400, and all thoroughly enjoyed the attractive program of music furnished by VanEps' orchestra throughout the evening.

The club was attractively decorated with spring flowers and greens, the arrangement being the work of Henry Johnson, the club steward. During an intermission later in the evening refreshments were served. The affair was in charge of the entertainment committee of the club, of which Hugh S. Jarvis is the chairman.

—General Leonard Wood will lecture on "Preparedness" at the High School Auditorium, Saturday, April 29, at 8:15. The regular Monday Afternoon Club lecture fee of 25 cents will be charged.—Adv. 4 24 3 ***

11 SETS OF PLANS FOR NEW CITY HALL

Jury to Meet Thursday and Award the Work to Architect.

Members of the City Hall building committee met last night with C. Aubrey Jackson, architectural adviser, and opened the eleven sets of plans submitted in competition for new municipal building. All bids are now in and an architect will be selected within a short time.

Each plan submitted bore a number and on an envelope a corresponding number was marked. The envelope contains name of the author of the plans, and it will be locked up until after the architect is designated, so that there will be no opportunity for individualities to enter into the competition.

A jury of award will meet Thursday afternoon for the purpose of naming the architect from the eleven who have submitted plans. This jury will be made up of three non-competing architects and Mayor Calkins and Councilman Hylan representing the city. The city is not committed to accept the plans on which the award is made, but acquires the three best sets of drawings from which the best points may be taken.

DR. GRENFELL WILL NOT SPEAK AT HIGH SCHOOL

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell will not speak at the Plainfield High School Auditorium, tomorrow night, as it was previously announced, because of the Biederwolf campaign, but Mrs. Percy Stewart will give a reception at the Park Club at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Grenfell, at which the former will speak of his work in Laborador. At noon tomorrow the doctors of the city will entertain Dr. Grenfell at a luncheon to be given in his honor at the Park Club.

The annual tea and exhibit of garments of the Plainfield section of the Grenfell Needlework Guild will take place on Tuesday afternoon, May 2, at 3:30 o'clock at the residence of the president, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of West Eighth street.

SURPRISE KITCHEN SHOWER.

Miss Hazel Zeek was the guest of honor at a surprise kitchen shower given in her honor yesterday afternoon at the home of her aunt, Mrs. William Forshay, of Watchung avenue. About fifteen intimate friends of the young woman attended the affair, and Miss Zeek was the recipient of many useful kitchen utensils. Guests were present from Albany, N. Y.; Marcella, Hoboken and this city.

MUSIC LOVERS ENJOY CHARMING PROGRAM

Mrs. Henry L. DeForest Gives a Recital Before Monday Afternoon Club.

Lover of music turned out in large number yesterday afternoon to hear the recital rendered by Mrs. Henry L. DeForest in the parish house of the Congregational church, under the auspices of the art department of the club. Each of her selections received much praise, and at the conclusion of her program she responded with an encore. Her "Impromptu" by Schubert was especially well received, and her remarkable strength of touch was particularly noticeable in this selection, as well as in all her numbers. The entire program consisted of the following numbers:

"Prelude" .....Rachmaninoff
"Warum" .....
"Romanze" .....Schumann
"Aufschwung" .....
"Impromptu" .....Schubert
"Sonata," Op. 27, No. 2..Beethoven
"Funeral March" .....
"Etudes," Op. 10. Nos. 12 and 3,
..... Chopin
"Scherzo" .....

At the conclusion of her recital, Mrs. DeForest was presented with a handsome floral bouquet by Mrs. Allan Cowperthwait, the president of the Monday Afternoon Club, on behalf of the membership. An informal reception followed, during which tea was served. The following members of the club poured tea: Mrs. Henry Hibbard, Mrs. J. M. Whiton and Miss Emelyn B. Hartridge.

COLUMBIAN DRAMATIC CLUB GIVES RECEPTION

The Columbian Dramatic Club acted as host for several hundred young people last night, when as the first of its post-Lenten gayeties it conducted a reception and dance in Columbus Hall.

Squier's rchestra furnished music and there were numerous special features on the program to keep the fun going. One of these was a "rag" dance, which made an especial hit, and another was the awarding of a gift to the most popular young woman present. Daniel McCormick acted as floor manager.

The general committee, which had charge, consisted of Otto Linke, chairman; Miss Anna Doyle, Miss Mary McCormick, Mrs. H. B. Arnold, Daniel McAfee, Daniel McCormick, Joseph Sullivan, Mary Murray, William Brown and Albert DeNoyers. The hall was prettily decorated with bunting and crepe paper, and refreshments were served at midnight.

JUDGE DEMEZA IS A REAL HERO, AT LEAST THAT'S WHAT HE THINKS

Judge William DeMeza is a hero. That is, he thinks he is. Not a big sunburned hero who pulls women from certain death in the raging waters or yet a brave, daring fireman who snatches them from fiery flames, but a dressed-up, smiling hero of the movies.

It is his birthday, too, and a lot of people who didn't even know he was forty-two this morning helped him to celebrate the event and to perpetuate the "as-he-looked-at-42" smile for all eternity.

Again we must add that Judge DeMeza only thinks he is a hero. He acted like one this morning when he played a star part before a clinking camera in the filming of "It Happened in Plainfield," but he may come out a villian. All this depends upon the director, and directors don't talk. That's the press agent's job.

The Judge says Lieut. Higgins is the "vilyun," but until the picture is finally thrown on the screen no one will be able to tell. Hero or villian, Judge De Meza was easily the star of the few scenes cameried in and around police headquarters this morning.

Mayor Calkins had been slated for the part, but when the director got both men in front of him he diplomatically assigned the judge to the lead, and put the mayor down as an "extra man." Maybe he will get in the picture tomorrow or some other day, but not while Judge De Meza shows all the earmarks of a matinee idol as he did this morning.

Nobody can tell anything about a moving picture plot from seeing a few scenes filmed ,and all the judge had to do this morning was to stand and talk to Lieut. Higgins until a pretty young lady came along and dropped her pocketbook in front of him. He was supposed to pick up the pocketbook and run to hand it back ,but he almost ruined the picture by his evident reluctance to giving up the cash-container. Again he was reading a letter when two young ladies and a young man came up and read with him. The judge had an attack of stage fright or something while this scene was being taken. Chief Kiely came to his rescue with the explanation that it was not stage fright, he was just wondering if the scene was perfectly proper for a married man.

Other scenes were taken in the court room and then the camera man got a "close up" of Chief Kiely, just like the one they took of President Wilson when he got married and of Roosevelt when he came home from Africa. The pictures will really be shown, they say.

DUNELLEN

G. B. GIBBONS & CO. GET SEWER BONDS

The Firm's Bid of $103.29 Accepted by the Dunellen Council.

Bids for the remaining $10,000 of the borough's joint sewerage system 4½ per cent. gold bonds were opened at last evening's adjourned session of the Mayor and Common Council, and the bonds were awarded to George B. Gibbons & Co., of New York city, at $103.29, and accrued interest. Other bids were: R. M. Grant & Co., of New York City, $102.789; M. M. Freeman & Co., New York City, $102.388; H. L. Crawford & Co., New York City, $102.26; Atwater & Wells, Newark, $102.10, and the First National Bank, this place, $100.50.

There being no remonstrance, it was resolved, to submit the question of the issuance of $45,000 of bonds to provide funds for the completion of the collecting sewer to the voters at a special election to be held on Monday, May 29.

A communication was read from the State Board of Taxes and Assessment, informing the borough that the cause of the City of Plainfield, the Borough of North Plainfield and the Borough of Dunellen, interested in the construction of a sewage trunk line and disposal works, vs. the Borough of Middlesex, in the matter of an appeal from the valuation set on the Darling farm, would be heard before the Board at New Brunswick on June 4.

Chairman Jones, of the finance committee, reported that the interest on improvement certificates at present outstanding to May 1, amounted to $1,032.50, and upon his motion it was moved to float a demand note for $1,032.50 to pay this interest.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF MISS S. J. AMERMAN

Rev. E. R. Brown Will Officiate at the Late Home Tomorrow Afternoon.

The funeral of Miss Sarah J. Amerman, aged 81, who died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Isaac J. Van Fleet, 116 Front street, Sunday afternoon, after having been confined to her bed for the past two weeks from a general breakdown, will be held from the home at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The Rev. E. R. Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church, will be the officiating clergyman. Interment will be at Hillside cemetery, Plainfield.

The deceased came to the borough when her sister moved here two years ago from Somerville. During her residence here she was never seen about the streets because she was able to walk but little. Up to two weeks ago, when the general breakdown occurred Miss Amerman spent most of her time in sewing and reading. She possessed a fine mind and was fully versed in the leading topics of the day which she was ever willing to discuss.

Miss Amerman had made her home with her sister since eight years ago, when her cousin, Theodore Amerman, with whom she went to live shortly after her father, James Amerman, passed away at North Branch in 1881, died at South Branch.

The deceased was a member of the Dutch Reformed church of South Branch. Besides Mrs. Van Fleet, she leaves two other sisters: Mrs. Helen Amerman, of Somerville, and Mrs. Mary Cole, of Stanton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Treichler, of Buffalo, are making Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Treichler, of Mountainview terrace, a ten days' visit.

EMPLOYES HONOR J. CALVIN GARDNER

Master of Bridges of New Jersey Central Receives a Diamond Ring.

As a token of esteem, one hundred men under J. Calvin Gardner, master of bridges of the New Jersey Central, presented Mr. Gardner with a diamond ring in honor of his sixty-first birthday Saturday night. The gift was presented to Mr. Gardner at his home by a committee composed of William Shively, Enoch Giles, Harry Updyke, Clarence Vliet and Benjamin Voorhees.

On the 13th day of September next, Mr. Gardner will have completed forty years on the Central Railroad. He first went to work on the Central for the firm of Meeker and Hedden, of Newark, in 1876, when the road was in the hands of the receiver. This firm did all of the carpentry and repair work for the railroad at that time. Mr. Meeker, of the firm, was a brother-in-law to Receiver Lathrop.

When the railroad was released from the receivership in 1878 and undertook to do its own repair and carpentry work, Mr. Gardner went to work under the late Ruliff Swackhamer, who was appointed master of bridges. Mr. Swackhamer served as master of bridges until about the year 1898, when he was pensioned. During the last ten years of Mr. Swackhamer's service, Mr. Gardner was foreman of a gang of seven men. Following Mr. Swackhamer, Charles Register, of Camden, and Jacob Fisher, of this place, held the position of master of bridges in turn for short terms, and in the year 1900, Mr. Gardner was appointed to the office.

Mr. Gardner is well known along the road from Jersey City to Easton, and a short sketch of his life will be of interest to the readers. He is the son of the late John and Sarah Gardner, and was born in Bloomsbury on April 19, 1855. He received his education in a typical oldtime village school, which was only open on three days a week during the winter. At the age of 15 he completed his struggle with the three "R's" and devoted his time exclusively to duties on his father's farm. Deciding not to follow farming as his vocation, Mr. Gardner left his home at the age of twenty and went to Glen Gardner.

A year later he married Miss Anna Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibold Johnson, of Glen Gardner, and it was during this year that he accepted his position with Meeker & Hedden. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner resided at Glen Gardner until fifteen years ago, when they moved to this borough. They have one son, Blanchard, who is married, and also lives here. Another son, Archibold, died several years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner are both members of the Presbyterian church, of this place. Gardner is affiliated with two patriotic organizations—the Juniors and the P. O. S. of A.'s.

RECEPTION GIVEN TO REV. RAMSEY AND WIFE

Rev. D. W. C. Ramsey, pastor of the Dunellen Methodist Episcopal church, and his wife, were tendered a reception in honor of their return for another year, in the church parlors last evening. The affair was arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society The room was decorated for the occasion with potted plants and cut flowers. About forty were present, and a most enjoyable evening was passed by all.

An address of "welcome," made by H. S. Townley, was ably responded to by Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey. Next came a pleasing program of music, singing and reading. Among those who took part were Mrs. D. W. C. Ramsey, Miss Adelaide Ramsey, Miss Winifred Schenck, Miss Helen Swackhamer and Mrs. Edward Krinic, who read "Mrs. Smart Learns How to Speak."

Following the program, there was a general social time during which ice cream and cake were served.

Mrs. A. L. Barton and Miss Lottie Barton, of New York City, are visiting Mrs. Barton's father, Adam Herlich.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gardner entertained Mr. and Mrs. Charles Underwood, of Hampton, over the week-end.

Miss Althea Dufford, of German Valley, who has been visiting Mrs. J. R. Hamley, for the past two weeks, returned home yesterday.

Ralph Warden, who reads gas meters for the Public Service Gas Company, was rescued from the basement of the Lincoln School, Saturday afternoon by Marshal Harry Shugars. Warden entered the basement to read the school gas meter by a window which had been left open. After he dropped to the basement floor, the window came down and a patent catch caught. When he was ready to come out he found that he couldn't reach the catch so as to unlock the window. He looked around for something to stand on, but could find nothing. Warden then tried the door exit of the basement and, finding it locked, he realized that he was caged.

Warden had been in the basement an hour when Marshal Shugars, who had seen him enter the basement from his home across the street and had been wondering why he didn't come out, decided to stroll over to the school and investigate.

JUDGMENT GIVEN PLAINTIFF.

In a landlord and tenant case heard before Judge Rene P. F. von Minden in the borough court yesterday morning, Miss Eliza M. Marschrood was given a judgment of possession against Mrs. Mary Walker.

CASE IS POSTPONED.

Mrs. Emma Pinza, administratrix of the estate of the late Andrew S. Haselin, who was killed by a fast train at Lincoln a year ago last August, visited New Brunswick yesterday in connection with the suit being brought by the estate against the Central Railroad. The trial was to have started today, but owing to the illness of one of the railroad's witnesses, it has been postponed until next September.

MISS DRISCOLL BRIDE OF FLORENCE O'SULLIVAN

Announcement is made of the marriage in St. Peter's Roman Catholic church, New Brighton, S. I., on Sunday night, of Miss Kate Driscoll and Florence O'Sullivan, a member of the Scotch Plains police force. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, while her sister, Miss Hannah Driscoll, was the maid of honor. Miss Mary Phelan and Miss Agnes Phelan, both of Plainfield, were flower girls.

The bride wore white satin trimmed with Irish point lace, a tulle veil trimmed with Orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Following the ceremony a reception was held, and afterward the couple left for a short wedding trip. They will make their home in Scotch Plains.

EDWIN L. TERRY WEDS MISS ELIZABETH ROESEL

Friends of the couple were surprised today to learn of the marriage last Saturday night of Miss Elizabeth Roesel and Edwin L. Terry, both residents of the Willow Grove section of Fanwood township. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William I. Steans, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Westfield, at the church parsonage. The couple were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Merwin Terry, of Mountainside. The young couple will reside in the Willow Grove section.

JOHN THOMPSON WEDS MISS KATHERINE FELT

A pretty wedding took place in Westfield last night, when Miss Katherine Felt, of that place, was united in marriage to John G. Thompson, of Fanwood, at her home at 267 Orchard place. Many Fanwood and Westfield people were present at the ceremony. Miss Grace Thompson, a sister of the groom, was the maid of honor, and the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, C. Gwyer, of New York. Clarence Bettmann, of Fanwood, was the best man, and the ushers were James Carter, Clifford Hall, Donald Fullerton and Henry Fullerton.

Following the wedding a reception was held at the bride's home, and after the couple departed for a trip through the South. On their return they will reside in Elmora.

ATTEND WESTFIELD WEDDING.

A large number of local people attended the wedding in St. Paul's Episcopal church, Westfield, last night, of Miss Katherine Felt, of Westfield, to John Thompson, of Fanwood. Following the ceremony, there was a reception at the home of the bride's mother, and later the couple left on a short wedding trip. On their return they will reside in Elmora.

IRVING DEMILT TO WED.

A wedding of local interest will take place in Holy Trinity church, Westfield, tomorrow night, when Miss Mary McCarthy, of that place, will become the bride of Irving DeMilt, of Fanwood. Father Waterson, pastor of the church, will perform the ceremony, and afterward there will be a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Hall and children have returned to their home on South avenue, after spending the winter in New York.

LADIES' AID MEETING.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Episcopal church will hold their weekly meeting tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Chas. Borden, of Harrison avenue, Westfield.

Contractor Tony Albert has started active work on the construction of a modern house on Paterson road.

The Rev. J. Madison Hare will conduct the weekly prayer meeting in the Baptist church tomorrow night.

TIE ON THE BRANDEIS CASE.

Judiciary Committee Seems Evenly Divided—Action Deferred.

Washington, April 25.—Action on the nomination of Louis D. Brandeis to be associate justice of the United States supreme court was again deferred by the senate judiciary committee. Friends of Mr. Brandeis are beginning to feel some doubt over his confirmation. Impatience was plainly manifested by administration senators over the failure to report.

The alignment disclosed in the committee discussion showed the committee evenly divided on the question of making a favorable report. A tie vote would make a favorable report impossible.

MISS KELLER 'HEARS' CARUSO

By Sensitive Fingers She Enjoys Voice of Great Tenor.

Atlanta, April 25.—Helen Keller, blind and deaf, placed her fingers on the lips and throat of Enrico Caruso and "heard" him sing the lament of Samson from "Samson and Delilah." Through the medium of her marvelously sensitive fingers the voice of the great tenor was transmitted to her.

"Oh, wonderful, wonderful!" breathed Miss Keller. "Though I cannot see your face, I can feel the pathos of your song."

Masked Girl Leads Strikers.

Pittsburgh, April 25.—A stylishly dressed young woman, whose face was concealed by a paper mask, led 1,500 striking operatives of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company in a street parade. A clash between the strikers and guards employed occurred, and when order was restored she had disappeared, and no hint of her identity could be learned.

POLLING LIGHT ALL OVER CITY

But Little Interest Being Shown in Primary Election Today.

ACKERMAN A DELEGATE

Former Senator to go to Republican National Convention—No Primary Balloting by Progressives—Party Conventions Will Be Held in June.

Marked by the absence of interesting contests, the Presidential primary election today is bringing out only a light vote.

The polls opened at 1 o'clock and will close at 9 o'clock tonight. The voting, which will be practically a formality in this part of the State, will be for the naming of the delegates-atlarge, alternates and district delegates to both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions.

The Republican convention will be at Chicago June 7 for the selection of a standard bearer for the party and the Democratic meeting to renominate Woodrow Wilson will be at St. Louis June 14. The Progressives named their delegates at their State conventions. They will meet in Chicago at the same time the Republicans are in session. Roosevelt is their choice, bpt if the G. O. P. names a man sufficiently Progressive, they will place his name on their ticket also.

Every voter whose name appeared on the poll book of the last general election in the district in which he now lives or who has been registered by affidavit, will be entitled to cast a ballot of his political party. Judge Connelly is sitting at Elizabeth to issue transfers for those who have moved.

In the candidacy of the Rev. I. W. L. Roundtree for alternate delegate-at-large on the Republican ticket, this, the Fifth Congressional District, has its only contest. Mr. Roundtree, who is the negro politician-preacher of Trenton, makes the fifth aspirant for the four places to be filled.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful fn a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

JIMMY GLASS MAY BE FOUND

Mother Hears of Another Possible Clew.

ALLEGED FATHER IS HELD

Boy Is Taken From Band of Gypsies In Gainesville, Ga.—Marks on Ear Make Mother Believe He May Be Kidnaped Son—Will Take Long Trip.

Jersey City, April 25.—Mrs. Charles Glass, mother of the missing Jimmy Glass of this city, for whom a world wide search has been made, received word from J. H. Reynolds, a real estate dealer of Gainesville, Ga., that a boy answering Jimmy's description has been found and taken by him from a band of gypsies and that his alleged father had been paroled in his custody.

"Although my hopes have been shattered eight times in the last two weeks, I believe my boy has been found at last," said Mrs. Glass at her home at Lienau place. "The description sent me by Mr. Reynolds tallies in detail with the description of my missing boy. The outer rim of Jimmy's right ear was slightly flat and this same thing is found on the right ear of the boy taken from the gypsy camp."

According to information received by Mrs. Glass, the lad was taken from a band of gypsies by a court order obtained by Mr. Reynolds after he talked with the boy and realized his description tallied with that of the Glass boy.

According to the police of Gainesville, the gypsies admit they were camping in Pensylvania in May of last year. Jimmy Glass suddenly disappeared May 12 while visiting relatives in Greeley, Pa.

Mrs. Glass says she also received word from Mr. Reynolds that a collection was taken up to defray any expense incurred in obtaining a court order retaining custody of the boy.

"If this were another false clew I do not think any one would put up money to see the thing through," said Jimmy's mother.

Besides $3,000 spent by the police of Jersey City more than $10,000 has been expended by the parents of the missing boy. A reward of $500 has been offered for his return. Mrs. Glass expects soon to receive a picture of the boy in Gainsville, and if she believes the lad to be her son she will go there.

PRIMARY ELECTIONS ON.

No Contests Among Democrats—Wilson Has Solid Delegation.

Trenton, April 25.—Primaries for the selection of delegates to the Republican and Democratic national conventions took place in New Jersey. The polls opened at 1 p. m. and closed at 9 p. m.

There was no contest in the Democratic party, and President Wilson will have a solid delegation pledged to his renomination. The four candidates for delegates at large or the so called big four are Governor James F. Fielder, State Chairman Edward E. Grosscup, United States Senator William Hughes and Congressman Thomas J. Scully.

The Republicans did not have such smooth sailing. Although their big four, consisting of David Baird, State Chairman Newton, A. K. Bugbee, Hamilton K. Kean and Ira A. Kip, Jr., had no opposition, there were some lively contests for the selection of congressional district delegates in two of the twenty-one counties, Hudson and Essex.

CLERGYMAN NEAR DEATH.

East Orange Minister Is Caught Between Two Trains.

East Orange, April 25.—Caught between two trains on the Lackawanna railroad at Halsted street, near the Brick Church station, Rev. W. Warren Giles, pastor of the First Reformed church of this city, was struck by one of them and narrowly escaped possible death. The clergyman was thrown down between the two tracks, luckily clear of both. His worst injury was a gashed forehead.

The injured man was found after both trains had passed. He was carried to the stationery store of Joseph Johnson, Sr., near the depot, where first aid remedies were applied. He was later taken to the Orange Memorial hospital, where it was found necessary to take several stitches in closing the wound. Later he was taken home.

PROMOTER TAKEN IN RAID.

Winn, Caught in Newark Gambling Place, Gives Cash Bail.

Newark, N. J., April 25.—John H. Winn, fifty years old, who gave his address as New York city, was held under $1,000 bail by Judge Grice in the First criminal court in this city to answer charges of carrying concealed weapons. He gave bail in cash from a big roll.

The police charge that he was caught carrying a loaded revolver. They say he had also what Winn called a "harmless water gun," but which, the police say, was really an ammonia gun.

Winn was one of a number of men caught in a gambling raid. The police say he is wealthy. He says he is a promoter. He asserted he had a New York permit to carry the revolver.

STILL AWAITING GERMAN REPLY

Message From Gerard Expected Hourly.

WASHINGTON IS HOPEFUL

Demand by Wilson Receives Serious Attention—Activity of Teutonic Submarines Has Lessened — Officials Draw Ray of Hope Therefrom—Berlin Press Comment Creates Optimism.

Washington, April 25.—"We are sailing along on an even keel, neither more hopeful nor less hopeful today."

This was the comment from the state department in reply to the question as to whether the latest news from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin had changed the situation. A long confidential message from the ambassador is reported to be on the way to Washington, but Secretary Lansing declined to discuss its import.

Ambassador von Bernstorff did not return to Washington from New York, but is expected to confer with Secretary Lansing.

The solution of the submarine situation awaits Germany's reply to President Wilson's last note demanding that Germany immediately declare and effect an abandonment of present methods of submarine warfare.

There is nothing tangible yet to show what the reply will be or when it will be forthcoming. Ambassador Gerard has been assured that the American demand is receiving serious attention, and his message, it is believed, reveals the impressions he gets from an interview with Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg. Mr. Gerard's advices are expected within twenty-four hours.

It is due perhaps to Mr. Gerard's hopefulness, coupled with other preliminary conciliatory signs from Berlin, that a feeling of optimism prevails in official circles here. Friends of the president, who believed a diplomatic break inevitable, now see more than a ray of hope. They base this on the fact that the activity of the German submarines in the war zone apparently has lessened since the American note reached Germany. In addition the trend of certain press comment from Berlin is considered encouraging, though not necessarily indicating that Germany will be willing to yield to President Wilson's demand.

To state department officials an analysis of German press comment shows that at least some of the responsible newspapers friendly to the chancellor take a conciliatory view toward the American note.

Miss Nellie Walburn Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Carter, of New Market, and Charles Thornton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Thornton, of South Plainfield, were married at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Sacred Heart church, Rev. John F. Baldwin, chaplain of Mt. St. Mary College, performing the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white charmeuse trimmed with pearls and orange blossoms. She wore a bridal veil and carried a bouquet of Easter lilies and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Lyman E. Barr, matron of honor, wore the gown in which she was married in February last, when Miss Carter was one of the bridesmaids. Mrs. Barr also wore a picture hat.

The bridesmaids, the Misses Jeanette Carter, sister of the bride, and Miss Mamie Leary, wore gowns of pink accordion pleated chiffon with large picture hats. The flower girl, Margaret Carter, wore a grown of white net over pink. John Carter, brother of the bride, was best man. The ushers were Lyman E. Barr, John Thornton, William Thornton and John Dolan. Immediately following the ceremony a wedding repast was served at the home of the bridegroom, at which only members of the immediate families were present.

Mr. Thornton is the night yard-master for the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company at South Plainfield. He and his bride left last night for Denver, Col., and en route they will stop at Minnesota and visit the bride's former home. The couple will also make a short stay in Colorado Springs. They will reside in South Plainfield. Mrs. Thornton received a large collection of valuable gifts from relatives and friends.

begins today. It is made necessary by the need for floor space. New stocks of merchandise are coming on to the Seventh Gallery, which has up to now been filled with bedroom furniture. So—we took the only course left; reduced prices on about $30,000 worth, to make it even more worth while than usual for people to buy Wanamaker furniture, and take it away quickly.

Washington, April 25.—Major General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the American army, will confer with General Alvaro Obregon, minister of war of the de facto government of Mexico, regarding the military situation south of the border.

Information to this effect was conveyed by Eliseo Arredondo, the Mexican ambassador-designate, to Secretary Lansing in an interview at the state department. The visit of the Mexican ambassador followed one made by him when on behalf of his government he inquired when a reply might be expected to Carranza's formal note suggesting that the two governments treat on the subject of the withdrawal of the American expedition.

Secretary Lansing had told Mr. Arredondo of the efforts being made by Special Agent James Linn Rodgers at Mexico City to bring about a conference between General Obregon and General Scott and that the department was awaiting the outcome of this conference before making a reply. When he returned to the state department the Mexican ambassador informed Mr. Lansing that he had just received from General Carranza a telegram stating that General Obregon would start for the border at once.

Immediately upon being informed of Carranza's agreement to the conference Secretary Lansing informed Secretary Baker, who sent a telegram to General Scott at San Antonio directing him to proceed at once to El Paso.

Time of the Conference.

It is understood that the conference will take place either at El Paso or Juarez, which is just across the line on the Mexican side. While it is expected that the two military men will meet in twenty-four hours, Mr. Arredondo said that it was impossible to predict the exact time.

Although officials here are inclined to be reticent and even evasive concerning the purposes of the conference, it is understood that the desire is thoroughly to acquaint General Obregon with the purposes of the redisposition of the American forces now under way and to ascertain, if possible, how far the de facto government is prepared to co-operate in the further pursuit of Villa.

It is also understood that General Scott has been authorized to make it clear to General Obregon that the United States is determined to put a stop to the bandit incursions across the American border and to that end it is prepared to police the border territory on the Mexican side until such time as the troops of the Carranza government are able to take effective charge of the situation.

The outcome of the conference is being awaited with keen interest in Washington. Immediately following it, it is expected that General Scott will return to Washington and make a report to Secretary Baker and the president.

Base Nearer the Border.

Meantime the redisposition of the American forces is expected to proceed rapidly. The impression still prevails here that the advance columns will be withdrawn to a base nearer the border, whence they can be easily provisioned and, if need be, re-enforced.

Whether active pursuit of Villa is to be resumed will depend largely, it is thought, on the outcome of the Obregon-Scott conference, although it is thought probable that if Villa does not come back northward the pursuit will be left to the Carranzistas.

There was no confirmation at either the state or war department of the press reports from El Paso that the bandit chieftain, only slightly wounded and with 300 followers, was in the mountains to the northwest of Parral.

On the other hand, both at the state department and the Mexican embassy official confirmation was received of the imprisonment at Chihuahua of Pablo Lopez, who was captured last Saturday by Carranzistas at Santa Ysabel.

M. Arredondo informed Mr. Lansing of the receipt of the official dispatch to that effect. The ambassador added that the authorities at Chihuahua were not awaiting proofs as to the identity of the prisoner before proceeding with his trial and execution, but were anxious to get witnesses from the American side who could testify to his presence in the raid at Columbus, where he was wounded.

Consul Letcher at Chihuahua also reported on the capture, stating that Lopez was kept in jail there until American officers or officials could talk to him and satisfy themselves as to his identity. It is regarded as of special interest that the bandit, who has often been described as Villa's chief lieutenant, should have been captured at Santa Ysabel, where on Jan. 10 last he led the party of bandits who massacred the eighteen American employees of the Cusi Mining company.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, APRIL 25, 1916.

SUCCESS IS ASSURED.

Dr. Biederwolf has been preaching to Plainfielders for two weeks. If he stopped at once, the great good he has done for the people of this community would be of more benefit than any single thing that has ever been done in Plainfield. Scores of men and women who have walked down the sawdust aisles, and declared their faith in the teachings of the evangelist, no doubt said before the campaign started that there was nothing to religion, and without such an awakening as the city is now going through would probably never have been brought into the right path.

Every campaign of this kind brings criticism from scoffers, and of course such is heard in this city, but the thinking men and women who realize the splendid work that is being done are in the great majority, and they are not hesitating to back it up by word and deed. We said before the campaign started that every church in the city, regardless of creed, and whether or not they were co-operating in the work, would be benefitted, and the developments thus far prove this beyond a doubt. There is probably not a resident in the city who cannot point out at least one person who has been helped by the revivals, and some of the cases are so conspicuous that everyone is talking about them.

"They won't stick," says some of the critics, and no one disputes that some who have hit the trail will be backsliders, but the great majority who have turned to the right will continue, and the few who go back will but emphasize the wonderful results achieved at the meetings.

No better evidence of the success of the campaign can be found than the fact that the Tabernacle, which holds nearly twenty-five per cent. of the population of the city and borough, has been crowded to the doors on more than one occasion. It has been estimated that at the men's meeting a week ago fully fifty per cent. of the men of the city and borough were present, and we doubt whether any other speaker in the country could draw such a crowd. Certainly no politician could.

J. HERVEY DOANE.

Though his hundreds of acquaintances and friends had expected it for several months, when news came yesterday that the sable messenger had summoned J. Hervey Doane, it caused a profound shock throughout the city. A native son of Plainfield as he was and a member of a family that has been identified with its interests, its business, social and political, his taking leaves a void that will be hard to fill. In his earlier days J. Hervey Doane was a lover of those sports that improve mind and body, believing in them so enthusiastically that he conferred a great benefit to the community by inducing others to participate. This fact will be vividly recalled by his colleagues in baseball and wheeling circles of other days. For thirty years he was an upright business mand and relinquished the reins only when he realized that he would never again be able to handle them. Although compelled to give practically all his time to private affairs, seven years ago he listened to the voice of his friends and accepted the nomination of freeholder for this district. He was elected by a generous majority as everyone knew he would be. He was re-elected a second and a third time and was still faithfully serving Union county when the fatal illness began which gradually undermined his health and brought about his all too untimely end. In the daily conflicts of life, where man was pitted against man, in daily affairs as they would come and go, success crowned his efforts. In his demise, his constituency have lost a faithful public servant—true, honest, and courageous in the discharge of every public duty; his associates, a most agreeable companion; and his family, an indulgent and loving father and husband.

The United States as a nation has one thing for which all can be thankful as a result of the war, if the prediction made by Fred Harvery, the well known western hotel man, is right. Mr. Harvey says that the shutting off of European travel has diverted the attention of the public to our own country to such an extent that the desire to see this country will always remain paramount hereafter. He says that thousands of summer homes are being built by eastern people in the west and southwest. A few years ago the men or women who declared they preferred to see their own country before traveling abroad, were looked upon as a peculiar species, who really could not be understood by the average person who spends time in travel. Now it is all changed. The expositions in California last year attracted hundreds of thousands of Americans to the Pacific coast for the first time, and they learned to their surprise that this is a great nation, and were astonished at the opportunities for sight-seeing along all the great transcontinental lines. "See America First" is now an established slogan with millions who hope to some day be able to take a long educational vacation. When the war is ended Europe will no doubt attract the curious, who will want to look over the battlefields, but those who seek the wonders of nature will turn their ways to the great west of this country.

In talking before the finance committee of the Common Council at the budget hearing Dr. H. D. Corbusier said that the conditions with regard to infant mortality in Plainfield were deplorable, because the death rate was 110 out of a thousand below one year old. This puts Plainfield in an unenviable light, and it would seem that the doctor has a little overshot the mark. The average for New Jersey was 123 to the thousand in 1915, and for the whole country 124, which would indicate that this city, instead of having an alarming rate, is well below the average. Certainly Plainfield, with its mixed population, has nothing to be ashamed of in these figures. Incidentally, the infant death rate under one year in this country is lower than in many foreign nations. For example it is 160 to the 1,000 in Japan, 192 in Germany and 332 in Chile.

Plainfield Theatre.

The second opportunity for Plainfield amateur vaudeville actors to show their artistic ability will be accorded them at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow night, when the second "amateur night" performance is conducted. The one last week not only drew a big house but pleased every patron immensely and started one competing team on the road to success. This was Miss Hazel Stewart and Paul Pope, who won first prize and have since received flattering offers for professional work. Dave Rogers, treasurer of the Plainfield Theatre, has already received three local entries for tomorrow night, and it is probable he will have eight or ten when the fun begins. Those already in are: Mollie Wuergler and Ruth Williamson, singing and dancing act; Three Clarks, two guitars and mandolin, and George and Dorothy Woods, singing and dancing. The management makes sure that deserving talent has a good chance, and solicits entries with this promise. The amateur performance will be given in addition to the regular vaudeville bill, which opens for the first this afternoon. Six first-class vaudeville numbers and feature moving pictures constitute the program. An entire change of bill is made at the Plainfield every Monday and Thursday when other attractions are not booked.

--Astor Theatre--

Bluebird photoplays have been fortunate in the selection of Lois Weber as leading lady of their company in the great production of "Hop, the Devil's Brew," which will be shown at the Astor Theatre today. This photoplay was taken in conjunction with the great crusade being made by Mrs. Vanderbilt and a great many others as well known. Taken in San Francisco and New York, it shows the downfall of a great many through the use of "dope"; the uplift these wonderful women give in the time of need, and a great many other interesting topics which are well known to the public. This story has its real lifelike portrayals, and has been approved by the leading clergymen of the United States. BRIDAL SHOWER GIVEN TO MISS ETHEL CAMPBELL

In honor of the approaching wedding of Miss Ethel Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Campbell, of Somerset street, and Willard E. Lambert, of Watchung avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Darby gave a bridal shower to the young couple at their home on Watchung avenue last evening.

About forty relatives and friends spent the evening in games and sociability and partook of the refreshments served by the hostess. The young couple were recipients of a number of presents of money, cut glass and other useful articles for their future home. After a thoroughly enjoyable evening, the guests departed at a late hour, wishing the bride and groom their best wishes. The young people expect to be married this week and make their home at Asbury Park, where the groom has secured a position.

MAY ENTER VAUDEVILLE.

As a result of the excellent showing they made at the Plainfield Theatre's amateur night last Wednesday, Paul Pope, of Park avenue, and Miss Hazel Stewart, of Summit avenue, have received a flattering offer to enter professional vaudeville. The young couple presented an instrumental and singing act which captured first prize at the amateur affair and several agents in the audience realized it was exceptionally good. Mr. Pope and Miss Stewart are both young, but they handle the piano and mandolin like experts and are now having a fourteen-minute act arranged for regular stage presentation.

POSTPONE CONCERT.

The May concert of the Westfield Band is to be postponed to a later date in May. The reason, therefor, is that the band is desirous to have more time for the rehearsing of new pieces in order to make this, the last concert of the winter season, a particularly good one. There is also in preparation for this concert some chorus work of the schools, under the able direction of Miss Bray.

RECREATION NOTES.

The Athenians and the Zephyrs will meet in a basketball game on the High School court tonight.

There will be no swimming classes in the High School pool tomorrow night because of certain repairs which will be made to the pool.

And the Frog Hopped Right Into the Room.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Frog Makes A Princess Keep Her Word.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"DON'T forget the fairy story, daddy!" shouted the children.

So daddy told them: "Once upon a time a young princess lost her gold ball in a spring, and a very kind frog dived and got it for her after she had promised to take him home with her. But she was so glad to get her toy that she ran off without even thanking the frog. The next day, just as the princess sat down to dinner, she heard a strange noise—tap, tap, splash, splash!—as if some one were coming up the marble staircase. Soon there was a gentle knock on the door, and a little voice said:

"'Open the door, my princess dear;
Open the door to thy true love here!
And mind the words that thou and I said
By the fountain cool, in the greenwood shade.'

"Then the princess ran to the door and opened it, and there stood the frog that had got her ball for her and that she had quite forgotten. She was frightened at seeing a frog on her doorsill and ran back to her seat at the table. The king, her father, asked her what was the matter.

"'There is a nasty frog at the door. Yesterday he lifted my ball out of the spring. But first I had to promise that he might live with me. I thought he never could get out of the spring. But here he is at the door, knocking to come in.'

"There came another knock, and a voice repeated the poem again. Then the king said to the princess: 'You must always keep your word. If you promised the frog he might live with you, open the door and let him in.'

"So she did, and the frog hopped right into the room. Tap, tap, splash, splash! from the door he hopped close to the table where the princess sat. 'Lift me up and let me sit by you,' he said to her.

"When she had done this he said, 'Put your plate nearer so I may eat out of it.'

"When he had eaten all he could he said: 'Now I am tired. Carry me upstairs and put me on your bed.'

"The princess hated to touch a frog, but she tried to keep her word. So she picked him up, ran upstairs with him and put him on the pillow of her bed. And there the frog slept all night long, just as two sleepy children I know must," daddy ended.

Then the children hop-skipped upstairs.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

More than 80 per cent. of the area of the United States is no-license territory, and more than sixty millions, or sixty-five per cent. of the population, live under prohibitory laws. The United States Government prohibits the liquor traffic among Indians, in portions of the territories, in military forts and reservations, in the navy, in the National Capitol, in soldiers' homes and in other specified areas under Federal control.

Hon. Addison T. Smith, of Idaho, has introduced a bill in the House, viz. (H. R. 13,565) "To prohibit the sale of intoxicating beverages throughout the police jurisdiction of the Federal Government." This takes in the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Guam, Tutuila, the Canal Zone and any island, reservation, building, ship or naval station owned or controlled by the United States. What a world-wide movement it would be should Congress pass this measure and by one Act prohibit selling, giving or dispensing liquors in these near and distant points, or wherever the American flag floats! Heaven hasten the day!

The Board of Commissioners of Spokane county, Washington, the latter part of March closed the county honor farm for the summer and possibly permanently, says the Spokane Chronicle. This action was due to the fact that since the advent of prohibition the number of inmates has been decreasing steadily. Only four prisoners were returned to the county jail, when the farm was discontinued. The Spokane county jain is also feeling the effects of prohibition. During the latter part of March there were only thirty-eight prisoners as compared with 130 prisoners a year ago. "It looks as if we might as well prepare to close up our hotel in the future," said Jailer August Ilse. "We have seven men here who are to be released now. I do not believe we will have many prisoners so long as the prohibition law is in effect. There are but half a dozen prisoners here who are in for six months. As few arrive it looks as if we will soon have many less. The number is the smallest in the history of the jail."

"Boys, I can't stand it—I can't stand it! It's all true. I've got a little fellow of my own, and so help me God, I am going to quit the business, and I will vote dry Tuesday. I am done with it all. I can't stand it any longer." These were the words of a saloonkeeper of Superior, Wisconsin, at the conclusion of an eloquent address by ex-Governor Frank M. Hanly, as reported in the National Enquirer. The liquor dealer with some of his friends had slipped into the meeting and was so impressed with the words of the speaker that he went out declaring that he was through with the drink business forever.

The New York Tribute has written the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal church that after April 1, 1916, it will no longer accept advertisements of acoholic liquors.

The Indianapolis News, said to be the leading paper of Indiana, and which has a circulation of 135,000 copies daily, has announced that it has accepted its last liquor advertisement.

The circus people are among the latest to realize the financial superiority of a dry community over a license community. The plan for booking the big circuses for 1916, it is reported, is to play only dry towns, with the exception of the large cities, and to pass by the smaller wet cities of the United States.

In discussing this new plan for circus booking for 1916, the manager of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus, as given by William Allen White in the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette, says, "We do better business in a dry town than in a wet one. We noticed the difference in Missouri; always the day's receipts were better in a town that had gone dry under local option than in a town where saloons were open. And business is better in Kansas than it was in Missouri.

"Let me give you an example. We showed in Crawfordsville, Ind., this summer, and that town is dry. It was dry in more ways than one this year, for the rains were scarce and crops bad, hard times apparently pushing on. Yet we showed to capacity crowds. A few days later we pulled into Shelbyville, Ind., where the streets are lined with open saloons. Rains had been plentiful in this region, crops were fine and there was plenty of money. The streets were crowded with people at 9:30 in the morning, but our second section was delayed by a wreck, and we didn't get our parade on until about noon. By that time many of the men had gone into the thirst parlors and spent their cash over the bar. They didn't have any desire left for the circus, and their wives and children wandered up and down the streets without money, and they didn't see the circus, either. So we played to miserably small crowds.

"I have seen this whole game up and down and backward and across," he concluded, "and I want to tell you that all this talk about a town needing saloons or gambling houses to stimulate business is the purest bunk."

"Here is an amusement man's view on booze," comments Mr. White. "Once again the verdict is thumbs down for John Barleycorn. Poor Old John! He can't mix with religion or politics or business. If he can't mix with the amusements where does he get in? And the answer is that national prohibition is just around the corner."

CITIZENS' COMMITTEE MAKES AN APPEAL

$1,500 is Needed to Entertain the State Letter-carriers Here May 30.

The Citizens' Committee in charge of the arrangement for the entertainment of the State Letter Carriers' Convention, to be held here on May 30, today makes the following appeal:

"The letter carriers are a body of unobtrusive men who visit our homes daily and bring to us letters from our friends and the news of the world. They have been attending conventions in other cities for years, but for the last seventeen years have not held a convention in Plainfield. They found a feeling amongst their fellow members that it was time Plainfield entertained a convention, and so, in competition with Newark, they appealed to the State body for the convention this year and were granted the request.

"The department rules forbid their soliciting funds to finance this convention, and manifestly twenty-six men cannot spend $1,500 from their own pockets to entertain 3,000 guests.

"A Citizens' Committee has been appointed who have appealed to the citizens of Plainfield to help finance this splendid convention; their efforts have been rewarded with about $1,000, but $1,500 is needed, and an appeal is now made to those numerous friends of the carriers for their co-operation in raising this small balance. Very many people have not received letters of appeal which were sent out to a few of our public-spirited citizens, and to such this appeal is now made that all may participate in this good work.

"The letter carriers' arganizations of the State are very keen to come to Plainfield, believing it will be one of the finest conventions ever held. Fifteen hundred letter carriers from New York, with their Ladies' Auxiliary and many of their wives, will attend in a body and bring four bands of music totalling nearly one hundred musicians, are coming in two special trains over the Central Railroad. They will also bring some veteran carriers who have been in the service fifty years. These will be provided with automobiles to take part in the parade. Elizabeth, Newark, Bayonne, Jersey City have all promised to come with large delegations and brass bands, and delegates will be present from every letter carriers' organization in the State.

"Plainfield occupies the unique position of having every letter carrier a member of the organization, and the men are putting forth every effort to make this convention a splendid success and an honor to the city of Plainfield. With the co-operation of the citizens of Plainfield in supplying the necessary remaining $500, the financial needs will be met and the convention will be an assured success in every way. The convention will be well advertised and a large number of people from the surrounding cities may be expected to come here to see the parade.

"If sufficient funds are provided, it is anticipated that a band concert may be given in the City Park by the New York Letter Carriers' Band, which will of itself be a great treat.

"Those who have not already added their mite to the expense of this great undertaking should have their contributions in the hands of Mr. William Floersch, treasurer, by May 1. Tthat the letter carriers may be able to meet the necessary expenses, those who did not receive letters requesting contributions may now accept this opportunity and show by their generosity that Plainfield is indeed the Queen City of the East in making the afternoon of May 30 the best day and the best parade and the most music that Plainfield has ever seen."

WILL ELECT OFFICERS.

The annual election of officers of the Public Recreation Committee will take place in the Public Library parlors Thursday night. The election was postponed from the annual meeting which was held last week.

TABERNACLE PIANOS ATTRACT COMMENT

Sweet-toned Instruments Are Donated by Manufacturers.

Many Plainfield people who have been going to the big Biederwolf Tabernacle have talked a great deal about the two little pianos that snuggle so comfortably on the big chorus platform. These little gems have been heard every night, accompanying the choir and the soloists. So full and round are their tones that even the fiftypiece orchestra does not cover them. Oftentimes Mr. McEwan asks the orchestra and choir to be silent while the two pianos fill the big Pine Temple with their clean, pure tones, to the very great delight of the thousands of listeners.

These "Baby" Grands are Weaver pianos, made in York, Pa., and they are the official pianos for all Biederwolf Tabernacles: These same little pianos were used in the York, Pa., Tabernacle last year, and have been in every campaign since that time.

In scores of large, specially-built music halls of our country, many pianos have failed to give complete satisfaction to both performer and hearer. Here in Plainfield, in the great Temple, built of rough pine boards, the two parlor grand Weaver pianos have certainly made good. With no help in the design of the building to reinforce their tones and add to their carrying qualities, these two little "jewels" have done satisfactory duty through every meeting. There has been no questioning whether or not pianos were accompanying the chorus. They speak for themselves.

Mr. McEwan, the soloist and chorus director, says: "I shall always use Weaver pianos when I can get them. I never had anything to equal them in tonal quality, smoothness of scale and power. They are equal to both the soft, sympathetic demands of solo accompanying and the brilliant, powerful dobue-fortissimo effects so essential to chorus and orchestra work."

Miss Boals, the pianist, says: "I have become very much attached to my Weaver piano. It's touch is responsive, delicate and at the same time firm. It has never disappointed me, whatever the demands have been, either in solo or chorus accompanying."

These pianos have been given by the Weaver Company to the Plainfield public for their use in the Tabernacle without one penny of expense. The Weaver Company believes in sharing their good things with others.

The secret of this big donation to the Biederwolf Religious Campaigns is the great personal interest that the Weaver Piano Company takes in all kinds of religious work.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

Now we're convinced the baseball season is here. We've gotten Warry McLaughlin placed for the summer and that's a big peg in accomplishing the preliminary details to sending the national pastime on the road to success hereabouts. "Mac'" is slated to handle the managerial end of a Dunellen combine and that he is fitted for the task ahead of him is well known. Outside of Bob Bogardus the former Pittsburgh National League hurler is probably the best acquainted with the condition of the sport in that hustling suburb and he will have little trouble in rounding up a gang of old timers that will line up well with any independent or City League combine lurking around these parts. If Dunellenites give Warry the support his venture deserves little doubt exists as to the probable success of the undertaking.

Trapshooting as a sport is here to stay. It has gained a bigger notch in the popularity pole than it ever had before and indications are that there will be a considerably larger number interested in it before long. The traps now in use are several of the best in the State and those who have organized to promote the pastime are enthusiastic about its future. Heretofore there have been large numbers of sportsmen interested in the pastime but because of the lack of organization it has not been as active as it might be otherwise. Now the ringleaders have combined to put it on a rock bottom basis and the feat is well on the road to accomplishment.

Paul Collier has suggested that a "three-time" trophy be offered for competition in the High School Baseball League instead of the single yearly award. This to the fan interested in interscholastic baseball is a subject well worth note and should be considered favorably by all concerned. Mr. Collier has even gone so far as to offer a large silver loving cup which will become the permanent possession of the high school winning it three times. In the past there has been such an abundance of cups for yearly award that the trophy part of the league has become belittled. If the three year clause was put into effect the interest would stimulate and the contest for the cup would mean a whole lot more than it does now.

Just give the City League rosters the "once-over" and see how many of the star leaguers gained their initial baseball foothold on the Parker Field playground diamond. Yes, there are a good many of them and they form the nucleus around which the organization has been formed. These young sand-lot products trained in the summer baseball school of George W. Wriston have forced some of the more experienced old-timers to take a back seat and are making a strong bid for the spotlight monopoly. More will be heard from them when the 1916 season gets underway and the juvenile athletes now being groomed at the Randolph road rendezvous will be ready to step into their shoes long before they are ready to become "has-beens."

According to the schedule mapped out by the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association's committee Plainfield women golfers are going to have a busy time of it this year. Plainfield and Westfield are prominent factors in the Jersey division and the talent available predicts that the Queen City female brassie wielders will be right up with the leaders when the last hole is played. Nothing would do more to liven up women's golf interest hereabouts than to have the local performers compete in the intersectional matches and that's what we expect to see accomplished.

Let's see, it's about time that midnight walking club began operations, isn't it? Some of the veteran pedestrians look as though a little walking would do them good and some of the "talked-to-deaths" would be glad to have them get out "on the road" for an hour or two each night. There has been a whole lot of talking about long-distance hikes of late but to date nothing has been started.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Conductor on Fourth street trolley car Sunday afternoon "bawling" out a colored man when the latter took his nickel fare from his mouth, where he had placed it for safe keeping while climbing on board.

Well-known Plainfielder so greatly stirred up by Dr. Biederwolf's admonition for everyone to pay up his debts that he sent a check to a Front street business house to apply on an account that had stood since 1914.

Lunch wagon that dished out the foundation of many a case of indigestion on Park avenue, now standing on a flat car in the Richmond street freight yard, awaiting transportation to a new field of endeavor, where purveyors of anti-dyspepsia tablets await its coming with great joy.

Sad-eyed young baseball rooter who had been watching the Daily Press score board yesterday afternoon remarking to a friend as he passed over $2, "The safest kind of bet is the one you don't make."

Disgruntled personage on West Front street looking at the fast receding form of a friend and muttering thusly: 'Some men are so suspicious that they suspect every person who is polite to them desires to borrow money."

"Mike" Higgins, the "safety first" chauffeur, wishing a gypsy curse on "Stump" Barry, a fellow taxicab driver, when the latter scared "Mike" out of his seven senses by grazing his heel with a swift-moving auto on North avenue.

HAS SPEEDY AUTO.

Joseph Christiaens, the famous foreign racing driver, arrived yesterday on the St. Louis from England, bringing with him what is reputed to be one of the fastest cars in the world, a new Sunbeam Six, with which he reached a speed of 120 miles an hour at the Brooklands track abroad in trial spins. Christiaens is here to enter his Sunbeam car for the Metropolitan Trophy race at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on May 13.

He will tour the country with his speeder after the local race, taking part in the contests at Indianapolis and Chicago later in the season. As the Sheepshead Bay track is supposedly faster than even the Brooklands track, the Sunbeam entry is expected to set some new figures for the circuit.

MAGEE RECOVERING.

Boston, April 25.—Sherwood Magee, left fielder of the Boston Braves, is expected to return to the game soon. The injury to his wrist, due to being hit by a pitched ball by Bender, is not as serious as reported. The broken bones have knit rapidly.

Entirely Different.

"It's all very well before a girl's married for her to get a flower in her hair," remarked the observer of events and things, "but it's an entirely different matter if, after she's married, she gets her hair in flour."

PLAINFIELD NOSED OUT BY SOUTH SIDE

Outhit Newarkers but Made Some Costly Miscues at Critical Moments.

Although they outhit their opponents, the Plainfield High School warriors threw away the game with South Side High School yesterday afternoon on Parker Field by a score of 4 to 3. Only half of the Newarkers' runs were earned, the others being the result of wild throws over first base.

Davidson pitched his first whole game for P. H. S. and showed up well. He believes in making the fielders work and only in the pinches did he try to send his man the "poke-out" route. In the first inning he walked Kohn, the first to face him, and a sacrifice advanced him to second. After the next man had fanned, McDowell threw wild on an easy chance over first base and allowed the first run to come over.

P. H. S. took the lead in the second inning when Linke was hit and stole second and third. Noonan was safe on an error and Linke scored. McDowell's clean single scored Noonan. The locals could not push across any more counters until the last frame and saw themselves tied when the visitors got another tally in the third and another in the fifth.

JUNIOR JOTTINGS

By "Joe."

It does one good to see mention made of his efforts. When one sees his name in print, he is spurred on to greater efforts. However, ill-directed praise is worse than useless. This column was instituted last year for the purpose of giving credit for things done. It will continue to give credit, and the juvenile artists of the community are invited to do things worthy of comment. When you hand in the score of your game, Master Manager, don't be too modest about the particulars. Give your pitcher or yourself credit, if he or you deserve it.

When the Seventh Graders battled on Hope Common two "finds" were recorded. Both of the discoveries were centered about the efforts of pitchers, the two moundsmen being Fuller and Boldrini. Of the two the latter seemed the least erratic, although at times he had difficulty in finding the plate. Fuller had a well developed outcurve, but, aside from this, used nothing unusual. He, however, has the ability to mix things, and this ought to carry him through the season. Really, the two boys show promise of developing into first-class hurlers.

Joseph Guinee is a lad, small of stature, yet large in his knowledge and conception of diamond principles. He controls the lion's share of Liberty A. C. stock and looks after the first sacking end of the business. Joe is a good little player and should develop into a first-rate artist. He is still a "kid," but even "kids" have ambitions.

"You know Ipper, Al." Sure we do. Ipper Witteman is the star catcher of the St. Mary's School nine. "Ipp" is a mere slip of a lad, but he has a wonderful wing.

Tommy Kyle, the fourth Kyle brother to break into the national baseball limelight, is a first baseman. He can hit like a Chase and field equally as well. Tommy pastimes with the St. Mary's team. There is no truth in the rumor that he is flirting with the Giants.

Anthony Deady comes of another family of baseball brothers. He is a pitcher of some class. He can field well and is an adept at clouting the pill. "Goo," as his friends are permitted to call him, is aspiring to land a berth with the Holy Name Cadets, and, later, with the Abstainers. May success attend his efforts.

Bill Reasoner informs us that he is a manager. Bill has looked up a long line of suitable names to call his outfit, but has decided that the "Crescents" is as fitting a nom de pume as he can find. Bill's team is composed of colored boys, and will, perhaps, be the only colored team in the city this season.

Barney Sachar is responsible for the announcement that he can hit. Barney offers statistics to prove his assertion. He is a member of the Washington School brigade and insists that his is no "water-carrier's" position.

Our "Hall of Fame" for this evening harbors the name of one "Mike," who is accused of playing ball with Charley McCarthy's Peerless A. C. Who this "Mike" is we do not know. Perhaps another Masked Marvel has been unearthed.

The battery of Isaacson and Solomon is certainly one that has showered credit upon old Erin.

School will adjourn soon and the boys will be flocking out to Parker Field to register in the Junior League for the coming season. Supervisor Wriston will make special provision for all the youngsters who decide to play the national game.

BORO SCHOOL CALLS OFF WESTFIELD DATE

Would Have Been First Time the Two Rivals Have Met in Last Six Years.

Owing to the fact that a number of the players are working during vacation, Manager Charles Roll, of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, cancelled the contest scheduled with Westfield High School for tomorrow at that place. This would be the first time that these two schools would have met on the baseball diamond for six years. The contest will probably be switched to a later date in the season.

N. P. H. S. will clash with New Brunswick High School Saturday on Hyde Field. The school from the Raritan town is strongly represented on the diamond this season, practically the same combination that divided honors with the locals last year being in the lineup.

BASKETBALL TAKES A LAST HARD GASP

Borough All-Stars Defeated Scotch Plains Combine Last Night at That Place.

Basketball still thrives at the Scotch Plains Parish House, the second team of that club going down to defeat last evening before the Plainfield All-Stars, a combination from this city, by the score of 54-36. Players on both sides were reliable marksmen and dropped in baskets from any direction, Southard, Hodge and Barry especially starring in this department for the winners, this trio aggregating twenty field goals. Saunders and Roberts were effective scoresmen for the home combination, each collecting a quartet of field goals.

The lineup:

CITY LEAGUE ROSTERS FILED WITH FAST PLAYERS SIGNED

Some of the Best Performers in This Section Will Be on Hand at the Opening Saturday—All Clubs Ready for the Opening Gong—Netherwood Will Raise Championship Pennant—Official Scorers and Umpires Selected—Clubs Anticipate Record Season.

Final details in the preliminary arrangements for the opening of the City Baseball League were completed at a meeting in the Daily Press offices last night, President Walter C. Dobbins presiding. All is in readiness for the curtain raising, special ceremonies having been planned for this occasion by the Netherwood A. C., pennant winners last year. To usher in the 1916 round of games, the East End combine will hoist the title gonfalon on the Netherwood lot and indications are that a majority of those players who helped to win it last year will be back in uniform again.

The rosters presented last night by the six managers show a collection of names that has never before been equalled in baseball circles herabouts. The choicest available talent has been signed by the various managers and will be ready for duty Saturday. Plainfield has had baseball leagues before but the material has never approached in calibre that which has been collected for competition on the present circuit.

An innovation this year which will probably meet with universal approval both from fans and players is the appointment of an official scorer for each club. In this way it will be possible to compile accurate statistics at different intervals during the season and afford an opportunity for comparison. Those selected to tally the results are: Clinton Avenue, George Dufford; Hope Chapel, David Wardrop; Plainfield A. A., Morris Cantor; T. A. B., Rufus LaRue; Netherwood, William Hankerson; First Baptist, Fred Dixon.

The pitching staffs of the teams are made up for the most part of hurlers representing the younger generation. Johnny Dixon, a former Saurer box artist; Jim McFadden, the youth who created such a sensation in Bound Brook last season; Dick Schott, recognized as the best pitcher on the 1915 circuit; Jack Denny, a former Plainfield High School star and a City Leaguer of note last year; Dan Denny, former North Plainfield High School mound performer; Ernest Stahl, another Borough High School boy; Louis Slocum, one of the best known semi-professionals in this section; and Matty Coughlin, a former Plainfield High School pitcher.

Other notables worthy of mention in the list are Joe and Henry Albert, of Scotch Plains' fame; Jim Emery, who plays third base for Perth Amboy on Sundays and who once adorned a minor league lot; Britt Martin, Plainfield's oldest and best known ball player; Jimmy Nash, formerly of Plainfield High School and now of collegiate fame, and Allen Snyder, another P. H. S. product.

The following games will be played Saturday next:

T. A. B. at First Baptist.
Clinton Avenue at Hope Chapel.
Plainfield A. A. at Netherwood.

Official Umpires.

Henry Mansen.
Frank Malange.
Jimmy Montross.

Sub-Umpires.

INTEREST KEEN IN ORGANIZATION OF RIFLE CLUB FOR PLAINFIELD

Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart Elected President—Seventy-three Charter Members—Executive Committee Looking for a Range—Prominent City Residents Backing the Movement.

Enthusiasm proved the keynote of the organization meeting of the Plainfield Rifle Club in the Frost building last night, more than fifty representative citizens of this city and its nearby suburbs being present to start the ball arolling. Seldom has a proposition of this nature created such widespread interest and the status of the body may best be determined through a glance at the seventy-three names on the charter list. City officials, prominent New York commuters, men high in the business world and many who have qualified as expert marksmen were on hand when the meeting was called to order by Charles H. Frost, who presided throughout the evening, yielding to a request to remain in the chair even after a permanent officer had been elected.

Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart was chosen president when the elections were conducted; C. W. Leonard, vice president; Truman T. Pierson, secretary, and Warren Ackerman, treasurer. Henry Haurand, of North Plainfield, was named to head the executive committee and he will have as his assistants the other officers. President Stewart is particularly interested in organizations of this nature, being one of those who attended the military training camp at Plattsburg last summer. Mr. Frost, the presiding officer, also underwent a course of training at Plattsburg. Both of these men have been influential in the preliminary work and are looked upon as valuable advisory officers.

A meeting of the executive board has been set for next Monday night at which time the matter of obtaining a suitable range will be determined. This all important subject came in for considerable discussion last night, a number of sites being proposed. The censensus of opinion at the meeting, although only informally discussed, indicated that the sentiment was strongly in favor of establishing a range within easy walking distance of Plainfield along the Watchung Mountain range. The mountains would form a natural background for target practice, thereby eliminating the expense that would be necessary to construct a heavy metal backing. It is the aim of the executive committee, which has the matter entirely in charge, to establish a range that may be easily reached by trolley or within walking distance.

Forty of last night's applications for charter membership came by letter and the remainder of the seventy-three were signers. It was explained at the meeting that the rules prescribed by the United States for such organizations would be strictly adhered to and that it is expected that some government assistance would be forthcoming. The club is primarily for men who want to learn to handle a rifle and to become good target shots. Dates for future meetings will be set Monday night by the executive committee.

The charter members are:

Samuel Rothberg, Harry A. Dunn, William M. Banghart, Percy H. Stewart, S. F. Sabocher, R. T. Phillips, C. H. Vail, Henry Haurand, Ralph C. Davison, Dr. W. H. Anthony, Charles Lundstrum, William R. LEALS LITERALLY CUT TO PIECES BY RIVALS

Private School Boys Swamped Underneath a 21 to 2 Score by Netherwood Clan.

Leal School baseball players were treated to the season's worst drubbing yesterday afternoon, losing out to the Netherwood team by a score of 21 to 2. The private school athletes were never in the running from the start, and the rival force gathered hits and runs at will. Six errors mingled in by the local fielders helped the other side to pile up the record tally.

Henry fanned sixteen of the Leal batsmen and allowed but one safe bingle. Netherwood collected twenty hits, four of which were credited to Lambert, and three each to Ayres, Henry and Renni.

LIDGATE'S NAME ON LEAGUE ROSTER

Fanwood Boy Slated to Catch for the Media, Delaware County, Team.

Rosters for the six clubs in the Delaware County Baseball League were filed today and the circuit will be started next Saturday afternoon. Included in the list of players is the name of Eugene Lidgate, of Fanwood, a well-known, semi-professional performer of these parts. "Liddy" is slated to catch for the Media team. He spent the week-end at his home in Fanwood and returned to Philadelphia, where he is employed, this morning.

The indications are that this will be the banner year of this league, and the fans are eager for the opener. The six clubs look to be evenly matched, and this would indicate a very close race for the bunting.

The parks are being improved, and considerable money is being spent for additional seating capacity. The J. G. Brill management, which handles the team of which Lidgate is a member, is building an additional grand stand which will seat 1,000 persons and new bleachers are being erected in left field, with a seating capacity of 500. Clifton Heights is also going to build a new grand stand. Brill will open the season at Media with a band concert, parade and other frills.

WAR NEWS

Turks Claim Victories.

Constantinople, April 25.—Turkish war statement:

Iraq Front.—Owing to the rising of the Tigris at some points we were unable to pursue the enemy who were beaten Saturday. The enemy yesterday ineffectively bombarded our positions near Felshie. Some of our troops attacked soldiers of the enemy armed with hand grenades who approached our positions near Beitsea, on the right bank of the Tigris, and killed them with grenades.

Bernstorff Has Heard Nothing.

New York, April 25.—When asked concerning reports that he had announced at a private dinner last night that Germany had yielded every point at issue with the United States Ambassador, Von Bernstorff said today:

"I have heard absolutely nothing from my government, and I have made no statements as to Germany's intentions."

The ambassador left for Washington today.

More Neutral Mail Siezed.

Berlin, April 25.—A despatch from Copenhagen states that a British warship halted the Danish steamer Gullfoss while en route from Iceland to Denmark, and took off all the first-class matter sent by parcel post and the passengers' baggage.

Germans Again Checked.

Paris, April 25.—French war statement:

Three attacks by the Germans against the new positions of the French at Le Mort Homme (Dead Man's Hill), northwest of eVrdun, were repulsed by the French, the War Office announced today. After an intense bombardment, the Germans again assaulted the French positions on the Avocourt line. This also was checked. The fighting west of the Meuse, according to the official information, was on a front approximately five miles wide. The assaults of the Germans were evidently intended as a counter-offensive to check the steady advance of the French in that position.

Raid on French Towns.

Paris, April 25.—Five German war planes raided the French coast town of Dunkirk this morning, dropping six bombs. One woman was killed and three men were wounded. The War Office announced that only slight damage was done.

Air Raid on Saloniki.

Paris, April 25.—A despatch to a news agency says that a squadron of German aeroplanes has delivered another attack on the entrenched camp of the entente allies at Saloniki, the airmen flying over the camp from all directions and dropping bombs at various points. Little damage was done.

More Russians in France.

Paris, April 25.—Announcement was made today of the arrival of a second convoy of Russian troops at marseilles.

Sentence Military Shirkers.

Amsterdam, April 25.—Forty-five persons inculpated in the issue of fraudulent discharges from military service in France have been sentenced by court-marital to terms of imprisonment varying from two to five years. On Dr. Lombard, the principal offender, a sentence was imposed of ten years in prison and a fine of $600.

BIEDERWOLF PARTY VISITS NEW YORK

Evangelist Spoke at Carnegie Hall Rally Last Night.

The Biederwolf evangelistic party paid a flying visit to New York yesterday. Dr. Biederwolf spoke last evening in Carnegie Hall at a rally of the evangelistic committee of New York city, and members of the quartet sang there. Mr. MacEwan also sang a solo, one of his own songs, and the two offerings were well received by the big audience.

In the course of his remarks Dr. Biederwolf said:

"I was not pessimistic, but we must not blind our eyes to the truth. The Presbyterian denomination, with her nearly two million members, made a net gain last year of only one and four-fifths per cent. The Methodist church did about the same. The Congregational and the Reformed and the Evangelical churches must confess with humiliation to a net gain of the merest trifle over one per cent."

After the meeting members of the party paid a visit to "Chinatown," and called at the "Midnight Mission."

In the afternoon Mr. MacEwan attended the Long Island Baptist conference held in Brooklyn and was introduced to the conference, after which he made a short talk. He was the guest of the Rev. George Caleb Moore, pastor of the Temple Baptist church, of Brooklyn, who is a friend.

MUSICAL PROGRAM FOR TABERNACLE TONIGHT

There will be a special musical program at the Biederwolf Tabernacle tonight. The musical program follows:

Duet, "He Is So Precious to Me," Mr. Heaton and Mr. Mac Ewan; selection, "All Hail Emmanuel," choir; reading, selected, Mrs. Brake; song, 'What Did He Do?" choir; solo, "Ninety and Nine," Mr. Mac Ewon.

W. E. BROWN WINS IN HIS SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Last October William A. Coddington brought suit in the Chancery Court in Jersey City for William A. Brown, of Westfield, for divorce against his wife on a statutory charge and on April 14 Chancellor Walker granted an absolute divorce to Mr. Brown.

The testimony showed that on the 17th of last June Mrs. Brown eloped with a man by the name of Woodward from out of town. Since that time nothing has been heard of either Mrs. Brown or Mr. Woodward. The Browns, both members of the Westfield Golf Club, were well known in society. Mr. Woodward, who was a friend of Mr. Brown, was invited out to visit at Brown's home. Mr, Brown's business called him to New York at an early hour each day and while the latter was away Mrs. Brown, it is alleged, entertained Woodward.

Mrs. Brown and Woodward would go out an automobile rides and play golf together at the Westfield Golf Club, it is said. It was noticed by those at the golf club that more than the usual attention was shown by Mr. Woodward to Mrs. Brown. The husband, it is claimed, was not acquainted with these intimate relations until after the alleged elopement took place.

MISS WILLETTA HAINES BRIDE OF W. C. JORDAN

Miss Willetta Haines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haines, of 1225 East Second street, and Wory Chapen Jordan, of East Seventh street, were married last night at the parsonage of the Netherwood Reformed church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward S. Ralston in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends. Miss E. B. Young acted as bridesmaid and C. T. Williams was the best man.

Following a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Jordan will make their home at 1257 East Second street. The groom is a New Englander who came to this city some time ago as an employe of the Bosch Magneto Company, when the concern took over the Rushmore plant.

The bride was attended by Miss Helen Maloney and John Hennessey, of this city, was the best man. After a reception given at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. M. B. Caffrey, on Orchard place, the couple left on a trip. Upon their return they will reside in Elizabeth, where Mr. DeLong is employed by a chemical company.

CAPACITY CROWDS AT DRUM CORPS' DANCE

Local Musical Organization Provides Novel Feature at Annual Affair.

Saengerbund Hall held a capacity number of young people last night, the occasion being the annual drill and reception given under the auspices of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps of this city. Three fife and drum corps took part in the prize competition last night, two silver cups being offered as first and second prize. The first award went to the American Fife and Drum Corps of Rahway, which had sixteen men in line, nine of whom were fifers. Their appearance and good time easily picked them as a winner. St. Mary's T. A. B. S. Corps was a close second, being beaten by the visitors by but two points. The Rail and Harbor Corps of Elizabeth had difficulty in getting started, and did not make as good an impression as they generally do.

Another feature which proved of much interest was the prize waltz in which six couples participated. Through elimination, but two remained on the floor and the judges had considerably difficulty in picking the winning couple. After changing the partners of the young women competing and continuing again, the final decision was awarded to Miss Catherine Regan and Martin Muldowney. During the evening, Dorothy Glaentzer, a juvenile performer, sang several vocal selections. She was accompanied on the piano by her uncle, Walter Glaentzer.

Dancing was the principle form of enjoyment, however ,and the attendants enjoyed this until an early hour this morning. Professor Squier's orchestra rendered the musical numbers.

INVESTIGATING CROOKEDNESS FOR BELGIAN GOVERNMENT

William A. Codington yesterday afternoon and up to midnight represented the Belgium Government in relation to alleged crooked work perpetrated against the Belgium Government in regard to a number of a 1,000 horses which the Belgium Government has had in keeping in Somerset county, west of Raritan. An investigation by a representative of the Belgium Consul in New York city revealed the fact that several days ago two of these horses, which were supposed to have died of disease, had been sold by a man, who claimed to be in the employ of the Belgium Government. These horses were recovered last night by Mr. Coddington, Detective Totten, of Somerset county, and detectives of Belgium's Vice Consul in New York. Mr. Coddington left for Somerville this afternoon to make further investigation. Thus far it has failed to reveal the identity of the parties interested in the deception.

ANNOUNCEMEN ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morrison, of Oak Tree, gave a dinner party Sunday evening, at which time the announcement of their eldest daughter, May, to E. W. Horn, of Plainfield, was made. The program for the evening was arranged in a very unique fashion, and the announcement was made known just as the guests were about to be seated for dinner, which was served at 8 o'clock. No time has been set for wedding.

FUNERAL OF AUSTON GULICK.

The funeral of Auston Gulick, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital, Friday, was held at the home of his sister, Mrs. Edith Schlick, of 695 West Third street, yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, and was attended by many relatives and friends. There were numerous floral tributes and the interment was made in Hillside cemetery, members of the family acting as pallbearers.

GRAMMAR GRADE TO HAVE EXERCISES

Borough School Board Approve Plan Presented by Principal Aungst.

As a supplement to his report at the monthly meeting of the Borough Board of Education, held last evening, Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst, presented the proposal of the Borough Parent-Teacher Association that the eighth grade of the grammar school department have graduation exercises, and the proposition was carried by a vote of 4 to 3. In his report Mr. Aungst gave the present enrolment of the schools as 1,260, which compares with an enrollment of 1,216 for the same month last year. Reporting on fire drills held during the month, Mr. Aungst said that five drills were held in the Somerset School and two drills apiece in the Harrison Avenue and Watchung schools. These drills, Mr. Aungst reported, showed that the pupils of the Somerset School could all get out of the school in a period of time ranging between one minute and twenty seconds and one minute and forty seconds, while the Harrison Avenue School can be vacated in fifty-five seconds, and the Watchung School in one minute and fifteen seconds.

The teachers' committee reported that the following teachers would not return next year: Miss Alice Leigh, Miss Effie Henderson and Miss Rose Marsh.

Miss Alice Leigh and Miss Henderson have accepted offers to teach in the Plainfield schools, and Miss Barnard is to be married. The committee recommended that all of the remaining teachers be reelected, and that Miss Rose Nash, teacher of the Third grade, be promoted to the Sixth grade. These recommendations were favorably acted upon.

Among other business was the decision to engage the Plainfield High School for the annual commencement exercises in place of the Plainfield Theatre, which had been tentatively engaged; the acceptance of the annual report of the building and grounds committee; the adoption of the salary schedule for the teachers for the coming year, and the payment of bills aggregating $1,200. It was announced that a phonograph is being tested for accompaniment purposes in the Harrison Avenue school.

ENDING OF A SUCCESSFUL LIFE

built the Crescent Oval for the big bicycle race meets and also the clubhouse on West Second street, now the home of Plainfield Aerie of Eagles. Mr. Doane always took part in the Crescent Wheelmen's big "runs," and at the time the Plainfield Athletic Club held a yearly athletic meet on the old Washington avenue grounds alongside Green brook he was one of the principal participants. At one of these meets he broke the 100 yard dash amateur record, making it in ten seconds flat.

Although Mr. Doane never held a municipal office in Plainfield he maintained a keen interest in all public affairs and because of this was nominated by the Republican voters for Freeholder in 1904. He was elected by a majority far ahead that of any other candidate on the ticket. From the outset he showed his business ability in caring for the county and was re-elected for successive terms and still holding the position when death came. Mr. Doane did many things for the benefit of his constituents but the most pronounced of these was the establishment of Bonnie Burn Sanatarium for tubercular patients on the beautiful site it occupies just north of Scotch Plains. He first broached the subject to the Board of Freeholders and worked incessantly until the splendid institution was a fact, taking care of scores of Union county persons who would otherwise lack good treatment. He was made chairman of the Bonnie Burn management committee and also occupied a position on the Muhlenberg Hospital Board of Governors as representative of the Freeholders. The Prison Reform work which Sheriff Otto instituted at the Elizabeth jail was another of Mr. Doane's pet schemes for the betterment of mankind and he had the satisfaction of knowing before he died that his energies had not been misapplied. Despite these numerous interests and the fact that he had a large business to maintain Mr. Doane also gave up a portion of his time to act as a member of the local Recreation Committee, serving with the faithfulness that characterized all his doings. In all these fields his going will be greatly missed.

The Masonic fraternities with which Mr. Doane was affiliated were Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26; Jerusalem Chapter, R. A. M., and Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, all of this city, and Salaam Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Newark. He also belonged to Plainfield Lodge of Elks, and Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W.

Besides his wife, who was Miss Eva Doane, daughter of Captain Benjamin Doane, who resides at the East Seventh street home, Mr. Doane is survived by one son, Clyde Doane, of Putnam avenue, and a daughter, Miss May R. Doane. He was also a brother to Fire Chief T. O. Doane, John H. Doane and Charles E. Doane, all of Plainfield, and Mrs. Elizabeth Doane Barrett, the only surviving sister, of Brooklyn. Mr. Doane had always made his legal residence in Plainfield, but in recent years he maintained a summer home at Great Barrington, Nova Scotia, where his father was born and which is also the birthplace of Chief Doane.

"THE MYSTIC ROSE" WINS HIGH HONORS

Favorable Press Comments Are Received Concerning Comic Opera.

Judging from the many unusual favorable press comments, those who witness "The Mystic Rose," the Japanese-American opera which is to be staged at the Plainfield Theatre on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, under the auspices of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, will be agreeably surprised.

In order that readers may judge of the manner in which this opera has been received in various parts of the United States, a few of the comments are reproduced below: From the Long Branch Record: "Long Branch folks, last night, were treated to the grandest performance ever given by local talent. It was the premier of 'The Mystic Rose,' Robert P. Skilling's seems incredible. * * * After two it was ever before attempted here. Mr. Skilling, the composer and director, is a genius of the highes order. * * * How a production of such magnitude could be presented in three short weeks, faultlessly, as it was here, seems increditable. * * * After two hours of intense pleasure, the vast audience was held in suspence for a few moments, and, lo! the curtain arose on the 'Flower and Butterfly' ballet,—a radiant, mystifying, over-powering illusion. But when we try to describe it, words become colorless, weak. It is too beautiful for description. That must be left to the inner consciousness of those who were fortunate enough to see it."

From the Boise, Idaho, Capital News: "'The Mystic Rose,' the most elaborate home talent production undertaken in Boise. * * * The fact that there was not a flaw, speaks well for Robert P. Skilling, the director. The scene presented at the opening of the third act was the most beautiful stage picture ever presented on a Boise stage." (This critic evidently included in his comparison, Belasco's "The Girl of the Golden West" and "The Bohemian Girl," both of which appeared at this same theatre during the two preceding weeks.)

The sale of tickets continued at a brisk pace last evening and this morning. Plenty of good seats remain for Monday, and where not more than two people wish to be seated together, good seats can still be had for Tuesday and Wednesday.

WILL QUIETLY WED AT NOON TOMORROW

Mrs. Craig A. Marsh to Become the Wife of Orville T. Waring.

Mrs. Mary Catherine Marsh, widow of Craig Adams Marsh, of West Eighth street, and Orville T. Waring, of Park avenue, will be married at noon tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Marsh. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Mrs Marsh is a member will perform the ceremony.

The guests will be limited to the members of the two immediate families and a few intimate friends of both Mr. Waring and Mrs. Marsh. A wedding breakfast will follow the ceremony, after which the couple will leave on an extended trip. Upon their return they will reside at Mr. Waring's home, 900 Park avenue.

The marriage will unite two families which have been prominent in Plainfield for many years. Mrs. Marsh is a native of Troy, N. Y., near which place Mr. Waring was born. Upon the death of Mr. Marsh several years ago, Mr. Waring was made executor of his estate. He is a director of the Standard Oil Company, of New Jersey; president of the Plainfield Trust Company and a member of the Plainfield Country Club and the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club. His immediate family comprises eight children, all but one of which will be at the wedding. The absent one will be Mrs. Humphrey, wife of Captain Chauncey Humphrey, U. S. A., who cannot get home in time for the ceremony. Mrs. Marsh has no children.

RAILROAD MEN HONOR W. E. HOYT'S NATAL DAY

One hundred railroad men, representing every important line in the country in New York city or adjacent points, tendered a testimonial dinner to William E. Hoyt, of this city, at the Hotel Astor, last night. The affair was in honor of Mr. Hoyt's sixtieth birthday and proved to be a most successful and enjoyable affair in every way. C. C. Thorn, eastern passenger agent for the Southern Railway, acted as toastmaster, and many of the guests made speeches praising the work of the Plainfielder, and wishing him many more years of successful activity. The guests from this city included LeRoy J. Ellis and J. E. Prindle, both of whom are connected with the Norfolk and Western Railway.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature, as reported by the State Trust Company today, is as follows: 9 a. m., 47 degrees; 11 a. m., 52 degrees; 1 p. m., 46 degrees.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh S. Jarvis, of this city, will soon remove to Westchester county, N. Y.

"RUSSELLISM"

Lecture by the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Sunday Afternoon.

It's a strange thing how easily people are led astray in religious matters. They'll have good sense in every other way and yet they'll need a commission on sanity to sit on their case when it comes to religion. They'll allow themselves to be roped in and to be duped and buncoed and bamboozled and hoodwinked by any old sort of a theory as long as it's got a few verses of Scripture in it to make it look like it's religion.

You'd think a man would think a dozen times, or twice anyhow, before he'd throw overboard the simple, genuine faith that saved him in the first place for any new-fangled theory or notion no matter where it comes from or who brings it along.

Then another thing. The average man knows or ought to know that his own opportunity and ability for critical investigation of the Word of God is necessarily very limited, and so you would think that for his interpretation of Scripture he would be more inclined to lean on what practically all the great theologians and scholars and exegettes of all denominations have agreed upon, rather than to jump up and follow the lead of some fanatic or some single individual who appears on the scene with some interpretation of his own and says everybody is wrong but himself, and then go with him or with her, as the case may be, into all sorts of peculiar vagaries and ridiculous eccentricities and extravagant nonsense in general.

But such is not the case. Let any of these self-appointed prophets and self-deceived enthusiasts and self-estimated wise ones come along claiming the authority of God's word for their particular vision of their religious scheme, and like sheep following a bell-wether, saints from inside of the church and backsliders from outside of the church will run after him and follow him to all sorts of ridiculous and insane conclusions with a "Thus saith the Lord" emblazoned on their banner.

Sun Rose Just the Same.

There was old John Alexander Dowie, who thought he had a monopoly on the secrets of God. And there was old Farmer Miller, who had it fixed up that the world was to end on Oct. 22, 1844, and a lot of his duped followers had on their white ascension robes the day it was to happen; but the old sun rose in the east, and rolled on through the sky just the same as usual. There's this bawdy-house religion they call Mormonism, and if the United States don't soon put the clamps on that dirty, devilish thing, the time will come when she will wish she had. There's Madame Tingley with her theosophy out on Point Loma. If you have a sneaking secretive disposition, you were a cat before you became a woman—that's Theosophy all right. Some of you were elephants and some of you were dogs. I haven't time to explain. And there's the fanatical "Holy Ghost and Us" society up in Shiloh, Maine, with its self-deified leader, Rev. Frank Sanford, in the Federal prison at Atlanta. There are the Bahaists, who claim Christ has returned and is incarnated in that ungodly leader, Abdul Baha, or Abbas Effendi, as they call him. And then of Mrs. Eddy and Joanna Southcott and Cumming and Totten and Dimbleby and Biden and a whole raft of other faddists, fanatics, fakers and frauds, some of them, though some of them have been honest enough, we haven't time to speak.

And now comes one Charles Tate Russell, formerly of Allegheny, but now of Brooklyn, with the most fantastic and far-fetched scheme of them all, known as Millenial Dawnism—"Russellism" is a good name for it; for it's all his. His ardent defense of the inspiration of the Bible; his denunciation of the higher critics and new-thought theologians; his constant appeal to the Word of God; his asserted loyalty to Jesus Christ, and his blood; his own pretended consecration and his pious language—are all calculated to catch the ears of the pious but unwary people of the Lord.

He makes much out of what he calls the "due time." God didn't reveal to the Disciples what He has to Russell because the time wasn't due. Polycarp and Ignatius and all the early fathers weren't in it. Augustine and all the other great theologians were clear off. Luther and all the other reformers were in darkness, but now "in due time," the light is shining brightly and Russell has been the first and only man to see it.

Claim as Interpreter.

Now, when a man comes tearing along as this man Russell has done, and puts a black eye on all the scholarship of the past, and pretends to handle Greek as though he were a student of the classics, and claims to be the only right interpreter of the Word of God, it is a natural thing to ask for the credentials of a man like this.

E. T. Russell was formerly a gent's furnishing dealer in Pittsburg, a haberdasher. He is a shrewd man and a man of great business ability. A good deal has been said derogatory of his character. But our concern is with the man's doctrines and not with the man himself.

It is history, however, that both the lower and higher court to which he appealed, granted his wife a separation and described his conduct toward her as insulting and domineering.

It is history that the testimony in court charged him with improper conduct with other women; nevertheless it is altogether fair to the man to say that there has not been any proof of any immorality.

It is history that he tried to defraud his wife of her dower interest by transferring all his property to certain corporations over which, of course, he had full control, and that he tried to defraud her of the alimony fixed by the court by fleeing from one state to another.

It is history that he has secured enormous funds to carry on his propaganda by persuading people that the age is soon to end and that they should dispose of their property to him for the furtherance of the true Gospel. They don't take any collections in the meetings. They have plenty of money; they don't need it.

It is history that he encouraged dealing in what was called "Miracle Wheat," which is supposed to grow about fifteen times as much as the average wheat and which is sold only to the faithful for $90 a bushel.

But if what a man teaches is true, it is worth our while to stop and consider it regardless of the character of the man who teaches it.

That Mr. Russell is the author of one of the most colossal system of religious error of the present day we now propose to show.

The second coming of Christ is the pivotal point of his whole teaching. Around this it all centers.

Here But Unseen.

He says that Christ's second coming took place in 1874, and that all true Christians then in their graves were raised in 1878.

He says that Christ and these Christians are here now but unseen, carrying on a special work and that in October, 1914, Christ would set up His millenial reign and all present governments will then be overthrown.

Now, in trying to bolster up this doctrinal fad of his he becomes guilty of perverting well nigh all the teaching of the Bible concerning the person of Christ and undermines practically every great fundamental of the Christian faith.

To begin with, the theory itself of the Second Coming which he teaches is all wrong.

1. In the first place the day of the coming of Christ is unknown. Whether it be secret and invisible or otherwise, Matthew says (Matt. 25:36): "Of that day and hour knoweth no man." And any attempt to fix it definitely is to assume a knowledge which the Son of God, in Mark 13:2, declared He himself did not possess.

2. I. Corinthians 15:51-52, and I. Thessalonians, teach plainly that the resurrection of the saints takes place immediately upon Christ's Coming. Russell says Christ came in 1874 and the saints were raised four years later, in 1878.

3. I. Thessalonians 4:16-17 teaches that the saints on earth shall, after being changed "in the twinkling of an eye," be caught up at once with the resurrected believers to "meet the Lord in the air." Christ, therefore, could not have come in 1874, because there are Christians here now who were living as Christians then.

4. When Christ comes and the saints are changed and caught up into the air to be with Him, those who are left are surely going to miss them. Matthew 24:40-41 says, "Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left." Did anything of this kind take place in 1874? Did anything unusual take place then? If Christ came in 1874 no one ever knew it but Russell.

5. Haldeman adds to these reasons two others. The first of these is that Seventy years (Daniel's Seventieth Week) after Christ's Second Coming (His Parouisa, that is, his coming for his saints) He will publicly appear on Mt. Olive and usher in the Millenium. Nearly six times seven years have passed since 1874, says Haldeman, and therefore Christ could not have come at that time.

Not Come Yet.

6. The other reason given by Haldeman is that when Christ comes, the Holy Spirit who now "restraineth the Man of Sin' will be "taken out of the way" (II. Thess. 2:7), and as it is evident that the Holy Spirit is still here hindering the power of lawlessness, it is also evident, therefore, that Christ has not yet come.

7. The word plainly teaches and the old-fashioned people of God have always believed that when Christ comes to establish the Millenium, with the saints caught up to Him in the air, this stupendous event will be an extraordinary one when the Son of God will come in His glory garments and earth and heaven by signs astonishing, will proclaim the glad event while the onlooking and awe-stricken world will behold the plentitude of His majestic splendor.

Matthew 24:30 says, "And they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory," and Revelation 1:7 says, "Behold, He cometh with the clouds and every eye shall see Him." Could anything make plainer the fact that His second coming is thus to be a visible one?

But Russell will not have it so.

His coming to establish the Millenia reign is to be an invisible one and only gradually will the world come to recognize the fact that He is here, though not to be seen with the literal eye. Vol. II, page 103.

Of course, the words, "Every eye shall see Him," as well as many other passages are fatal to Russell's theory, and so he must get rid of them. But this is dead easy for him. He sure does hold the championship belt for exegetical jugglery. He can make "white" read "black," change a mountain into a molehill or vice versa, if it suits his purpose, and his whole absurd dream is bolstered up by explanations which ridicule human reason and make out of human language little more than a "double-tongued deception."

When it says in Matt. 24:27, "For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be"; "lightning," says Russell, means "bright shining," and the passage refers to the gradual dawning of his invisible presence. Presumptuous rubbish!

When it says, "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, etc."; this master of Scripture manipulation makes it mean that He will really be "concealed" and when it says "Every eye shall see Him," it means, of course, that no eye shall see Him, but "that in due time all shall recognize His presence invisible, His power and His authority." Vol. 2, page 153.

Twisted and Distorted.

And these are only samples of his numerous other interpretations by which he twists and distorts the word of God to create support for his fantastic and unsubstantial teaching.

Now let us just see where his false teaching concerning the Second Coming of Christ leads us.

Let us first admit for the moment that Christ did come as a Spirit being in 1874. What is a spirit being It is a being without a body. Then what became of the body of Christ after His resurrection and before His return to this earth in 1874.

1. He begins by declaring that Jesus Christ was the creation of God. That He was created a spirit being just as the angels were.

"Our Lord before He left His glory to become a man was a spirit being" (Vol. I, page 177). He says, "Angelic nature is a lower nature than that of our Lord before He become a man," (Vol. I, page 178), and then he says on page 188 of the same volume that, "God had no right to create Jesus higher than the angels, and then further exalt him to the divine nature (at the resurrection) unless he intended to do the same for all the angels and for all men."

But this denies his pre-existence. If He was created He was not co-existent with God. There was a time when He did not exist. He was not the eternal, uncaused, unbegun personality. He was not before all things and by Him all things were not made that were made. He Himself was made. God made Him.

But this unwarrantable and inexcusable contention in the face of the plainest statements of Scripture is little less than contemptible. It is contemptible. It is blasphemy. Around the person of Christ the Bible pours all the wealth of its matchless revelation. His pre-existence and His Deity is declared openly and unmistakably. He is the everlasting and self-caused One, the alone fullness of the Eternal Being.

John says (John I::1), "In the beginning was the Son and the Son was with God and the Son was God." In the beginning was, not "was created," "with God." Coexistent, not brought into existence. "Was God"; not a subordinate, created being.

Was Pre-Existent.

Christ said He was pre-existent.

"Before Abraham was I am" (John 8:58), the ever-existent, ever-present One.

When Christ asked the Jews why they stoned Him, they said, "Because being a man, thou makest thyself God."

Well, if He was God on earth and emptied Himself to come here, He couldn't have been less than God before He came.

But Russelism teaches that our Lord Jesus Christ was not God.

It teaches that He never was God.

It teaches that He had a beginning.

It teaches that God created Him.

It teaches that He is not the uncaused, self-existent second person of the everlasting and triune Godhead.

And in thus denying to the Christ His pre-existence and consequently His Deity, Russellism not only robs Him of the glory due Him, but it brands Him as a shameless falsifier, guilty of blasphemous treason against the eternal God, or it makes Him the victim of hopeless self-deception, and thus sends Him down the ages under the smarting scourge of unholy imposture or mental degeneracy.

Against His pre-existence, against His Deity all the powers of hell and all the enemies of the Godhead on earth from Arius the Lybian to the modern Unitarian have combined to discredit the existing and divinely given system of Christian faith, and now Russellism becomes unwittingly one of the instruments of this unholy assault.

II. Next, Russellism declares (Vol. 1, page 179), "That Christ at His incarnation gave up His Spirit being, and that while He walked on earth He was nothing more than 'a perfect human being.'" Those are his exact words. He did not have two natures on earth. "Neither," says Russell (Vol. 1, page 179), "was Jesus a combination of two natures, human and spiritual."

Indeed, Russell makes no bones about it. He says (same page), "He was not exalted to the divine nature until the human nature was actually sacrificed—dead."

By what sort of Scripture wrestling must a man come to such a conclusion? Russell most assuredly is an expert exegetical contortionist of marvelous type!

It seems almost an insult to reason to spend time with such unwarrantable interpretation of the Word of God.

Both God and Man.

The Jews stoned Him because He claimed to be divine. (John 10:33). He said, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." (John 14:9). Isaiah prophesied, "Unto us a child is born and His name shall be called the Mighty God." (Isa. 9:6). Paul said, "God was manifest in the flesh." (I. Tim. 3:16). John said, "And the Word, the Son of God, was made flesh and dwelt among us." (John 1:14). He did not cease to be the Son of God in doing so. He changed His form, for He was in the form of God, but His person He did not change, and He was both God and man, two natures in one person, as the Bible teaches and the church has always believed.

But Russellism teaches that while on earth the Son of God had only one nature and that was human.

It teaches that in order to become the Saviour of men He gave up His divine nature.

It teaches that He was only a man like Adam before he fell.

And so it degrades His glorious person and virtually says there was no Incarnation at all.

III. Following this, Russellism must, of course, declare that the work of Christ on the cross was only the work of a mere man.

Does Russellism draw back? Does it tremble at the thought of making such a statement?

No.

Listen, while Russell speaks.

Mark well his words!!

You will find them in Vol. II., page 129.

"It was His flesh, His life as a man, His inhumanity, that was sacrificed for our redemption."

There was no divinity on the cross!! No diety there!!

Is it necessary to say that this denies the atonement, and robs it of its power?

Do not the Scriptures testify that no man by his wealth, his self-sacrifice or his character can redeem himself, much less redeem anyone else? Could you trust the redemption of your soul to any mere man, however wise, however great or holy?

But Russellism does not stop here. It declares that we ourselves as the children of God through our sacrifice are a part of the ransom price for sin.

Degrades the Cross.

Oh, cross of Christ bearing away my sin!! That cross which broke the matchless heart of the Son of God!! That cross where centers all the eternal wisdom and unfathomable love, all the inexorable justice and infinite mercy of the everlasting God in one supreme and successful effort to save a lost world!! And now comes Russellism with its audacious effrontery and unreasoning bigotry and thoughtlessly degrades it as the death instrument of one who was only a man!!

IV. Russellism next declares that Jesus, after or upon His resurrection, became once more a spirit being. In Vol. I, page 231, it is said, "Jesus at and after His resurrection was a spirit—a spirit being, and no longer a human being in any sense."

But this is a denial of the resurrection of His body.

Russellism declares that the body of Jesus crucified and buried in Joseph's tomb was never resurrected.

What then became of Christ's body?"

He says "it was supernaturally removed from the tomb because if it had remained there it would have been an obstacle to the faith of the disciples." (Same page.)

Supernaturally slipped away!!

The chief priests invented the lie that His disciples stole it to deceive the people. Now comes Russell with the bigger lie that God did it to deceive the disciples.

What did God do with it?

He either dissolved it into gases!! or has it in His possesion as a corpse!!

Russell says he don't know. His exact words are "Whether it was dissolved into gases or whether it is still preserved somewhere as the grand memorial of God's love, no one knows."

Dissolved into gases!!! Shocking blasphemy.

Preserved as a corpse!! Base, trifling, daring and sacrilegious speculation!

And some day God is to produce this corpse and expose it to the world—put it on exhibition! "It will not surprise us," says Russell, "if this be true."

Absurd Nonsense.

And all this silly and absurd nonsense in face of the fact that Jesus said He would raise His body from the dead. (John 2:19, 22), and "showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs." (Acts 1:3), and that the disciples saw Him alive in His own body, talked with Him, ate with Him and walked with Him by the way.

Russellism explains the appearance of Jesus by saying that as an unperceived and unperceivable spirit, "He instantly created and assumed such body of flesh and such clothing as He saw fit for the purpose intended," and that what the disciples saw was not His own spiritual body (I Cor. 15:44), but a materialization which again dissolved into thin air. "Necessity is the mother of invention!" If that proverb had not seen the light before Russell's advent, it uncertainly could not have remained unborn after he got through.

If Jesus was only a spirit and "was no longer human in any sense or degree" (Vol. II, page 107), He had no right to say to His disciples, "Behold My hands and My feet, that it is I Myself; handle Me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have." (Luke 24:26-40), for whatever the nature of His resurrected spiritual body (I. Cor. 15:44), Jesus here denied that He was nothing but a spirit.

Russellism denies the resurrection of the body of Christ, the great fundamental upon which the validity of Christianity as a supernatural system rests, and if Christ be not so risen from the dead, then are our hopes in vain, and of all men we are most miserable. (I. Cor. 15:19.)

V. Following this, Russellism must, of course, declare that the Christ in glory, the ascended and exalted Savjour, is only a spirit and that He has no humanity whatsoever, as He now sits at the right hand of God.

This is only another item of the calamitous teaching of this strange and absurd perversion of Scripture truth.

Russell says, on page 107, of volume 2, "We must bear in mind that our Lord is no longer a human being." Again (same page) he says, "He is no longer human in any sense or degree."

But this is a plain denial of Christ's high-priestly intercession.

His Ascension.

To say nothing of the fact that the disciples saw Him ascend in His humanity (Acts 1:9), and that the Scriptures declare that the Martyred Stephen saw the Son of Man standing by the side of the glory of God, and that John, by the Spirit, reveals to us that when He comes again, "one shall say to Him, 'What are these wounds in Thy Hands,'" all of which proves His now existing humanity—to say nothing of all this, Paul expressly declares that "there is one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus." (I Tim. 2:53.)

And, furthermore, all this arbitrary subversion of the Lord's high-priestly function is made in face of the fact that it was upon His human nature that it was based.

But Russellism will not have it so.

It teaches that Christ lost His spirit being in His Incarnation and became only a man.

It teaches that Christ lost His human nature at His Resurrection and became again only a spirit being.

It teaches that Christ became divine only after or upon His Resurrection.

It teaches that Christ in glory, now, is only a spirit being.

VI. After all this inane trifling with the holy word of God in order to pave the way for its absurd notion that Christ returned to this earth a spirit being in 1874, Russellism next proceeds to pronounce its infallible (?) dictum on the coming disposition of the souls of men.

If anything could be more reckless, more presumptuous, more soul-sickening than the far-fetched and unpardonable teaching already reviewed, we are now about to be treated to it by this ingenious and daring manipulator of Biblical testimony.

To prepare the way for some other startling propositions about to be set forth, Russell begins by postulating repeatedly and emphatically the doctrine that death always means the extinction, the cessation of being,—annihilation.

But this is anti-Christian and absolutely without one scintilla of evidence in the word of God. It opens the way for all sorts of senseless speculation and is the rock upon which Russellism builds the dreamy superstructure of its whole unhallowed theory.

Over and over in sermon, book and magazine, Russell emphasizes and reiterates that death in the Scriptures always means extinction of being; annihilation.

Let us notice this claim a moment before passing on.

Scripture Refutes It.

I. Scores of Scripture passages refute it.

(a) Jesus said, "Let the dead bury their dead" (Luke 9:60). Here the first-mentioned "dead" are alive; else how could they perform the act of burial for the second-mentioned "dead" who had ceased to live. The first "dead" is used figuratively.

(b) Jesus said, he that believeth in His Father, "hath passed out of death into life" (John 5:24). How could he have believed if he were not in existence? See also I John 3:14.

(c) Paul speaks of people who were still in existence as "being dead in trespass and sins" (Eph. 2:1).

(d) Paul speaks of people who are dead and alive at the same time; "dead while she liveth." (I. Tim. 5:6).

(e) Jesus tells us in Luke 16 of a rich man who died and was buried and afterwards "lifted up his eyes in hell." Evidently then, he had not ceased to exist. Lazarus, the poor man, He likewise shows in Paradise, figuratively called "Abroham's Bosom," and Abraham himself, who died 2,000 years before and was "gathered to his people" (Genesis 25:8-9), is likewise made known to us in this same place. The continued existence of these three men and of others mentioned elsewhere is fatal to this theory of Russellism.

(f) Jesus expressly stated that the soul continued to exist after the body was dead. He says, "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul" (Matt. 10:28). The body may be destroyed, but the soul, the real person, lives on.

(g) Moreover, if death means extinction of being, what then became of Jesus Christ when He died on Calvary? The inevitable logic of this holy premise leads you to the cold-blooded, ghastly, soul-sickening conclusion that He became extinct, that He ceased to be, that He was annihilated.

Jesus Christ, your Saviour, the Son of God, annihilated on the cross! ! !

Indeed, if the sentence of death imposed upon Adam and upon all men (Romans 5-12) meant annihilation, if Christ was to be the perfect substitute, He must needs have been annihilated. So approached from either angle, the deliberate avowal of Russellism must be and is the annihilation of the Son of God.

Thus, admit for one moment that Russellism is right about the meaning of the word death and you see immediately something of the destructive, blasphemous but inevitable conclusion to which it must lead.

Regarding Believers.

First—In regard to believers.

Russellism teaches that the holy apostles and all true Christians who died prior to 1878 were raised in the spring of that year—that is, in the spring of 1878. See Vol. III, pages 234-235 and pages 302-306.

It teaches that those so raised and the true Christians to be raised or changed in 1914 compose the Bride of Christ, the "Overcomers," the little flock."

It teaches that these have the "divine nature," are like Christ and are immortal and shall reign with Christ during the Millenium.

But notice, it teaches that such Christians as were raised in 1878 and those raised in 1914, were raised as spirit beings without a body.

1. But this is a flat denial of the resurrection of the body.

And all this in the face of the unbroken testimony of the Scriptures to the contrary.

One reference is enough. "But some will say, 'How are the dead raised up and with what body do they come?' It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body" (I. Cor. 15:35 and 44).

But Russellism will not have it so. It is a spirit without a body capable of manufacturing a body and a particular suit of clothes, according to the fashion of the day, for whatever the occasion may be on which the said spirit wishes to present itself.

2. But now comes a difficult problem. But none too difficult for the inventive genius who is the author of Millenial Dawnism.

The problem is this: If death means always extinction of being, annihilation, etc., where do these spirit beings come from whom Russellism declares were raised in 1878, and whence are to come the spirit beings of those who died since 1878?

And here is the answer:

These beings are created over again!! Of course. How else could they come into existence?

But notice where it leads you. If at death being becomes extinct, if the being who dies ceases to be, how can this same being be created over again? That which does not exist cannot be recreated. Ex nihil nihil fit. These spirit beings, therefore, which are created are not the same beings which once existed and then went out of existence and ceased to be. They must be new beings and other personalities.

There is, therefore, logically, no resurrection at all. Neither was there a resurrection of Christ, nor will there ever be of anyone else. And the Christ who came in 1874, or is to come, is not the same Christ, not the Christ born of the Virgin, not the Christ of Gethsemane, nor the Christ of Calvary, but another Christ.

Second—In regard to unbelievers.

Russellism teaches that the wicked dead have ceased to be, but at the beginning of the Millenium, in 1914, they will all be recreated.

It teaches that they will be recreated in a pure and spotless condition as Adam was before he fell, and then be given another chance to accept Christ and be saved.

Given 100 Years.

It teaches that they will have this chance for 100 years, and if they do not accept it they will be annihilated. This is the Second Death (Vol. I, page 144).

It teaches that if they accept Christ during this 100 years they will be put on probation for 1,000 years.

It teaches that if they fail during this 1,000 years they will be annihilated (Second Death), but if they prove faithful they will be given everlasting life (Vol. I, pages 107 and 144).

It teaches that there is a difference, however, between this everlasting life and immortality. Only Christ and the true Christians before the Millenium ("the little flock," the "overcomers,") will have immortality.

It teaches that immortality is inherent life, self-existent life, life sustained without food. This is something better than everlasting life, which those saved during the Millenium age receive, and which, though lasting forever, is to be sustained by eating food and this food is to be the fruit of the tree of Life of which Adam ate before he sinned.

This is all very attractive to the wicked and unbelieving, the man who wants to live in sin.

But where in the word of God is there any warrant for all this fantastic and man-concocted arrangement?

Where does the Bible say the wicked are to have another chance?

The Bible says, "Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation" (II Cor. 6:2).

The Bible says, "The hour is coming when they that have done evil shall come forth unto"—unto what? No. "Unto damnation" (John 5:28, 29).

The Bible says, "The dead in Christ shall rise first," and that 'the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished" (Rev. 20:5).

But Russellism says the wicked dead are raised at the beginning of the thousand years.

What does it do with the phrase then, "the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished," for this stoutly and flatly opposes any such teaching.

Driven at last into a corner and brought to bay, this ghoulish heresy, having defiled nearly all the hallowed ground of divine revelation, turns about in its desperation, shows its sacreligious teeth, and says the passage before it is spurious.

But every critical Greek text but one from Griesbach to the present day contains the words, "Nor," as the learned Dr. Moorehead says, "does one of these scholars cherish the slightest suspicion of its integrity."

Second Chance to be Saved.

Russell's whole theory is concocted and all of its unwarranted teaching is carried forward solely for one purpose. That purpose is that he might give to those dying in sin a second chance in the age to come.

He says, "Men, not God, have limited to this age the chance or opportunity of attaining life" (Vol. I, page 131).

No matter what the individual has been in this life; he may have been the vilest of profligates and she the most shameless of unclean women, murderers, adulterers, liars, thugs, reprobates or what not—they are all to be raised at the Millenium morning pure and spotless and "enjoy a full opportunity to gain everlasting life" (Vol. VIII, page 131).

We are supposed to read out of the word of God what it really contains, but if a man is to be allowed the license to read into it whatever he pleases in order to make it sponsor for some fine-spun theory of his own making, then havoc will be played with the divine revelation from one end of it to the other, and a man with the ingenuity and seeming lack of conscience of an E. T. Russell will find an easy and delightful life before him.

While no one knows the exact time of the Lord's coming, it does seem and is generally accepted that we are living in the "latter times," and we cannot be surprised at the appearance of these cunningly devised doctrinal speculations, for of these the "Spirit expressly speaks." But alas for the numbers who have been misled.

May God in His infinite mercy, if you have been caught in the meshes of Russellism, release you from its entanglement and lead you by His Holy Spirit to the pure worship of Jesus Christ, His Son, the complete manifestation of the infinite Godhead from all eternity, in whom is all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, God of God and very God of very God, who is and who was and who is to come.

It is an awful thing to mislead the soul. A series of sermons were published in Scotland. They twisted and distorted the Scriptures and taught perverse doctrine and were calculated to unsettle one's faith. They were republished in the United States and a young lady of pure faith and much influence in the city of New York read them, became confused and lost her faith. She became ill and died of a lingering disease. The pastor called repeatedly upon her and tried to reestablish her faith, but he couldn't do it, and she died. In less than one year after her death, the author of these sermons was tried for heresy, and he asked a little time to reconsider, and then said that he was convinced that he was wrong and that he desired to retract nearly all of what he had said. But the woman who had become entangled in the labyrinth of his speculations had died in darkness.

WHY NOT?

"THAT IRRESISTIBLE FLAVOR."

The clergyman when struck was knocked between the two tracks instead of being hurled under the wheels of either train. He was taken to the Memorial Hospital.

MRS. I. S. ROGERS.

On Trial For Killing Her Two-year-old Son.

The defense of Mrs. Ida Sniffen Rogers, charged with murder of her infant son, will be insanity. It is alleged that the man to whom she thought she was married already had another wife with whom he was living.

MRS. ROGERS INSANE, IS MURDER DEFENSE

Mother Who Poisoned Babes on Trial

New York, April 25.—Mrs. Ida Sniffen Walters Rogers is on trial in the supreme court of Bronx county on a charge of murder in the first degree in having caused the death of her two-year-old son John and her eight-months-old daughter Lorida by giving them bichloride of mercury in December, 1914, at which time she also attempted to take her own life.

The trial now is on the count relating to her son John. The jury are all married and with one exception have children. Justice Arthur S. Tompkins is hearing the case. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, counsel for Mrs. Rogers, indicated that insanity would be her defense.

After the people had rested Mr. Chanler outlined to the jury what the defense would be. Describing the love of the defendant for her children as "ideal," he asserted that she was unquestionably insane when she administered the poison.

Mrs. Delia Burns, owner of the house at 224 West One Hundred and Sixty-seventh street, where the tragedy occurred, was the first witness called by the defense. She said that on the morning of the occurrence Mrs. Rogers had come into her apartment and calmly informed her that John had taken poison by mistake. The witness said that she ran upstairs immediately and found the children in agony, but that Mrs. Rogers remained apathetic all the while.

25 UNION MEN ON TRIAL.

First Batch of Fifty-four Defendants Plead Not Guilty.

Chicago, April 25.—Twenty-five labor leaders were placed on trial in Judge Scanlan's court on charges of boycott, conspiracy, malicious mischief and extortion as a sequel to the painters' strike of last year. They pleaded not guilty.

Twenty-six others who were not arraigned escaped prosecution on the conspiracy charge by the quashing of indictments against them. They are liable for trial later on the other counts.

Each of the fifty-four defendants was indicted forty-six times, a total of 6,946 counts being returned, with bail for each at $195,000, a total of $10.530,000.

INCOME TAX $100,000,000.

Business Boom Brings Jump In Individual Earnings.

Washington, April 25.—Treasury department officials are of the opinion that the income tax now being collected will exceed $100,000,000. Experts of the internal revenue bureau predicted that the total collections would reach $106,000,000. This sum involves an increase of approximately $25,000,000 over last year's collections.

The increase is attributed by treasury officials to the business expansion which has taken place in the past year. The increases are said to have figured in returns on personal incomes as well as the earnings of corporations. The returns, it is said, have disclosed many surprisingly large incomes among men in the ordinary walks of life.

Expressing Money in Terms of Shoes

When a man leaves this store with a purchase, he has in his possession the same value as he had when he entered our doors. The only difference is that the value is now expressed by shoes instead of dollar bills.

That is the standard of value rendered here

There is no such thing as obtaining greater value per dollar than this store offers.

No concern in all the world can make the same grades of shoes at less cost than they are made by the manufacturers who supply us.

No store can buy at less cost than we do.

No store can give greater value per dollar than we do.

A New Departure In Service

SERVICE

In line with our constant effort to be of service to our patrons, we have adopted a plan whereby we propose to pay our customers' household bills each month, charging the total to their account and doing away with all the bothersome detail that the householder experiences in paying from ten to thirty or more bills, monthly.

Under this plan the depositor sends us one check for the total of all the bills he or she wishes to pay, and we attend to the payment of the individual bills. In this connection we also propose to purchase commutation tickets for depositors, charging the amount to the depositor's account and delivering the ticket to the depositor a day or two before the first of the month, doing away with the inconvenience that he now experiences each time it is necessary to renew his ticket.

If you have no account with us at present, we will be glad to have you open a household account, that will enable you to take advantage of this service.

If any additional information is desired, it may be obtained at the bank, or our representative will call if you prefer. We feel sure that an investigation of this new system will speedily convince you of its many advantages.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. A easier way is to get a 50 cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

NO NEWS FROM IRELAND REVOLT

Dublin and Other Points Are Now Ruled by Martial Law.

ENGLAND IS ALARMED

Asquith Says Boys of 18 Must Be Called to Colors—Two Battles Fought in Air—Artillery Fire Goes on Before Verdun.

London, April 26.—Martial law has been declared in Dublin and throughout the greater part of Southern Ireland. Large bodies of troops, supported by machine guns, have been sent to danger spots.

The British public is waiting with feverish excitement for further news from Ireland. Only the most meagre reports from Dublin have been received here. Despatches from points in Ireland outside of Dublin indicate that the revolt has not spread beyond that city.

Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, announced that the situation was well in hand, and that "the rebels are not in possession of the whole city." Several arrests already have been made. What the losses of the rebels have been in the Dublin street fighting is not known, but it is believed they were heavier than those of the loyalists, for they were opposing trained troops brought from the Curragh camp and by the organized police and volunteers in the city.

A profound impression has been made by the sudden breaking forth of the long expected attempt of the Sinn Fein to revolt, particularly as the rebellion came at a time when it was believed that conditions were becoming more quiet and better than ever in Ireland. The lack of definite news here has heightened the feeling of apprehension.

England Needs More Men.

London, April 26.—A statement issued early today by the Press Bureau as to the proceedings of the first secret session says that unless 50,000 married men have enlisted by May 27 conscription will be extended. At the same time Premier Asquith announced that boys of 18 would be drafted if it is necessary to broaden the conscription measure.

Steamer Ross Sunk.

The British steamer Ross, 2,666 tons, has been sunk. Eleven of the crew were saved.

Big Guns Battle Fiercely.

Paris, May 26.—Violent bombardments took place all along the Verdun front last night, but there were no infantry actions, the French War Office reported today. The official communique stated that artillery duels of the most intense character were in progress at hill No. 304 and on the Meuse River.

French Machines Active.

French aeroplanes were victorious in conflicts fought Tuesday with German air and sea forces on the coast of Belgium. The War Office announced today that one of the aeroplanes had dropped bombs on a Zeppelin at Zeebrugge, while another had attacked a German torpedo destroyer at Ostend.

Bring Down German Machine.

Saloniki, May 26.—French aeroplanes today fought an aerial combat with a German air squadron near Monastir in which a Teuton machine of the Albatross type was brought to earth. Two other German aeroplanes were forced to descend. Another French aeroplane detachment bombarded the German positions in the vicinity of Doiran and Gievgeli.

FREEHOLDERS TO ATTEND LATE COLEAGUE'S FUNERAL

The entire membership of the Union County Board of Freeholders headed by Director Cady, of Summit, will be in attendance in a body at the funeral of Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, which will be held at his late home at 425 East Seventh street at 3:30 this afternoon. The Freeholders, of whom there are twenty in all, will meet at the North Avenue station at 3 o'clock.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will have full charge of the Masonic service which is to be conducted. Eminent Commander Robert F. R. Huntsman will have charge of the fraternal ritual and beside delegations from all the Masonic organizations to which Mr. Doane belonged there will be others from Plainfield Lodge of Elks and Columbia Lodge of Workmen. The pall bearers are to be selected from members of Trinity Commandery, and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson will officiate for the customary religious ceremony. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MOTORCYCLE COLLIDES WITH AN AUTOMOBILE

An automobile driven by Harry W. Phillips, of South Plainfield last night, collided with a motorcycle on which William Powell was riding. The accident occurred on Park avenue, near Wintergreen, about 10 p. m. Both machines were going south on Park and ran together when one attempted to make a turn. The motorcycle was damaged but no one was hurt.

WILL ORGANIZE S. A. R. CHAPTER

D. A. R. Take Steps to Form Local Branch of Society in This City.

PLANS WELL RECEIVED

It is Also Proposed to Establish a Chapter of Washington Guards for Boys—Annual Meeting of Continental Chapter on May 23.

The members of Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, met at the home of Mrs. A. J. Hamley, on Washington avenue, Dunellen, yesterday afternoon, the event of special interest being the report of the Continental Congress which has just adjourned in Washington. Mrs. Frederick A. Waldron represented the local chapter, and she made the report yesterday. Miss Addie Dietrich was also in Washington, and she added some items of interest concerning the gathering.

Mrs. C. R. Banks, the regent, gave a report of the recent campaign for the relief work in Belgium, and she said that the chapter is indebted to the people of Plainfield for almost $200. She stated that Mayor Leighton Calkins and Police Chief P. S. Kiely courteously permitted the sale of "tags" on the street, and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson allowed a collection to be taken at Grace church the Sunday following the street canvass.

It was reported that steps have been taken toward holding a meeting and entertainment here in the interest of a local chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution, the purpose being to establish such a chapter in Plainfield. Plans are also under way for organizing a chapter of the Washington Guards, the membership of which will be made up of boys who, through their parents, are eligible to membership in the senior organization.

The annual meeting of Continental Chapter will be held at the home of Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman on East Ninth street, on May 23, when officers for the coming year will be elected and plans discussed. Miss Huse extended an invitation to all present to attend a meeting at Cedarcroft, on Park avenue, Friday morning at 11 o'clock, to take steps in the interest of a local branch of the National Special Aid Society. Mrs. Nathan Meyer and Mr. Duke, of New York, will be the speakers. At the conclusion of the business meeting, Mrs. Hamley served refreshments during a social hour. Master Hamley delighted the gathering with piano selections and Mrs. Hamley's daughter assisted her in serving.

CALLS CAPSTICK KAISER'S FAITHFUL

New York Times Demands Election of "American" in His Stead.

Calling John H. Capstick, representative in Congress in this county, the "Kaiser's faithful," the New York Times editorially demands the election of an American to represent the Fifth New Jersey district in Congress. The editorial follows:

"The Fifth New Jersey District is represented in the Sixty-fourth Congress by John H. Capstick, Republican. It should be represented in the Sixty-fourth Congress by an American.

"Mr. Capstick has just received from the loyal subjects of the Empire in Union county and way stations this testimonial to his sacrifice of mere American rights to the German vote:

" 'Honorable Sir—At the regular meeting of the German-American Aliance of Elizabeth and vicinity, twenty-four societies, consisting of 2,300 voting members, a resolution was passed to offer you a vote of thanks and sincere appreciation for your action in voting for the McLemore resolution, by which we are convinced you are intent upon retaining friendly relations between the United States and Germany.'

" 'Retaining friendly relations' is the Elizabethan translation of 'meekly consenting to the murder of American citizens.' The German-American Alliance pledges itself to support heartily the Kaiser's faithful Capstick in his campaign. 'We are all of opinion,' says an official of the New Jersey German-American Alliance, 'that the Administration wants to have war with Germany.'

"In 1914 Mr. Capstick got 16,951 votes, the Democratic candidate 15,718, the Progressive candidate, 2,218. The district was, and ordinarily is, Republican. There used to be a number of Americans in it. They must be proud of Capstick.

SUFFRAGE LEAGUE ELECTS OFFICERS

Mrs. Henry C. White Chosen President at Annual Meeting Held Yesterday.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS

Action Taken on Motion to Abolish Membership Dues in the Future—Mrs. E. F. Feickert Congratulates League on Its Good Work.

The Plainfield branch of the Equal Suffrage League of New Jersey met at the home of the president, Mrs. A. B. Jones, of Central avenue, yesteday afternoon and elected the following officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. Henry C. White; vice-presidents, Mrs. H. C. McMillen, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Mrs. C. E. Ryder, Mrs. Clara DeHart Krans, Mrs. Isaac Schwed and Mrs. S. S. Carvalho; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Walter Marder; recording secretary, Mrs. Howard Canoune; treasurer, Mrs. L. M. Booth; auditors, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite and Mrs. Morris Benton; chairman Ways and Means committee, Mrs. C. E. Lipscomb; chairman press, Mrs. H. C. McMillen. Upon her election, Mrs. White appointed Mrs. A. B. Jones, the retiring president, as chairman of the enrollment committee for Plainfield, and Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite, chairman for the enrollment committee in North Plainfield, the two appointments being necessary because of the fact that the two towns are in different counties.

The attendance at the meeting was especially good, and all evidenced much enthusiasm in the work which the league is to take up during the coming year. At present the membership includes 412 women of the city and borough. Action was taken yesterday on a motion to abolish membership dues in the league and in the future this will be done. Announcement was also made that last year the committee reached the male voters of the city, three-fourths of them giving their views on suffrage to the committee who called. The work of the league this year is scheduled to be more among the women of the city. At the conclusion of the meeting, Mrs. E. F. Feickert, the State president of the Equal Suffrage League, gave an address and congratulated the Plainfield branch on their excellent work; and urged them to enlarge their scope of work for the coming season.

At the conclusion of the meeting, tea was served, the following women pouring: Mrs. C. E. Ryder, Mrs. David L. Thompson and Mrs. C. DeHart Krans.

MRS. GAUB DIES AFTER OPERATION

Well Known Resident of the Borough Passes Away at Muhlenberg Hospital.

Mrs. Fredirika Gaub, widow of Jacob Gaub, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 4:15 this morning, following an operation for hernia performed two weeks ago. The patient's case had been a very serious one from the outset and the knife was resorted to as a last means of relief. It failed to produce the desired result, the deceased's condition growing gradually worse. Death had been expected for the past few days.

Mrs. Gaub was born in Germany sixty-five years ago, but came to this country with her parents when she was a young girl. After residing in New York City and later in Missouri, the family removed to Brooklyn, from which city Mrs. Gaub came to Plainfield forty years ago. Mr. Gaub died exactly fourteen years ago today. He was employed at the Schepflin clothing factory at the time it was one of Plainfield's leading industries. The family resided for many years at Sixth and Division streets, but more recently the home has been at 169 Duer street. Mrs. Gaub was a woman possessed of many likeable traits, and news of her death will be received with deep regret by her large circle of friends in the city and borough.

Mrs. Gaub is survived by six sons and one daughter. These are John, Anton, William and Edward, all of the borough; Mrs. Harry B. Dunham, of Andover, N. Y.; Jacob Gaub, of Cincinnati; and Albert Gaub, who is traveling in Canada. She also leaves one brother, Gabriel Murr, of Axtel, Mo., and a sister, Mrs. Dora Roth, of St. Louis, Mo. Mrs. Dunham arrived in Plainfield Monday night in response to a telegram, and Jacob Gaub is expected from Cincinnati today. The funeral will be held at the late home on Duer street, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will probably be in charge of Rev. G. W. Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, of which Mrs. Gaub was an attendant. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

BIG SEAT SALE FOR HIPPODROME TRIP

Supply at Daily Press Office Will Be Exhausted in 24 Hours.

Tickets for the big excursion which the Plainfield Daily Press will run next Monday night to the New York Hippodrome, continue to be in demand, and the first allotment of 300 made to this city will soon be exhausted. Charles A. Goetler, of the Hippodrome staff, who has been in charge of the sale in this city, was well pleased with the manner in which the demand has been made, and judging from similar events arranged by newspapers elsewhere he predicts that there will be several hundred on the special train when it pulls out of this city next Monday night. As has been told, the price for Plainfielders to have the advantage of traveling in the special train and a $1.50 seat in the best part of the big show house, is but $1.75, by far the lowest rate ever offered for an excursion of the kind from Plainfield. The rate from Dunellen is $1.80 because of the increased distance on the train.

Although spring is here, ice skating forms the principal attraction at the great Hippodrome show, which contains so many features that it would take pages to accurately describe them. Little Charlotte, the premiere Ice Fairy among the forty in the ice spectacle "Flirting at St. Moritz," now being presented by Charles Dillingham at the Hippodrome, may be the standard bearer of a new furore in American sport such as has not been witnessed for a couple of decades.

When New York first caught a glimpse of the marvellous gyrations and startling poses of the little Berlin girl, whose skating is the most talked about thing in theatricals just now, the only thing it could think of to compare this new sensation with was the dancing of Pavlowa, and of the Russians.

But even the dancing of the Russians does not stand comparison with the exquisite and unrivalled art of the ice ballet at the Hippodrome. Those who know both of these forms of athletics and of entertainment have been prompt to admit that there are feautres of the ice skating ballet which are incomparable with and probably superior to the best stage dancing brought here by the Russians in recent years. When the beauty of the new sport is fully seen it is believed that there will be a sudden and tremendous revival of interest in the sport of ice skating.

The ice skating of Charlotte contains all the remarkable features of the best Russian dancing. It even adds many remarkable features of its own. Some of the peculiarities of this wonderful skating are utterly impossible of duplication on any floor save that of ice for they are in violation of the very laws of gravitation itself and are dependent upon the friction employed by the runner of the skate to hold the skater in poise.

The dancing pose of the best of the modern interpretative dancers cannot long be sustained or it loses spontaneity and interest. But the same poises taken by Charlotte and sustained while she is travelling over eighty or a hundred feet of ice and during that time is turning in an immense graceful curve, reveals new beauties of pose which have never been dreamed of. The sculptor who has his model mounted on a revolving stand is the only one who can appreciate the changing play of charming pose of which the ice skating ballet furnished an unsurpassed example. But in the wonderful skating pose of Charlotte is found not merely a figure which turns on a dead center but one which is all the time traveling in front of an exquisite beautiful background of Swiss scenery.

The wonderful spins of the Russian dancers have excited the wonderment of theatrical audiences for several years. But the best of Russian dancers are not able to spin more than five or six times without a stop. Six revolutions of the body are regarded as being a considerable achievement by a Russian dancer. Few of the best dancers in this country can equal that number.

RECEPTION AT GOTHAM

Rev. Edwin Muller, Father of the Bridegroom, Officiates at Wedding Assisted by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie—Couple to Live at Garden City.

Marking the first of two weddings of daughters of Mrs. Howard McWilliams, of Hillside avenue, this city, and 525 Park avenue, New York, to take place this spring, Miss Eleanor Ryckman Brown was married last night in the Central Prebsyterian church, at Madison avenue and Fifty-seventh street, New York, to Edwin Muller, Jr., of Lexington, Ky. The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edwin Muller, of Lexington, the father of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Plainfield.

The bride walked with her stepfather, Howard McWilliams, who gave her in marriage. Her frock was white tulle embroidered in seed pearls, and the court train was corded silk. The tulle veil was held at the back of her blonde coiffure with bands of silver and orange blossoms, and her flowers were white lilacs and orange blossoms.

Miss Marjorie Walbridge Brown, whose marriage to Kenneth H. Condit will take place on June 1, was her sister's maid of honor. Her frock of wedgwood blue tulle was touched with silver and showed a silver lace underdress, and she carried pink roses and lavender sweet peas. The bridesmaids wore dresses of wedgwood blue and mauve tulle over flesh-tinted satin, with silver lace petticoats and silver lace on the corsage, and all of them carried wedgwood blue feather fans. These girls were the Misses Helen Harrington, of Plainfield; Dorothy Tuttle, of Brooklyn; Katherine Mayer, of Indianapolis; Frances Walbridge, of Portland, Ore., and Sarah Washburn, of Evanston, Ind.

Mr. Muller had his brother, Mortimer Glover Muller, for his best man, and the ushers were Charles Bates Hunter, of Cambridge, Mass.; James O. Murray, of Plainfield; Kenneth H. Condit, of Princeton; Robert Lynde, of Louisville, Ky., and Charles Bann, of St. Paul, Minn.

The wedding reception, which was attended by 500 guests, was held in the Gotham ballroom. The latter was decorated with bay trees, ferns and roses. After a long wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Muller will live in Garden City, L. I.

MRS. PANKHURST SAYS PREPARE

Famous English Militant Points Out Lesson for United States.

GUEST OF MRS. HYDE

No Longer Hated Foe of British Government, But Counsellor and Friend of David Lloyd George in War Order.

Mrs. Emmaline Pankhurst, the famous English militant suffragist leader, left this afternoon for Boston after spending the Easter season as the guest of Mrs. Francis deL. Hyde on Mountain avenue. Mrs. Pankhurst will go from Boston to the Pacific coast for a short stay and will return to England in July to resume her work of aiding the English government in enlisting women to do their share in the nation's hour of peril.

The most interesting declaration of this remarkable woman, called by eminent men the greatest of her sex, made while in Plainfield, was that the United States should prepare for war and prepare at once. She is a strong advocate of a greater army and navy for America as the best possible means of preserving the peace that the country now enjoys, and pointed to the suddenness with which the war clouds broke over the heads of a satisfied, commercialized England that had no thought of international strife.

Mrs. Pankhurst's declaration was not made in public, but in the course of a friendly discussion during an informal debate arranged by Mrs. Hyde one evening this week.

The famous militant advocate of equal suffrage is no longer a feared and hated foe of British government officials, but is now the recognized leader of the loyal and brave women who are taking the place of fathers, husbands and brothers that the commerce of the nation may be carried on while its sons defend, with their lives, the country. Recently David Lloyd George asked the aid of Mrs. Pankhurst in persuading women to work in munition factories, and, after studying conditions in France, she used her personality, intellect and influence so effectively that thousands of English women and girls are now turning out the munitions of war. Mrs. Pankhurst is also at the head of a volunteer army of 400,000 women, who have enlisted for the purpose of going into rural communities and carrying on farm work. Recently a British leader expressed the opinion that Lloyd George and Mrs. Pankhurst were the two most influential individuals in all of England and the two most generally respected by the people of the nation.

Accompanying Mrs. Pankhurst while here was Miss John Winkakm, daughter of Col. Winkakm, a famous soldier, who is serving as volunteer secretary to the suffrage leader on her tour through the United States. Miss Winkakm is a beautiful young Englishwoman whose personality won the hearts of all whom she met while in Plainfield.

MANY WALK THE SAWDUST AISLE

Crowd of 4,000 Braves Rain to Hear Biederwolf on New Life.

COLLECTION IS $137.55

Evangelist Thanks Plainfield Citizens for Their Loyal Support—Less Knocking Here Than Any Other City, He Says.

Preaching to an audience of 4,000 people that braved threatening and falling rain, the Rev. William E. Biederwolf last night begged for a new life for every professing Christian and every other person in Plainfield; for, he said, it is only by being born again that entrance to Heaven could be gained. More than 150 walked up the sawdust aisle in answer to his plea.

He said that he recently asked a Plainfielder if he was a Christian. "I am a Methodist," was the answer.

"There are Methodists in Hell," exclaimed the evangelist. "There are Presbyterians there, and Episcopalians, too." He said that some of those roasting on the hottest fires were baptised in the deepest water, and that a man could belong to all the churches here or in any other city and yet be a child of the Devil.

Just how this regeneration is brought about, Dr. Biederwolf admitted that he did not know.

"But that's not the only thing you cannot understand," he said. "You explain electricity to me or sit in darkness until you do! Tell me how bread becomes the basis of your physical life or refuse to eat until you do! Tell me how my brain can lay hold of a spiritual thought and weave it into a sermon! Tell me how God kisses a handful of soil by your cottage door and when He kisses it the air becomes redolent with blushing violets! Tell me how He grasps the infuriated storm by the forelock and shakes it into obedience! How can these things be?"

He said that everyone would know when the new birthday took place in their own lives, however.

In censuring Christians for their neglect of duty to God and to the church, Dr. Biederwolf said:

"There's a grain of truth or a beautiful sentiment in most novels, but it's a good deal like the jewel in a bucket of pitch—you get your hands dirty going after it. Some of you would get your fingers dirty if you touched your Bible—not from anything on the inside, but from the dust on the outside of it."

"Let me whisper a word of warning to some of you professing Christians. Don't walk into prayer meeting some Wednesday evening unannounced. If you did, Plainfield would have to get a lot of new pastors. Your pastor would drop dead when he saw you coming."

"Do you want to meet your loved ones on the flower-circled banks of Heaven's eternal river? Ye must be born again."

"Do you want to stand fearless in the hour when the unredeemed tremble before the judgment of the Great White Throne? Ye must be born again."

"Do you want the approving smile of God to rest upon you throughout all the endless years of Heaven's unclouded eternity? Ye must be born again."

The prayer at the evening service was offered by the Rev. Dr. McDuffy. George E. Hall asked for the collection, explaining the expenses of the campaign and telling of the need for money. Dr. Biederwolf announced that he would be alarmed over the financial situation in most any other town but Plainfield, but expressed the belief that this city would pay all its debts before the meetings were over.

Mr. McEwan sang a solo that was received with applause.

The evangelist publicly expressed his appreciation of the letter printed in both papers of yesterday, and signed by a large number of the most influential citizens. He said it would be of great value in the work next year. Dr. Biederwolf again said that there had been less criticism and less "kicking" here than in any city he had ever visited.

Delegations that attended last night's services were from the Y. M. C. A., the Jr. O. U. A. M. and the Domino Club and Republican Club, of North Plainfield.

BUILDING LOAN ASS'N INCREASES ITS DIRECTORATE

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Home Building and Loan Association held last evening in the upper room of the Borough Hall the number of directors was increased from nine to eleven by the election of Mahlon R. Dayton and Postmaster Willard N. Apgar for terms of two and one year respectively. The following were re-elected directors for terms of three years: C. F. Debele, Joseph Kuldoshes and Dr. T. H. Platt. Secretary Hamley wishes to apologize publicly to Dr. Platt for leaving his name as director off of the pamphlet report of the association. He explained the error by stating that he had instructed the printer to take the list of officers and directors from an old report which did not include the Doctor's name. Among other business was the election of Percival R. Abbott as auditor for a term of three years. The annual report showed that 7.64 per cent. was earned during the year. The directors will meet to organize this evening.

MARTINE SAYS HE IS NEUTRAL

Senior Senator From Plainfield Denies Charge That He "Favors the Germans."

CRITICISM IS UNFAIR

Jerseyman Declares That Great Britain Has Violated International Understandings and Believes She Should Be Brought to Terms.

Washington, April 26.—New Jersey has the undoubted satisfaction of possession the most neutral Senator on view in the Senate chamber of the United States. It has been remarked that no man can be intelligent and still be neutral, but Senator Martine does not subscribe to that doctrine. He wants the United States to close up on England and Germany at the one time and belt them both without favoritism or discrimination.

So delicately does the senior Senator balance his bulk on the slack wire of international affairs it makes one less stable, actually dizzy, to contemplate him. But, as far as has been observed, the Senator is in no danger of falling from his perch to either side. His equilibrium emulates the gyroscope.

Thus, when M. T. Richardson, of Ridgewood, who pursues the publishing business in New York, gently chided Mr. Martine for "favoring the Germans," the statesman from Plainfield waxed as indignant as his disposition would permit and denied the impeachment.

On reading that Senator Martine

On reading tha Senator Martine was "in favor of sending as sharp a note to Great Britain as to Germany." Mr. Richardson was moved to inquire "Why?"

"As one of your constitutents, may I ask on what grounds?" wrote the inquisitive gentleman from Ridgewood. "Has Great Britain, or her Allies, murdered any of our men, women or children on the high seas? Are we not selling the Allies great quantities of goods and getting paid for them? Why should president Wilson address any such note to England as he has been compelled to send to Germany?

"Englands takes ships laden with centraband," added Mr. Richardson, "but pays for them, while Germany torpedoes them and pays nothing.

"Yet, your sympathies seem to be with Germany and against the Allies," commented Mr. Richardson. "You may not comprehend it, but this country today is protected by the British fleet. If that fleet had been less strong, or had been destroyed by the German fleet, England would have been occupied by the German troops, and the United States would have been her next victim.

"I do not want to see a man entertaining your peculiar views again elected from New Jersey to the Senate of the United States."

Whereat Senator Martine took his pen in hand and replied like this:

"I have received your letter and have noted its contents carefully. I cannot help but state that I feel that you are manifestly unfair. I do not know to what statement you refer, but your experience as a publisher should teach you that about nine-tenths of the statements printed in the newspapers are somewhat inaccurate.

"If you will see the statement made by me in a New York paper of April 21, I think you will find my position fully explained"—this evidently being the one-tenth of the statements printed in the newspapers that Senator Martine seems to think more or less accurate.

"I state," he explains, "that I feel that we could press our demands on Great Britain with almost as much force and right as we have pressed them on Germany.

"In answer to your question as to grounds I stated in my interview that Great Britain has violated international understandings and laws that were supposed to govern nations on the high seas. I further state that I realize that in submarine attacks Great Britain has not been as active and violent as Germany has been, but that both countries should be brought to an understanding with the United States.

"England has done more than take ships containing contraband. She has interfered with our shipments of noncontraband to neutral ports, and, further than that, has interfered with our mails. War is the last thing I am looking for. America's mission is to stand for justice, humanity and peace, and certainly those have no relation to war."

This epistle should settle any question as to where Senator Martine's sympathies are. He is not for Germany or Eingland, but for America Do you get him?

EASILY DECIDED.

This Question Should be Answered Easily by Plainfield People.

Which is wiser—to have confidence in the opinions of your fellow-citizens, of people you know, or depend on statements made by utter strangers residing in far-away places? Read the following:

C. L. Treat, painter and paperhanger, 411 East Third street, Plainfield, says: "I suffered for a long time from kidney trouble, and for years couldn't get relief. My back ached constantly and I had pain across my kidneys. My kidneys were in bad shape and I was all run down, in fact, was almost a physical wreck. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Randolph's Drug Store, and my experience was so satisfactory that I cannot make my endorsement too strong. I simply wouldn't be without Doan's Kidney Pills on hand."

ROTHBERG CLOTHES HIT THE BULL'S EYE

You can't hit the bull's eye by shooting bull at it—you've got to deliver the goods, whether you sell clothes, birdseed, or pianos.

The big feature of Rothberg clothes is that the merit is in the clothes themselves and not confined to our advertising claims.

And that applies to all Rothberg clothes, at all prices, for whilst the fabrics may differ according to price, the style of a Rothberg garment is like a woman's love—not affected by price consideration.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL.

NO WORD YET AS TO REPLY OF GERMANY

Lansing Denies Gerard Has Sent Cable.

Washington, April 26.—Secretary of State Lansing is still without advices from Ambassador Gerard concerning the German reply to President Wilson's demand that Germany "immediately declare and effect an abandonment of its present methods of submarine warfare."

He denied widely circulated reports that Mr. Gerard had informed the United States that Germany was prepared to make concessions and added that nothing whatever had come from Mr Gerard so far excepting extracts from the German press tending to show how the German newspapers had received the American note.

There are indications that the delay of the German government in replying to the president's demand for "immediate" action is causing some uneasiness here, as the note has now been before the German officials, including the kaiser himself, for nearly a week. But the question as to whether Mr. Gerard will be instructed to reiterate the American demand was met by the answer, "Not yet."

Meanwhile, the optimistic feeling which prevailed in official circles here still holds. This is due primarily to the continued lull in submarine activities and a hope that some means will be found of avoiding a breach in diplomatic relations between the two governments.

The trend of German newspaper comment communicated by Ambassador Gerard is not altogether discouraging, and Ambassador Penfield at Vienna has cabled extracts from the Austrian and Hungarian press, which strongly indicate a desire of the public in Austria-Hungary to see matters between Berlin and Washington amicably adjusted.

FEAR ANTHRACITE STRIKE.

Miners and Operators Fail to Reach Agreement.

New York, April 26.—The negotiations between the anthracite miners and operators for working conditions which would prevent a strike have failed.

At a meeting of a subcommittee of both sides in the Union League club the operators' representatives refused the ten demands of the miners. This will be reported to the full committee in the Hotel McAlpin, and if the full committee ratifies the action of the subcommittee the negotiations will end. If this takes place, as is expected, a strike will wait only upon the word of the miners, who have been called to a convention on May 2 in Pottsville, Pa., to vote on going out.

WIFE LAUGHS AS WILSON WORKS

President Plants Tree In Honor of Lincoln.

VOTES FOR OWN DELEGATES

Executive Goes to Princeton to Cast Ballot In Primaries—Fielder Dedicates Second Elm to Wilson—"First Lady of the Land" Amused by Her Husband's Efforts.

Princeton, April 26.—President Wilson planted an elm tree on Nassau street, on the route of the Lincoln highway, in honor of Abraham Lincoln. The president, in a brief but graceful little speech, paid high tribute to the martyred Lincoln.

The president worked hard at his job, casting many shovelfuls of dirt into the hole around the roots of the tree, pausing at intervals with shovel suspended, of which the camera men took due advantage.

Mrs. Wilson, who came to the scene of the tree planting ceremony at Nassau, Stockton and Mercer streets in a motorcar, did not leave the machine because of the occasional showers. She stood up in the car and laughed merrily as the president stabbed viciously away at the thick Jersey mud he was supposed to pack in around the tree roots.

About 400 people watched the scene and gave the president a rousing cheer when he surrendered his shovel to an alert attendant.

Incidental to his tree planting efforts and his speech, the president had the pleasure of looking on while Governor Fielder of New Jersey planted another elm in his honor and of hearing many complimentary addresses, in which he was called a second Lincoln.

The tree, typical of Lincoln's character, planted in memory of the great emancipator, was donated by the Athena club of Bayonne, N. J., while the students of Princeton university presented the tree that was planted in honor of President Wilson.

Governor Fielder and Mayor Browne of Princeton traveled as far as Trenton with the president and Mrs. Wilson, luncheon being served en route.

14-YEAR-OLD BOY DRUNK.

Perth Amboy Saloon Keeper Arrested For Selling Him Liquor.

Perth Amboy, April 26.—George Musewsky, a saloon keeper in Cleveland avenue, was fined $44.80 on a charge of selling liquor to minors. Patrolman John Murray found Edward Musolf, aged fourteen years, drunk in the streets. Murray arrested Musewsky when Musolf told where he had obtained the drink. Musewsky admitted in court that he had given the boy wine, but denied giving him whisky.

Michael Misko, another saloon keeper, will get a hearing today on a similar charge made by Murray. According to the patrolman, Musolf and three other boys each had half a pint of whisky, and some of them claim to have bought theirs of Musewsky. One of the boys whom City Physician Martin S. Meinzer pronounced drunk is only twelve years old.

BUTTON MAKERS STRIKE.

Newark Workers Quit as Protest Against Discharge of Employee.

Newark, April 26.—The recently organized Composition Button Workers of Newark have declared a strike against the Continental Shoe Button company of 227 Broome street, about sixty-five workers walking out. The dissatisfaction was due to the discharge of one of the employees who had joined the union, which was formed last week by Henry F. Hilfers, organizer for the American Federation of Labor.

Since the workers have declared a strike it has been decided also to make demands for more wages and shorter hours of work. These were formulated at a meeting held at Spruce and Broome streets. They will be transmitted to the company.

"LOG" WAS MAN'S BODY.

Corpse Found In River Near Diamond Jim Brady's Farm.

Somerville, April 26.—Believing that he had found a log partly covered with river grass that would make fine firewood, Cornelius Studdiford, a farmer, living near South Branch, was shocked in attempting to roll over one of the concealed objects to find that he had in his grasp the body of a man.

Studdiford was clearing the meadows on the farm formerly owned by Diamond Jim Brady on the Raritan river, one mile east of South Branch, when he made the find. The body was that of a middle aged man with iron gray hair. He wore a dark blue suit, but nothing was found on the person to reveal his identity.

Baby Girl Dies of Burns.

Steady Work for Good Men

A limited number of men can secure positions as motormen or conductors on Public Service Railway by applying at Waiting Station, Watchung Avenue, Plainfield, any Friday between 9 o'clock and noon.

All-year jobs at good pay.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by. The man who has a diploma from the School of Experience is pretty well fixed.

"Ye Must Be Born Again"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

Text: "Except a man be born of water and the spirit he can not enter the Kingdom of God."John 3:5.

The Bible says: "God created man in His own image; in the image of God created He him." That's the simple story of how man was ushered into the world. Some people say they don't believe it. Instead of saying: "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth," they say: "I believe in the chaotic nebula, self-existent evolver of heaven and earth," and instead of saying that God created man in His own image, they improve on the word of God by telling us that our ancestors were common chimpanzees, and that God never made us at all. The whole infinitesimal speck of unexplainable something which grew and developed and changed until at last through certain differentiating processes it was finally rationalized and perfected into man, and if you want to trace your ancestry you must look back through all the countless years and see yourself in the chimpanzee and the monkey, and farther back and your great grandparents in amphibious trogolithic creatures about 18 inches long and 3 wide, says Darwin, and then in some wriggling worm in the slime of stagnant pools, and so on ad-finitum, ad-nauseaum, until you shake hands with your former self in the shape of this wonderful, insignificant, so-called primordial germ whose origin the Darwinites have never been able to discover, and which I have an idea must be a mystery to God himself. Because you know it is that way. Huxley and Darwin said so.

Many Have Been Critics.

Now it don't take a great deal of sense to criticize the Word of God, although I quite freely admit that a few of the world's greatest thinkers have done so. But they look mighty small in the eyes of God when they undertake to match their little worldly wisdom against what He has revealed to be the Truth.

Some fellows will dam up a little river, pile up some dirt on either side and make an artificial lake, and then swell up as though they had created the Pacific ocean. They will throw up a pile of brick and mortar, carve their names in stone and then blow as if they had made the Rocky mountains. First we had the candle, then we got the gas, Edison manufactured the electric light, but to hear some people talk it wouldn't be long till someone crawls up into the sky and blows out the sun.

What is man? Not much when you are thinkig about God.

God says man was made in the image of his Creator; he had an understanding that could know the things of God; he had a will that delighted to do the things of God, and a heart that loved the things that God loved. Then the temptation came and man fell; the temple of the Most High God he debauched with sin, and the spirit of God went out. He forsook the polluted spot.

Descent of Ruined Race.

And now follows the descent of a ruined race. The record says: "And Adam begot a son in his own image," not in the image of God, but in the image of Adam's, with the image of God marred and defaced. This is what the Bible means by being born in sin and shaped in iniquity.

And the word of God says than until the image of God is restored by the incoming once more of the spirit of God, that a man is spiritually dead, and he cannot appreciate the things of God. This is the meaning of the new birth—the restoration of the image of God by the incoming of the spirit of God through Jesus Christ.

There's a lot of difference between reformation and regeneration; some of the worst men on this side of hell are reformed men. I know a fellow who was once a drunken old bum, and he reformed and became the keeper of a brothel. He reformed again and became a gambler. He reformed again and became a gentleman of leisure. Once he rolled in the gutter, but now he sits in his diamond studded shirt and latest cut clothes on the piazza of a high-class hotel. Yes; reformation did it, but he's a child of the devil just the same, and that's all there is to it.

Now, notice, if you please, the text. It says: "Unless you are born again you cannot see the kingdom of God." It does not say, "May not"; it does not say, "Shall not"; it says "Cannot." By the very nature of the case the thing is impossible—you lack the essential conditions for seeing anything of the kind.

Every creature born into this world has a nature after its own kind. You can't train a bird to crawl, for the same reason you can't train a snake to fly. True to his nature, a caterpillar crawls, and when we see him fly we don't say: "What an accomplished caterpillar," but we say the creature has been changed—it's now a new creature—it's been born again; it's a butterfly. The same thing is true of the natural and spiritual man.

Appreciation Lacking.

You might as well expect a mummy to speak and bear children as to expect the merely natural man to appreciate the things of God so as to do them without being born again or being born from above as the better reading makes it—as well try to think with your foot or love with your hand.

Water will never rise above its own level. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." You can cultivate it and improve it and refine it. You can send it to church and make religious flesh out of it, but you can't regenerate it.

But you might as well try to lift yourself by pulling at your boot straps as to try to generate within yourself that quality of life that will lift you into the kingdom of God.

Some people try to make out that the thing a sinner needs is a change in surroundings, but if a man hasn't got the heart in him to do right he'll go wrong wherever you put him. If there's something wrong in the old clock that hangs on the wall, do you think you can make her go by taking her out in the barn and hanging her up there? No, you can't. The trouble is with the works, and you've got to go down into the nature of the thing and fix her up there, and that's the way it is with you. You're wrong in your works; that's what's the matter with you; you've got the devil in you and you'll do what the devil says no matter if you change your environment a dozen times a year. It's not a new town you need; it's a new nature, and when you get that you'll be a Christian and do the will of God in one place as well as another.

I saw an apple tree some time ago doing double service. It was bearing two kinds of fruit; on one side there was a lot of pears and on the other side a lot of little runty scrubs that would give a stomach ache to a hog.

One or the Other.

Peter says we are made partakers of the divine nature. That's what makes you a child of God and if you are not a child of God, then you are a child of the devil and that's all there is to it.

Some of the Jews thought that circumcision was going to save them, but they were given to understand that it was not outward circumcision but inward circumcision of the heart that was going to do the work. That which is born of the flesh is flesh. It may be decent flesh or indecent flesh, pious flesh or profane flesh, religious or irreligious—but it is flesh just the same and you can't change it to the spiritual by education or amelioration or civilization, or cultivation, or any other "ation." Ye must be born again.

Don't say it is an old-fashioned doctrine, because if you had a nature that could appreciate it, a soul that could see it, it is as the morning light that flashes through the sunshot gates of the eastern sky.

But you say: "How does it take place?" Yes, says the white-fingered esthetic college professor. Tell us how? We want the modus operandi. Yes, says Nicodemus: "How, Master, can these things be?" Ah, that's the mystery these little minds leave with God. But that's not the only thing you can't understand. You explain electricity to me or sit in darkness till you do!! Tell me how bread becomes the basis of my physical life, or refuse to eat until you do! Tell me how my spiritual brain can lay hold on spiritual thought and weave it into a sermon! Tell me how God kisses a handful of soil by your cottage door, and when he kisses it the air becomes redolent with blushing violets! Tell me how He grasps the infuriated storm by the forelock and shakes it into obedience!! How can these things be?

But some one says, How can I tell when I have been born again? "The wind bloweth where it listeth and thon hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh or wither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the spirit." But when I see the tree bend and the dust fly and the ships sail away, you don't need to tell me the wind is blowing. And so I can tell whether I have been born of the spirit of God or not by seeing whether or not the spirit of God is doing His work in me. You don't need a Bible to tell you and yet it tells you very plainly.

How do You Believe?

Listen! First, I John 5:10: "He that is born of God hath the witness in himself." If you are walking in newness of life and trying to keep yourself unspotted from the world, you'll know you are a child of God. You'll feel differently about God. You'll think of Him as your father, instead of some far-off supreme being. You'll find it easy to believe in God's word, and what it says about your salvation, and you'll have a conviction about the matter that will bring you peace.

Second, I John 5:1: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God."

You say, "I believe that"; but how do you believe it Do you give mere intellectual assent to it, or do you believe it in your heart? The devil believed the other way; he was so orthodox that he trembled. But have you confessed Jesus as your Christ? If you really believe a thing in your heart, don't you think you would confess it with your mouth. If you believe in Jesus as your Christ, you'd take Him wherever you go, introduce Him to your friends, and you'd be proud to hear His name.

Third. I John 3:14: "We know that we have passed from death into life because we love the brethren."

But if you're born of God you'll love each other. You Episcopalians will love the Methodists, and you Methodists will love the Episcopalians and the Baptists and all the rest of them. I've seen the denominations get to scrapping over a lot of things and I tell you it's all of the devil. You ought to love me; it may be hard, but I'm one of the brethren, and you ought to love me; and if you did, you wouldn't lie about me like some of you do, and spread gossip all over town, but you'd say: "He's all right; he's one of the brethren and he's doing the best he can."

It makes no difference what a man's social position is; really it don't make any difference what the color of his skin is, if he is a child of God, and you have the spirit of God in you you're going to love him as a brother, and you'll take a delight in doing it, too.

Fourth. I John 5:4: "Whosoever is born of God overcometh the world.'

Examine Yourself.

I tell you this ought to cause some of you church members to wake up and examine yourselves. Instead of overcoming the world, you've been overcome by the world.

Paul says: "They that are of Christ have crucified the flesh with its passions and lusts." A thing that is crucified is supposed to be dead, and if your old hog nature was dead, if you had really been born again, you would find that some of the things you dearly love now would begin to lose their charm to you.

You say: "I just dearly love to read novels." Well, that's the nature of the flesh. But if you were one of God's children you would love the things that God loves; you'd love your Bible. There's a grain of truth or a beautiful sentiment in most novels, but it's a good deal like the jewel in a bucket of pitch—you get your fingers dirty going after it. Some of you would get your fingers dirty if you touched your Bible—not from anything on the inside, but from the dust on the outside of it.

You say, "I just dearly love the theatre and the dance and the card party." Well, those are the things all wordlings love. There's many a poor girl who knows she ought to be a Christian, and who might shine for God, and be an inspiration to her young friends, but the poor silly little thing would rather dance with the arm of some peanut-headed, spider-legged dude thrown about her than to be a Christian and do what God wants her to do.

A Mighty Live Corpse.

And there are a lot of church members like her, too. Paul says: "I am crucified to the world."A crucified man is supposed to be dead, but some of you make a mightly lively corpse when you get around where the things of the world are being pulled off.

If you were born again and had the Spirit of God in you, you would love the things that God loves. Of course, a man who is ruled by his carnal nature would rather play golf Sunday morning than go to the house of God to worship. He would, and he would a thousand times rather go to a show and watch a lot of half-naked girls, or girls in tights, like you wouldn't want you daughter to appear in, come out and whirl on one toe while the other three points of the compass only know where the other one is.

"He that is born of God overcometh the world," but the world will always be you master until you give God the rightful place in your life. And that place is on the throne room of your soul. And until God's spirit rules instead of the world, you never can be saved. And God's spirit never will rule until you've been born again. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Fifth. I John 2:29: "Every one that doeth righteousness is born of God."

What is righteousness? Why, it is that which is right in the sight of God.

It's not enough to believe the Bible. Nobody believes the Bible more than the devil; you must practice what the Bible preaches. It's not enough to belong to the church. I ask some of you people if you are Christians and you say, "Why, I'm a Baptist." Well three are Baptists and Episcopalians in hell, and Methodists in hell, and Presbyterians in hell; yes, scores of them. It's not joining the church; it's doing the will of God. I ask you if you are a Christian and you say you've been confirmed. Yes, you've been confirmed; but have you been born again? You say you've been baptized, but do you think that's going to save you? * * * God's no fool.

In Acts, the eighth chapter, it tells about Simon being baptized, and he was baptized right, too, whatever the mode was, emersion or sprinkling, because Philip did it, but when Peter came down there, he said to him, "Thou hast neither lot nor part in this matter, for your heart is not right in the sight of God." And there he was, the old son of perdition, baptized and going straight to hell.

Proof is Lacking.

None of these things are any proofs that you've been born again, but when you try to find out the things that are pleasing to God, and then do them because they please Him, that's the evidence that you've been born of Him.

Sixth. Here is another proof: I John 3:9: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." Now that don't mean he never will commit a sin. Some terrific temptation may sweep down upon him and before he is aware he has fallen, and if he is a Christian he won't go on in that sin, but he will go, like Peter, and weep bitterly because he fell, and repent of his sin.

I've never made a mistake yet since I've been a child of God that I didn't fall on my knees and ask forgiveness and promise God with all my heart that I'd be a better man, but before I became a Christian I did as I pleased and I never stopped to consider whether it pleased God or not. And that's the way with you if you have not been born again.

There are a lot of people in the church today who make sin the practice of their lives. Sometimes it's secret sin and nobody knows it but themselves. Of course, God knows it. But if you make a practice of doing wrong, you are a child of the devil, as sure as you are born and you will be in hell. "He that is born of God doth not commit sin."

Now it's like this—you take a sheep and let him fall into the mud and he'll get out as quick as he can, and if he can't he'll cry and bleat till you lift him out and when he's out he'll never go near that spot again. But the hog—let him fall in and he'll lie down and grunt with satisfaction. You can drag him out and scrub him up, but he'll squeal while you are doing it, and run for the mud as soon as you turn him loose. It's a difference in the nature, don't you see? The hog likes the mud and the sheep don't. A Christian may make a mistake and go wrong, but he won't lie down in his sin and stay there. When you are born again the old hog nature is a thing of the past. "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin."

Verily, verily, I say unto you except a man be born again, he cannot enter the Kingdom of God.

Must be "Born Again."

I am talking to people here tonight, who in their serious better moments long for something, they hardly know what, for a peace and a rest and for something better than anything they have ever had. But you can never get it until you have been born again. I am talking to people here who really, in their better moments, want to know the real meaning of life and this, their earthly existence, but you can never know it until you have been born again. I am talking to people now who are not Christians, but who really never intend to miss heaven. But where in God's name is your hope?

Do you want a life that is rich in meaning with the evil past all cancelled and naught of the haunting dread of an uncertain future? Ye must be born again. Do you want to go down in the valley of the shadow of death and be able to say, "I will fear no evil?" Ye must be born again. Do you want to come up in the glory of that new and unending resurrection life that Jesus Christ brought with Him from the grave? Ye must be born again. Do you want to meet your loved ones on the flower circled banks of heaven's eternal river? Ye must be born again. Do you want to stand fearless in the hour when the unredeemed tremble before the judgment of the Great White Throne? Ye must be born again. Do you want the approving smile of God to rest upon you throughout all the endless years of heaven's unclouded eternity? Ye must be born again. You say, "How?" By the surrender of your will to God, and saying yes to Jesus Christ and receiving Him. To them He gave power to become the sons of God.

SHIRLEY & JOHNSTON

The Quality Home Furnishers

BABCOCK BLDG. :: W. FRONT STREET

Last night was a big night in the pine temple, as delegations of the Y. M. C. A., Jr. O. U. A. M., The Domino Club, D. of A. and the Republican Club of North Plainfield were present.

"Mac" and "Sunny Jim" Heaton put a fine touch to the musical program with a duet.

It was a great sight to see the fine crowd of men and boys who were representing the Y. M. C. A., march into the tabernacle led by the Dutch Arms Band. Directly after the Y. M. C. A. delegation marched the members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., with the two standard-bearers carrying the Stars and Stripes, each man wearing the regalia of the order.

As Mr. McEwan stood looking over the Juniors in their regalia he remarked that he would like to wear one. One of the members came forward and placed one around "Mac's" neck amid great applause. Mr. McEwan should feel greatly honored, as he is probably the first man of foreign birth to wear the regalia of the Jr. Order United American Mechanics.

Luncheon will be served at the First M. E. church for working girls tomorrow from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m.

The National Male Quartet sang "Onward and Upward" in their always pleasing way.

Tomorrow is Mothers' Day. No doubt everybody in Plainfield knows what this day is. Special services will be held in the tabernacle beginning at 2:30. Flowers cut and potted will be sent to the tabernacle for decorating and will be delivered to the "shut-ins" on Friday morning. For the benefit of some of the dear old mothers, conveyances will be sent for them and will bring them to the tabernacle.

The Masons and the railroad men will be present in delegations tonight. Tomorrow night the International Motor Co. and the Presbytery of Elizabeth will be present.

"Mac" was in fine trim last night and sang a fine solo.

George E. Hall told an interesting story about a certain city which, as he described, we recognized as this city and the borough. He assured those present that Plainfield always had and will have the reputation of doing things in the right way, and so put them in rememberance of the obligation which is to be met and which the finance committee is trying to clear away as soon as possible.

Dr. Biederwolf had a word of welcome to say to the delegations in which he stated, speaking of the Jr. O. U. A. M., that this organization has stood by the colors in demanding that the Bible should be read in the public schools.

The open letter published in both of the Plainfield papers yesterday caused Dr. Biederwolf to express his appreciation to the one hundred and eight signers.

The service came to a close last night in a beautiful and impressive way, when the scores came forward reconsecrating their lives, or deciding for the first time to live for Christ. Many of the men, in their regalia, came forward and knelt in the sawdust and prayed the penitents' prayer, and have been transformed into men with a new purpose in life. These men, and others before them—women, young men and women, boys and girls—will have great occasion to look back, when the tabernacle is gone, at the place where the tabernacle stood, and will say, "There is the place where I came to the great turning point in my life."

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Headache of any kind is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning Liver and bowel poisons, called toxins, sucked into the blood through the lymph ducts, excite the heart, which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head, producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides, which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drank before breakfast for awhile, will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache, but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you arn't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath, or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick, and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, APRIL 26, 1916

KNOW YOUR STATE.

With an idea of getting residents of the State to think a little about New Jersey and her many natural advantages, Governor Fielder has set aside Friday, May 12, as "New Jersey Day." In so doing the Governor has very concisely summed up some of the advantages which the State possesses as follows:

"An exceptional climate and a fertile soil, yielding every variety of farm, orchard and garden produce indigenous to the Temperate Zone; its ocean beaches, pine lands and mountainous sections afford health and recreation for hundreds of thousands of residents of this and other States, and its accessible and conveniently located home sites which annually provide homes for thousands of new citizens."

In addition to these natural attractions, the Governor mentions our manufactures, mines and industries, our fisheries, farms and dairies, our great transportation facilities, improved public highways which have served as a model for other States, while "our people enjoy educational, social and religious advantages of the highest order." It is worth while setting apart a day in the year to take account of stock and plan to "make known our superior advantages for homes, farms, business and manufacturing."

It is understood that the proposition to thus advertise New Jersey emanated from the new Board of Conservation and Development, of which Henry C. White, of North Plainfield, is a very active and valuable member. This Board has taken over the duties formerly entrusted to half a dozen separate commissions. It is a work that should have been started years ago, as the Trenton Times says. Now that it has been undertaken it should be continued and extended. The immigrants from European countries should be taught that they can find in New Jersey the same opportunities that are offered in the West, and that they can enjoy many advantages and conveniences while laying the foundations of future success.

Visitors to California, Colorado, Washington and other Western States are impressed with the great interest displayed by agents and residents in setting forth the attractions of their States and localities. New Jersey has opportunities to do similar work and at but a fraction of the cost. There are thousands of acres here that can be put under cultivation and made to produce crops that will find ready sale in the best markets of the world, which are close at hand. What the State needs is advertising, and that is what the Governor proposes to give it by the observance of New Jersey Day.

A SPLENDID IDEA.

Ralph Decker, superintendent of schools in Sussex county, has recently addressed a letter to the people of that county, suggesting a "go-to-school" week by the parents, according to the Education Bulletin issued by the State Board of Education. Mr. Decker says that we have been having all sorts of "go-to," "clean-up" and other kinds of weeks, and that it is time that the parents learned something first-hand about the manner in which their children are being educated. In his letter he makes the following suggestions:

1. You can make the acquaintance of the teacher and see what she is trying to do for the children and the obstacles under which she may work. It will give you a chance tn express your appreciation of her work and to offer any constructive, helpful criticism you may want to give. I am a firm believer that there is nothing to gain by destructive criticism, whether it be of schools or anything else.

I am also a firm believer that everyone who is doing his best in whatever he may be engaged is encouraged and helped by a few words of commendation, and this is especially true of the teacher, whose path is seldom strewn with roses.

2. You may see whether the school is properly equipped with textbooks, supplies, wall maps, globes, clocks, thermometers, etc., which should be in every well equipped school, as they are the working tools of the pupils and the teacher, and without them good work cannot be done.

3. You can note the needed repairs about the house, outbuildings and grounds, and see how well the Board of Education, who are your elected representatives, are performing their duties in looking after your property, and whether the pupils and the teachers are doing their share in its upkeep.

4. You can note the seating, heating, ventilation and sanitary condition of the rooms, all of which are vital to the health, comfort and progress of the children.

5. You can note the attendance, and if it is not regular and punctual, you may be very helpful in co-operating with the teacher to make it as it should be.

6. You can note the spirit of the teacher toward the pupil and vice versa. On this spirit of mutual helpfulness rests the success of the school.

The idea is a good one, and might be adopted all over the State. Here in Plainfield the Parent-Teacher Associations have to a certain extent interested the people in the work of the schools, and many parents are entirely familiar with all the work in the class rooms, but there are hundreds who never take any interest whatsoever. Mr. Decker's idea should be taken up as a State-wide plan.

When Collector Townsend published his list of delinquent personal taxpayers, there were about 540 names included. The Camden list has just been printed, and that is a city of four times the population of Plainfield, and there were but 692 names advertised. This leads to the belief that Camden people pay their taxes more promptly than do Plainfielders, or that the Plainfield assessors include in the ratables the holding of hundreds of people who should not be assessed for a cent. We are somewhat inclined to believe that the latter explanation is the real reason for such a big list in this city.

There's a land that is fairer than day.
And by faith I can see it afar;
It's a land where the drivers are sane,
And you don't dodge the fast touring car.

We shall meet on that beautiful shore.
In the sweet by-and-by,
We shall turn double handsprings no more.

Should Throw in an Auto With Gasoline.

An employe of the Standard Oil Company predicts that gasoline will go to 25 cents per gallon before the advance stops. This, he says, is what the schedule calls for. After the first of next September, according to plans, there will be a decrease and the price will drop back to normal, or to about 15 cents. If the advance does not stop soon the Standard Company will be obliged to throw in an automobile with every barrel of gasoline in order to market its product.—Portland Review.

Our Own Weather Bureau.

There will be some rain in April.

In May there may be some rain and considerable Bock beer, which is more to the point.

The weather in June will be just as disagreeable as possible as there will be several weddings during the month.

July and August will, according to all signs, be some warmer than January. There will be very little snow during these months.

September and October will be pleasanter than the same months last year because there will be no Presidential campaign in progress.

The weather for November and December will be about as usual and perhaps a little more so.

Farmers and undertakers and others who depend a great deal upon the weather for a livelihood can rely upon this prediction absolutely.

Voice from the South.

"The Southern farmer gets up at the alarm of a Connecticut clock, buttons his Chicago suspenders to Detroit overalls, washes his face with Cincinnati soap in a Pennsylvania pan, sits down to a Grand Rapids table, eats Chicago meat and Indiana hominy, fried in Kansas lard on a St. Louis stove; puts a New York bridle on a Kentucky mule fed on Iowa corn; plows a farm covered by an Ohio mortgage; when bed time comes he reads a chapter from a Bible printed in Boston and says a prayer written in Jerusalem; crawls under a blanket made in New Jersey, to keep awake by a Texas dog—the only home product on the place. Then he wonders why he can't make money in Texas."

Plainfield Theatre.

Tonight will be fun night at the Plainfield Theatre. Ten amateur performers will be on the special Wednesday night bill to provide the amusement that accompanies the efforts of some untried "artists" to please the audience. The regular vaudeville bill with feature pictures will be given as usual, and the amateur portion is thrown in for the one price. A capacity audience was on hand last Wednesday night, and the wise patrons need no further warning to be on hand early this evening.

A musical revue with ten people, entitled "The Whirl of Song and Dance," topped the new program opening yesterday afternoon. It is brim full of good song and dance numbers, with a sprinkling of comedy, while special scenery and beautiful costumes make an attractive background. A novel number on the program is the appearance of "Princess Ka Wah Wau," the Indian girl harpist, who performs on this difficult instrument with the skill equal to that of any Caucassian artist. Harry Gibbs and company, presenting the comedy playlet, "Via the Gas Route," registered a big hit, as did also a sketch of Southern hotel life, "It Happened in Shreveport," presented by a clever trio, two young men and a woman. Jane Grey and company started the bill off with a very acceptable piano and singing act. This bill will be retained in its entirety this afternoon and tonight, and tomorrow afternoon there will be a complete new offering of six acts and pictures.

The eleventh episode of the serial film, "The Iron Claw," will be tomorrow's screen feature, and on Friday the tenth episode of "The Strange Case of Mary Page" will be shown.

--Astor Theatre--

Blanche Sweet, the beautiful photodramatic star, will be seen at the Astor Theatre today, in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "The Ragamuffin," written by Wm. C. DeMille, the noted American dramatist, who also directed tthe making of the picture. Miss Sweet, since her first appearance on thte screen, has, by her wonderful dramatic instinct and charming personality, youth and beauty, placed herself as the leading star in the photodramatic firmament. Since she has been under the direction of the Jesse L. Lasky Company she has added greatly to her popularity and is now one of the greatest of the firm's favorites and it is said that in her clever interpretation as a girl of the slums in "The Ragamuffin" she is seen in a character totally unlike anything in which she has heretofore appeared. Wm. C. DeMille, who wrote this thrilling drama especially for Miss Sweet and who personally directed the production, is one of America's leading playwrights, having been the author of "The Woman," "The Warrens of Virginia," "Strongheart" and many other of the many successful spoken dramas. Ever since the forming of the Lasky company he has been in charge of its photodramatic department and the splendid scenarios for which the company is famous are due to his knowledge and technique. Members are all of the Lasky all-star cast, making this a wonderful production. With our additional photoplays, will make this a very strong bill. Tomorrow, the sequel to Anthony Hope's "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Rupert of Hentzau," a Bluebird master picture in five parts of thrills and pathos.

MOTHERS' DAY AT THE TABERNACLE

Beautiful Service is Planned By Dr. Biederwolf for Tomorrow Afternoon.

Tomorrow will be Mother's Day in Plainfield, and every mother who is old and feeble and can yet go about is to ride to the Biederwolf Tabernacle in an automobile. Those who are "shut-in" will get a small bouquet of flowers and a cheering message from Dr. Biederwolf.

At the Tabernacle tomorrow afternoon one of the most beautiful services of the entire campaign will be held. Dr. Biederwolf will speak on "Memories of Mother," and Mr. Mac Ewan and the National Male Quartet will sing old songs, the songs that mother used to sing. It is expected that many of the aged women will be seated on the platform in easy chairs and rockers, and at least fifteen minutes of the service will be given over to a request musical program by the quartet, with mothers naming the songs to be sung. Only old songs will be rendered during this time.

"Wear a white flower for mother's sake," is to be the slogan for the day, also "don't forget to write her a letter."

Those who take a flower may drop a coin if they care, but the blossoms will not be sold. Because of the high price of carnations, sweet peas may be used this year.

A number of automobiles have been offered for use tomorrow afternoon and anyone who knows of an aged or infirm mother that would like to attend the service is asked to send her name and address to some member of the committee or the party so that she will be called for. The service begins at 2:30.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I note with interest in today's "Times" that the Hon. John H. Capstick, representative in Congress from our district, has been strongly endorsed and commended in a resolution of the German-American Alliance of Elizabeth, and that a testimonial letter from the above-mentioned Alliance was sent to Mr. Capstick expressing their appreciation and thanks for his attitude and vote on the McLemore resolution, which you will recall was a vote of Congress to test the willingness of that body to support the President in his negotiations with the German Empire. Mr. Capstick at that time voted against the administration and in support of the contentions of the German Government, and generally speaking he represented adequately and admirably the interest of his German-American constituents.

Now it seems to me that your paper would do something of service to the Republican party of the Fifth District of New Jersey in bringing to their attention the fact that Mr. Capstick does so admirably represent the hyphenated part of his constituency, and by the same token so completely misrepresents the rest of us; as I am strongly of the opinion that if the Republican party of the Fifth District is desirous of sending a Congressman to the 65th Congress they will do well to consider the selection of a candidate who represents what is, I believe, the true sentiment of the District. Respectfully,

DE WITT D. BARLOW.

- Proctor's Theatre -

AT PROCTOR'S TONIGHT.

The management of Proctor's local photoplay theatre certainly selected a fitting entertainment for the celebration of Easter Week when they inauguarted a policy of presenting a Theda Bara picture each day, and judging from the large attendance of the last two days, they will be well rewarded for their efforts to please their patrons. Miss Bara is recognized as the most popular screen star in the world, and as such continues to attract hundreds of enthusiastic admirers to Proctor's. Today, Miss Bara appears in "The Galley Slave," in which she assumes an entirely different part accorded her in her other pictures. In addition, today, a powerful emotional feature is seen in "A Wife's Sacrifice,' featuring the noted tragedian, Robert Mantell, who is assisted by a wonderful Fox cast, including such stars as Genevieve Hamper, Claire Whitney, Walter Miller and Stuart Holmes. The ninth episode of "The Iron Claw" is another feature today that will attract hundreds to Proctor's. Tomorrow, Miss Bara is featured in "The Serpent," one of the latest of her dramatic successes. H. B. Warner, the talented Broadway favorite, appears in an engrossing Triangle story, entitled "The Raiders," and an abundance of comedy is furnished by "An Oily Scoundrel," a side-splitting Keystone comedy. Friday, Miss Bara appears at the head of a wonderful cast in "Destruction," Hazel Dawn is featured in "The Masqueraders," one of the most popular of Paramount pictures, and the latest episode of "The Social Pirates" is shown. Attention is called to the presentation of the big local photoplay, "It Happened in Plainfield," which will be shown all of next week in conjunction with the regular program of features. This picture is enacted entirely by local people, and consists of a cast of a thousand or more, and perhaps you may be one of the cast. This feature will create a tremendous sensation and it behooves all those who can do so to arrive early in order to secure choice seats.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — What Became Of a Charmed, Nice Frog.

"Beautiful princess," he began.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"HURRAH! Time for daddy's story!" cried Jack after supper. So he and Evelyn sat down beside daddy while he told: "A king once made his daughter, a princess, keep her word to a frog that got her gold ball when she lost it down a deep spring. Her word was to let the frog eat off her plate and sleep on her bed in return for his kindness in getting her ball. The princess hated to touch the frog, but she put him on her pillow, where he slept soundly all night. When morning came he jumped off the bed and hopped out of the palace. The princess thought, 'At last he is gone, and I shall never be troubled with him again!'

"But that night there came a tapping at her door and a small voice saying:

"'Open the door, my princess dear;
Open the door to thy true love here!
And mind the words that thou and I said
By the fountain cool, in the greenwood shade.'

"When the princess opened the door, in came the frog, and he slept on the pillow till morning broke. Three nights he did this. But on the third morning, when the princess awoke, she was amazed to see, instead of a frog, a handsome prince standing there gazing at her. He had the most beautiful eyes she had ever seen.

"'Beautiful princess,' he told her, 'a spiteful fairy once enchanted me into a frog. I was fated to live in a spring till some princess should take me out, let me eat off her plate and sleep on her bed three nights. You have broken this cruel charm. Now I want you to go to my father's kingdom and let me marry you and love you as long as you live.'

"The princess was delighted with her frog prince. While they talked a gay coach and eight horses drove up with the prince's faithful servant, Heinrich, sitting behind the coach. He had mourned the misfortunes of his master so long that his heart almost broke for joy now.

"So they all took leave of the princess' father and got into the coach. The beautiful plumes on the eight horses' heads nodded, and their golden harness glittered. The prince and his beloved reached his kingdom safely. Then they were married and lived together happily a great many years."

"It's all about keeping your word, isn't it, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"In this case both the prince and the princess would have missed a great deal if she had not kept her promise," daddy smiled.

Then the children kissed him good night and dashed off to bed.

WOMEN OF UNION COUNTY CO-OPERATE

Will Take Part in Shakespearian Festival in Elizabeth May 11, 12 and 13.

Much interest is being taken by Union county women in the coming Shapespearian Festival in pantomime and dance which is to be given at the Second Regiment Armory, at Elizabeth, on the evenings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 11, 12 and 13, and at a popular price Saturday matinee. It is being promoted by the Woman's Club of Elizabeth, which includes in its membership of 450 many women of Elizabeth, Rahway, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle and other Union county cities.

Over 600 young men and women from Elizabeth and other cities in Union county will participate in the dances.

The sale of seats, all of which will be reserved, will begin at Cartaret Arms, 16 South Broad street, Elizabeth, at 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., on Monday, May 1, and continue daily from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., until Thursday, May 10, when the box office will be moved to the Armory.

TO PROVIDE MODERN CAMPING EQUIPMENT

Field Officers of Boy Scout Movement Plan for the Summer Season.

At a special meeting of the field officers of the Boy Scout movement in Plainfield at the home of A. V. Searing, Jr., it was decided to provide for a modern camping equipment at the Boy Scout camp this summer. There will be a permanent scout camp master, a hired cook to take care of the proper preparation of food and a full working equipment will be provided.

Through the courtesy of Louis Hosmer, provision has been made for swimming and diving at the camp. It is planned by the scout officials to follow up the work of Dr. Biederwolf by inducing those boys who have declared themselves at the meeting to identify themselves with the scout movement so that they can have full opportunity for putting into actual practice some of the good resolves that they made. It is planned to increase the membership to 500 by Decoration Day.

Present at the meeting were Edward Harding, chairman of the finance committee; President Theodore G. Davis, of the Boy Scout Council; Louis Hosmer, Deputy Commissioners E. A. Sprowl and F. E. Bach, Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., and former Commissioner Allen E. Beals. President Davis appointed Edward Harding, Louis Hosmer, O. W. Smith, Lindsey Best and Commissioner Searing as members of the camp committee for the season 1916.

Scoutmasters were authorized to accept applications and reservations for troops. All troops in this city will be entitled to the privileges of the camp. New rules were adopted governing applications for promotion in rank and for merit badges.

SAUNDERS WOULD TRAIN OUR YOUTH

Local Man Prominent in U. S. Chamber of Commerce Deliberations.

After a debate lasting an hour and a half a great part of the time being spent in unraveling parliamentary tangles, the New York Chamber of Commerce yesterday, at a special meeting, adopted a resolution approving the preparedness movement.

The resolution was only a part of the report submitted by the executive committee of the chamber. The other part, referring to the advisability of calling the attention of the country to the reports of the War College and the General Board of the of the Navy, was referred back to the committee for futher consideration. William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, chairman of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, said that part of the report was ridiculous, nonsensical and meaningness.

"For this chamber to adopt a resolution calling the attention of the President of the United States and each member of Congress to reports that had been before them for weeks would be absurd and impertinent," he said. "Besides which, such a resolution would mean nothing. Let us say something definite."

Then Mr. Saunders offered a substitute resolution favoring the military training of the youth of the country. That amendment raised a storm of protest, based on the ground that the report had been adopted in the previous vote and that the only thing to be done was to reconsider the vote just cast.

As a solution of the difficulty, a motion to adjourn was adopted, after the second part of the committee's report had been referred back for further consideration.

That part of the report which was adopted set forth the views of the committee regarding the proper military policy of the United States. It cites the Swiss and Australian systems and strongly urges the proper organization of United States military and naval forces.

The report deplored the attitude of Congress "in ignoring the advice and recommendations of trained army army and navy experts, who for years have devoted all their time and energy in acquiring technical skill and experience in the study of what constitutes equipment adequate for the common defense.

ROUNDTREE LOST OUT IN PLAINFIELD

Only One Contest in Primary—Less Than Third of Vote Polled.

The only contest in this district in the primaries yesterday was that for alternate delegate at large from the Republican National convention and I. W. L. Roundtree, the negro preacher politician, ran a poor fifth.

Less than a third of the voting strength of the city was polled. This was due to the lack of interest shown by voters in a primary, the purpose of which was merely to legalize the appointment of delegates to the two presidential conventions, when there was no fight for the honors.

But few ballots were thrown out in the city of Plainfield because of an expressed choice for president. On the Democratic ballot all delegates have declared for Woodrow Wilson and their choice was expressed with their names, so that a vote for any one man was a vote for the nomination of Wilson. The Republican ballot carried a space at the bottom where a choice might be made for president by the attorney general of the State ruled several days ago that to mark this space would invalidate the ballot and local election officers warned each voter before he entered the polls.

The vote in detail in Plainfield yesterday will be found in another column.

J. F. SCHWALB BURIED AT NEW PROVIDENCE TODAY

The burial of John F. Schwalb, aged 81, took place this morning at New Providence. Mr. Schwalb, who was a resident of Union Village for sixty years, where he owned a one-hundred acre farm, died Sunday morning at the residence of his niece, Mrs. Albert Garcier, Fort Wadsworth. Mr. Schwalb was a native of Germany, coming to this country when a young. During the early part of his life he was a whaler.

The only public office he ever held was that of justice of the peace. He was a successful farmer and amassed a considerable fortune. He leaves two sons, John F. Schwalb, of Atlanta, Ga., and Otto Schwalb, of Jersey City.

MISS CRANE A BRIDE.

Miss Grace Olive Crane, youngest daughter of the Rev. Arthur Crane, one-time pastor of the First Baptist church, Newport, and Mrs. Crane, and sister of J. Henry Crane, of this city, became the bride of Edward Roy Griffith, of Newport, R. I. The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, in Flatbush, Monday evening. The bride wore white satin, draped with white silk tulle and trimmed with orange blossoms. The young couple will live in Newport. Mr. Crane, of this city, was among the guests attending the ceremony.

MUCH INTEREST IN TRIO OF PLAYLETS

King's Daughters Circle Putting Finishing Touches on Program.

Much is expected of the three casts of characters that will take part in the triple theatrical treat to be presented by the Cup Bearers' Circle of King's Daughters in the Plainfield High School Auditorium, Monday evening, May 8. Rehearsals conducted to date indicate that the trio of playlets will be admirably presented and those who have been assigned to the various rôles are putting on the finishing touches.

"That Brute Simmons" is a particularly humorous sketch, Walter L. Righter playing the leading part, that of the hen-pecked husband. Harold Underhill appears as the former husband of the scolding wife, returning after a fire years' absence. Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick takes the feminine role.

Aside from taking part in "That Brute Simmons," Mr. Righter will render a number of Scottish selections in him inimitable style. Mr. Righter has entertained local audiences on previous occasions with his specialties and has always made a pronounced hit.

Miss Edith Griscom impersonates her rich aunt in a clever manner in "Our Aunt From California," the second play on the program. Others in this act will include: Mrs. Jesse E. Waid, Miss Katherine Titus, Miss Dorothy Burke, Mrs. Edward C. Suffern, Mrs. Edward J. Waring and Miss Hope Ivins.

Mrs. Maxwell Perkins and Brown Rolston support the two roles in "The Open Door," the third sketch. Both have mastered their parts in a finished style and that this portion of the entertained will score a hit is a foregone conclusion.

LITTLE INTEREST IN BOROUGH PRIMARY

Only One Hundred and Seventy-five Ballots Cast in the Five Election Districts.

The boroughites took very little interest in the primary election yesterday and only 175 ballots were cast. Of this number 119 were Republican. Of the 56 Democrats who voted 43 supported President Wilson. The only contest was on the Republican ticket among the alternate delegates at large to the National convention, there being five candidates for four delegateships. This contest resulted in the decisive defeat of I. W. L. Roundtree (colored), of Trenton.

The total result of the balloting follows:

Republican—Delegates at large to the National convention: David Baird, 107; Newton A. K. Bugbee, 113; Hamilton F. Kean, 110; Ira A. The stage door tickets will be given out on Thursday evening to all members of the cast.

The committee announced this noon that tickets are selling briskly and without a doubt the production will play to three packed houses. Those who have not as yet made reservations are advised to take care of the matter at once.

PEYTON-LYNCH NUPTIALS.

The marriage of Miss Beatrice Maria Lynch and Martin Joseph Peyton, both of this city, will take place in St. Joseph's church, the borough, this afternoon. Rev. Father P. J. Hart, the rector, will perform the ceremony in the presence of a small gathering of relatives and friends. PROMINENT FAMILIES UNITED BY MARRIAGE

Mrs. C. A. Marsh and O. T. Waring Quietly Wed at Noon Today.

In the presence of the members of the two immediate families, Mrs. Mary Catherine Marsh and Orville T. Waring were married at 12 o'clock today at the home of Mrs. Marsh on West Eighth street. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which the bride is a member, performed the ceremony. Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served.

The nuptials were void of any ostentation, the whole affair being marked by simplicity. Mr. and Mrs. Waring will make their home at 900 Park avenue, the bridegroom's residence.

The bride is the widow of Craig A. Marsh, who was for many years corporation counsel of Plainfield, and one of New Jersey's leading lawyers. Mr. Waring is a director of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and president of the Plainfield Trust Company, and a member of several clubs. Both families have been prominent in this city for many years.

UNCLE SAM MAY OPEN CAMP HERE

Government Seeks Information From the New Market Rifle Club.

An interrogative letter received by William T. Piddington, Jr., secretary of the New Market Rifle Club, from Washington, in regard to the size and location of its range, indicates that the government is considering opening a training camp in this vicinity similar to that conducted at Plattsburg, N. Y. Mr. Piddington was asked for an answer to the inquiries by return mail.

Among the questions asked were: How far is the range from the nearest railroad and what are the side track facilities of the railroad? also what are the facilities of transportation from the railroad to the range?

How are the drinking facilities and are there any running brooks running through the range? What is the longest distance obtainable for range purposes? How many regiments could camp on the range?

GREET NEW PASTOR AND WIFE AT CHURCH TEA

Under the auspices of the women of the Congregational church the annual foreign missionary tea was held in the parish house yesterday afternoon, the affair being marked by a large attendance. There was unusual interest in the meeting for the fact that Rev. Howard E. Clarke, pastor-elect, and his wife were present, and all were given an opportunity to meet them personally during a social hour.

During the forepart of the meeting Rev. F. J. Woodward, a missionary in the Gilbert Islands, Micronesia, gave a most interesting talk of his work, displayed a number of lantern slides and exhibited many curios. Another feature of the affair was violin solos by Mrs. Noel G. Evans. She favored the audience with two pleasing numbers. Mrs. Mary J. Harold and Mrs F. A Weeks were in charge of the social program, and the young women from Mrs. John M. Whiton's Sunday-school class assisted.

The first of a series of three euchre contests between teams of 12 men picked from the parishes of the following churches: St. Mary's, this city; St. Joseph's, North Plainfield, and St. John's, Dunellen, will be held tomorrow evening in St. Joseph's Hall, North Plainfield. A handsome silver loving cup has been offered to the winner of the series. From Dunellen comes the information from the headquarters of John McMahon, who is captain of the St. John team, that he will have the strongest combination that has ever represented his parish. The players are as follows: Owen Mohan, Sr., Richard M. Ryan, John Rafferty, Owen Mohan, Jr., Peter Mohan, C. L. The following Plainfielders have been selected to serve as grand jurors at the May term of the Union county court: A. D. Edgar, Frank W. Edgar, William R. Causebrook, Alvin E. Hoagland, James E. Buckle and William T. Kirk, also Clarence H. Crane, of Fanwood.

TALENTED ARTISTS PRESENT PROGRAM

Plainfield Musical Club Gives Charming Affair at Home of Mrs. H. G. Runkle.

One of the most charming musical affairs of the present season took place at the home of Mrs. H. G. Runkle on West Eighth street, last evening, when the Plainfield Musical Club conducted a concert for its members and friends. Each year the club gives a treat to friends of the members and last night's was more than fully appreciated and enjoyed by the large gathering present.

Te contributing artists to the program were: Mrs. Harry Johnson, of this city; pianist; Wallace Cox, of New York, tenor; Miss Mary Runkle, of Plainfield, soprano; and Victor Harris, accompanist. Each of the soloists gave groups of selections, receiving enthusiastic applause in each instance. Mrs. Johnson's renditions showed remarkable technique and an absolute gift of musical expression. Miss Runkle sang in excellent voice, bringing out its many fine qualities through the wide range of selections. To many in the audience she proved a vocalist of far more than artistic ability, giving her song with apparent ease despite numerous difficult passages. She was warmly complimented at the close of the program. Mr. Cox also sang splendidly and the accompaniments of Mr. Harris, who rarely performs outside of New York, were a feature of the concert. The program in full was as follows:

Sonata, Op. 35, Chopin; The Berceuse, Op. 57, Chopin; Etude, Op. 10, Chopin, Mrs. Johnson; Mattinate, Tosti; Tambourin and Chanson a Danser, Old French; Zaza, Leon Cavallo, Mr. Cox; In Quelle Trine Morbide, Manon-Puccina; Kerry, Victor Harris; My Lover He Comes On the Skee, Clough-Leighter, Miss Runkle; Buss Lied, Beethoven, Arrabesque, Debusy, Seuer Zauber, Drassin-Wagner, Mrs. Johnson; I Am Thy Harp, Woodman; Don't Care, Carpenter; Pipes O' Gorden's Men, Hammond, Mr. Cox; Heinrich Aufforderung, Strauss; Quand Je Dors, Liszt; The Bird of the Wilderness, Horsman, Miss Runkle; Gondoliera, Agnscher; Duo de L'Oasis, Thars; Trot Here and There, Messager, Miss Runkle and Mr. Cox.

MANY PASTORS ASSIST AT REV. VAUGHN'S FUNERAL

Mt. Olive Baptist church on Liberty street was filled to its capacity yesterday when the funeral of its pastor, Rev. Maurice W. Vaughn, was held. The gathering included colored ministers from all parts of the State and former parishioners in other cities. The service began at 11 o'clock and was not concluded until 3 in the afternoon, because of the great number of address made by clergymen, who had been associated with Mr. Vaughn for many years.

The Rev. Dr. Morris, of Camden, was in charge of the obsequies, and among those assisting him were Rev. W. C. Watkins, of Orange; Rev. W. J. Jones, of Roselle; Rev. J. C. Love, of Montclair; Rev. J. R. Brown, of Newark; Rev. R. L. Harris, on Englewood; Rev. E. L. Parker, of Camden; Rev. L. B. Jordan, of Philadelphia, and Rev. J. P. Jackson, of Philadelphia. The Mt. Olive church choir rendered musical numbers and numerous handsome floral pieces were contributed by friends in Plainfield and other places.

Interment was made in the cemetery at Linden, the following acting as pallbearers: Oscar Green, J. W. Reed, Peter Gordon, Andrew Cox, William Carner, of Plainfield, and J. Eatman, of Roselle.

REV. DR. J. M. HARE TO BE MEMORIAL DAY ORATOR

The Memorial Day committee from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., announced at last night's meeting of the Post that Rev. Dr. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, would be the orator at the patriotic exercises to be held at Reform Hall on Memorial Day afternoon.

The veterans also took occasion last night to eulogize Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, who passed away Monday afternoon, for his untiring efforts in behalf of the Post. It was largely through his efforts that a soldiers' plot was set aside at Hillside cemetery, and suitable markers provided for the graves of the departed veterans.

P. H. S. GAME OFF.

Owing to wet grounds, New Brunswick High School called off the baseball game scheduled to be layed at that place this afternoon with the Plainfield High School cohorts. The next game for the Red and Blue will be with South Side, of Newark, on Parker Field, Monday afternoon.

VILLA IS HIDING NEAR SATEVO

Bandit Only Sixty Miles From United States Troops.

PURSUIT WILL GO ON.

General Obregon Starts For Conference With General Scott—No Reply to Be Made to Carranza Until Result of Meeting Is Known—Funston Sends More Soldiers Into Mexico.

Washington, April 26.—According to a dispatch received at the state department from Consul Letcher at Chihuahua City, Francisco Villa, the Mexican bandit leader, is hiding in the mountains sixty miles west of Satevo.

Major General Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff of the army, who received a copy of the dispatch from the state department, expressed the belief that, regardless of the plans under way for a redisposition of the American troops in Mexico, General Pershing would not hesitate to go after the bandit if the information concerning Villa's whereabouts appears trustworthy.

A copy of the Letcher telegram is understood to have been forwarded to General Funston by the war department, with instructions that its contents be communicated to General Pershing. At the present time, it is understood, there is a force of American cavalry at Satevo, which could be used to run down the clew.

At the Mexican embassy it was said that General Obregon, minister of war of the de facto government, had left Mexico City on Sunday night for his conference with General Scott, chief of staff, and General Funston at El Paso. He is said to be traveling on a special train, accompanied by his military aids.

Conference Important.

Officials of the state department attach much significance to the conference on the ground that the attitude which General Obregon takes will doubtless reflect that of the entire Carranza government on the proposition of greater co-operation between American and Mexican forces in the pursuit of Villa rather than a withdrawal of the American troops.

This is the proposition, it is stated, which General Scott will lay before Obregon, and for that reason no move will be made by the state department to answer the formal note of Carranza requesting withdrawal pending the outcome of the border conference.

The war department received confirmation of the press reports sent from the border earlier in the week telling of the killing of an American trooper at La Jolla on April 1. No details are given in the official dispatch, which does not even contain the name of the soldier killed or the regiment to which he was assigned.

General Funston reported that two battalions of the Seventeenth infantry were sent across the border in Mexico. This movement is understood here to be part of the redisposition of the forces proposed by General Funston. The Seventeenth infantry, it is thought, will be used to strengthen the line of communications.

RAY DUTCHER WILL COMPETE FOR TITLE

Former Plainfield High School and Dunellen Athlete Priming for Newark Meet.

One of the many title holders who will compete in the national gym. championships to be decided at the Newark Y. M. C. A. Saturday night, May 13, is Ray W. Dutcher, metropolitan Indian club-swinging champion and former holder of the national championship.

Dutcher formerly lived in Dunellen and attended Plainfield High School. He is a New York University man and is now a resident of Passaic. The national championship Dutcher formerly held now belongs to Lester J. McCloud, who, like Dutcher, represents the New York Athletic Club.

There will be nine events on the program of the A. A. U. gymnastic championships. When all the entries are in, it is expected that one of the classiest fields that has ever taken part in the titular meet will be enlisted.

SPORT BRIEFS

The Northwestern League has its grand opening tomorrow, with Butte at Seattle, Great Falls at Tacoma and Spokane at Vancouver.

Kansas City has one of the best bouts of the week, in the contest set for Friday night between Gus Christie and Sailor Grande. It will go 15 rounds.

The Kentucky Derby will be run two weeks from Saturday at Churchill Downs, and it is expected the number of starters will exceed 16, the figure for last season.

The distance runners of the Middle West will be lined up at St. Louis on Saturday for the 12th annual cross country championship of the Western division of the A. A. U. The distance is 6½ miles.

Jess Willard packs his grip on Saturday and joins the circus. It is said he gets fifty thousand for appearing in the big tent twice a day for the summer.

The Washington Horse Sale, an annual event in Ohio, begins today at Washington Court House, with the closing of the horse show.

The Federal League players who have been returned to the fold are holding their own in both the major leagues. This busts the idea that the Fed bunch was a rookie organization.

The Pacific Coast wrestling championships will be decided at the Pacific A. A., San Francisco, on Friday. The mat sport is in high favor on the Coast.

Six races, four of which are steeple chases and two to be run on the flat, make up the card for the annual hunt races at Rockaway Hunting Club, on Long Island, next Saturday.

Golf and tennis are coming into their own this week. Both sports have taken a big spurt, with many new organizations added to the old timers. Golf links are being opened up in all sections of the country, and the tennis game was never so popular.

Two hundred blooded dogs are being benched today at the Golden Gate Kennel Club show at Frisco. The kennels of Mrs. Anita L. Baldwin, daughter of Lucky Baldwin, will furnish some of the star entries.

The Kentucky race season opens tomorrow at Lexington. There will be 62 days of thoroughbred racing in the Blue Grass circuit this summer, ending July 11.

ELKS' HOUSE TOURNEY.

SHAMROCKS WILL GIVE SAURERS ANOTHER TRY

Saurer's bowling team, which was soundly beaten by the Shamrocks about a week ago, will again give battle on Thursday evening on the Fourth street alleys.

Rohrs, who generally averages over 200, will roll for the Shamrocks. He expects another victory.

AUTO DRIVER WILL RACE AGAINST AN AEROPLANE

Dario Resta, auto racing champion of 1915, and De Lloyd Thompson, the sensational air pilot, were matched yesterday afternoon to meet in an earth-and-air contest at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on the afternoons of May 6 and 7.

The race will be part of the Aero Club of America's aeroplane fund benefit that Thompson is promoting to show what a factor the flying machine is in war.

It will be the first earth-and-air speed contest that has been staged at the Speedway, and many of the auto and aeroplane fans are interested to know which is the faster type of locomotion.

Resta needs no introduction to the speed fans of this city, while Thompson's flying feats have made him the most-talked-of man in the game today.

TWENTY-ONE ENTRIES FOR METROPOLITAN CLASSIC

It was announced yesterday that twenty-one entries had been received for the Metropolitan Trophy race, the new auto racing event which will be contested at the Sheepshead Bay speedway on May 13, over a 150-mile route. There will undoubtedly be a number of additional entries received within the next few days and the prospect is that a record-breaking field will face the starter.

Thus far, the Delage cars have the largest representation. Harry S. Harkness has entered four, which will be driven by Carl Limberg, Jack Le Cain, and two drivers as yet unnamed. Dario Resta, the winner of the Astor Cup race last year, will pilot a Peugeot, and John Aiken will also drive a Peugeot. Eddie O'Donnell, who was oil pumper for Eddie Rickenbacker, prior to his debut as a driver in February, 1915, will be at the wheel of a Dusenberg. Since he became a pilot, O'Donnell has had marked success. Rickenbacker, who finished third in the Astor Cup race, will have one of the Maxwell entries, and Pete Henderson will drive another.

RED AND BLUE HOPS ARE HIGH ANYWAY

Plainfield High School Track Team Expect to Sweep the Field in Relays.

Plainfield High School has a better chance this coming Saturday to place her name high among sporting circles than she has ever had before, and from present indications when the Red and Blue quarter mile relay team starts in the Penn Relay Carnival there is pretty sure to be some great racing shown. With schools from all over the country represented, John Noll, who has been coaching the P. H. S. candidates, had his doubts about getting a combination that would stand any show, but from the performances on Parker Field, where practice has been going on, it looks like a win for P. H. S.

Knowing that the local team will have the pole at the start Coach Noll has had the men out for practice every day this week. Tomorrow will be the last real practice and Friday will be a day of rest. The way the fellows will start has been announced as Hand, Trowbridge, Field and Daniels. Alpaugh and O'Donnell will go as substitutes. The 9:02 train will be taken from here Saturday morning.

MAY HAVE TO WALK.

San Francisco, April 26.—No special train will carry Eastern golfers west free of expense to compete in the Western amateur championships tournament, to be held at Del Monte, Cal., in July, it became known here yesterday. The California Golf Association has sent a communication to the Western Golf Association stating that it agreed to abide by the decision of the latter organization not to accept the free train which was offered by the Californians. The train was declined because, it was held, its acceptance would constitute a violation of the amateur rule.

BALL PLAYERS IN CLOVER NOW

Times Have Changed Since Comiskey Was a Tosser.

OLD ROMAN REMINISCENT.

Owner of Chicago American League Club Tells of Crude Training Season When He Was With the St. Louis Browns.

"Times have changed since I was a ball player," said President Charles Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox recently. "I remember our spring training at St. Louis when I was with the old Browns. I often think of it, especially when I consider the de luxe way in which players of today are handled in the south. Our season opened about April 12, so we all reported at St. Louis March 20—all thirteen or fourteen of us. Rookies were not so numerous then. We were practically all veterans. Then we would get our oldest uniforms on and run around the park. This was pleasing work, especially when it was biting cold. If there happened to be a snow flurry and a heavy wind some of us would cut our old overcoats off just above the knee and run around wearing them. I had a glove, being a first sacker; so did the catchers. But the rest of the players used their bare hands always, and the ball would sting, I can tell you, on those cold mornings.

"Go south for training? No; nothing like that. We did our work right in that ball yard. Once in awhile we managed to have a game with a picked up team. There were not enough of us to make two complete teams. But we never took any short trips for exhibition battles then. How well I remember the first time the Browns played in the south for exhibition purposes! It was, I believe, the spring of 1887. Our Browns and Detroit of the other league were the big rivals then, and we staged a series of battles at New Orleans. Detroit had Thompson, Brouthers and players of that caliber. We had Robinson, Gleason, Latham, Curt, Welsh, Nat Hudson, Bushong and Carruthers in addition to others. That was a wonderful event—going away to the south in the spring. Today it is anything but unusual. It was asked once if we had any trainers and rubbers when we worked at St. Louis in the spring. My answer was no; it was too cold, anyway, to be rubbed down then.

"One of the funniest things that happened at St. Louis in those early days was when the ball park was renovated every spring. A few gallons of paint were used to slick up the grand stand, and Chris von der Ahe's private box was also painted. That wound up the renovating. Von der Ahe, der little boss, was a great character. Many stories are told of his mannerisms and quaint sayings when he owned der Browns. Often after his team lost a game Chris would dash into the club's dressing room, single out a certain player and shout, 'Vy did you drop dat ball, eh?' He took every muff as a personal affront and seemed to think the poor players could explain in well chosen words why they happened to muff.

"Von der Ahe took great pride in his Browns and, because his men were big fellows, called his organization 'the biggest club.' Or, rather all were big except Tommy McCarthy. McCarthy was a diminutive outfielder about the size of 'Rabbit' Maranville of the Braves or Donie Bush of the Tigers. He was fast and had a great whip. If the runner did not watch his step Tommy was as liable as not to throw him out from right field on a short single. Chris didn't like McCarthy because he was small and often asked me why I didn't fire him at once. 'Ach! Dat Tommy can't play big ball,' Von der Ahe would say in keen disgust.

"When the Union association came into being Von der Ahe put a second St. Louis team on the field called the Maroons. These men played on his lot when the Browns were on the road, thus giving the city continuous ball. Old timers still talk of the excitement there was at St. Louis when the amazing total of twenty-six or twenty-eight players reported for spring practice. Major league teams then carried only from thirteen to fifteen men, so when such a raft of stars invaded one city it was no wonder the inhabitants thought it great pumpkins. There was one drawback, however—the park wasn't large enough to permit this many players to take spring practice. It was remedied by having the Browns take the field while the Maroons were running around just inside the fence. Then when the players got tired they would start batting, and the Browns would take a course of distance sprinting. Yes, times have changed in baseball."

Meredith Fresh as a Daisy.

Ted Meredith, Penn's great runner, has done little hard training this season. This should set at rest rumors that he is going stale. As a matter of fact he will have to train down a few pounds to be at his best.

BROWN TRYING TO COME BACK

Three Fingered Flinger Will Have Chance to Meet Matty.

One of the real interesting features of the new Chicago Cub team the coming season will be the come back of Mordecai Brown in National league circles. The famous three fingered veteran showed that he was capable of delivering a victory quite often last year in the Federal league.

Brown is one of the gamest men that ever donned a uniform. He has demonstrated that he possesses more nerve in the pinches than any pitcher that has ever faced a batter.

Those who watched Brown work last year are satisfied that he has still a year or two of big league ball in his system. He may not have quite as much speed as he once had, but he has the experience of many seasons and the experience of hundreds of games to help him fool the wise batters.

A pitchers' battle between Brown and Christy Mathewson will be one of the early features of the summer's schedule in Chicago. Tinker is himself confident that Brown will be as valuable a member of the pitching staff as any that he has.

Brown holds the distinction of having fanned Ty Cobb on three straight strikes in the first world's series played between the Cubs and the Tigers in 1907.

Mathewson and Brown were always hooked up against each other when the Cubs and Giants met. Brown came out ahead of the Giants' star hurler about twice as often as he lost.

MAT CHAMPION EARNS WAY THROUGH COLLEGE

Mike Dorizas, the University of Pennsylvania champion heavyweight wrestler, is earning his way through college by teaching and tutoring. The income from some property located in Constantinople belonging to the Greek's family has been cut off on account of the war, and as a consequence Dorizas has been thrown on his own resources.

Dorizas will graduate in June and has already engaged with the Germantown academy to take a position there as a teacher.

FEMALE CHESS PLAYER STAR.

Miss Jessie Bogen Represents University of Cincinnati.

For the first time in the history of intercollegiate chess in this country a girl chess player figures in the lineup of a varsity team, representing the University of Cincinnati. This unusual player is Miss Jessie Bogen, Ohio champion at chess.

With her brother, E. Bogen, who heads the team, while she plays at the fourth board, she is in charge of one of the six games which have been started by correspondence with Harvard university.

White Sox Have No Field Captain.

Manager Rowland has decided not to have a field captain for the Chicago White Sox.

"When the manager is on the coaching line there is no need for a field captain," says Rowland. "If by any chance I am out of the game the boys can carry along the battle without me."

Seen and Heard on the Street

West End citizen, a born and bred Plainfielder, asking friend if yesterday's election was important enough to require his vote.

Newly painted store on North avenue, near Park, with the following sign tacked on the door: "Believe the painter—Wet paint."

Peevish gentleman declaring the trouble with the Plainfield police department rested in the "noticeable lack of inefficiency" in management.

Nervous woman letting out a "whoop" on Park avenue as an auto tire explodes directly in back of her. Also a cop hastening in that direction praying the noise was not a signal indicating some work was in store for him.

Young man telling interested friend how he separated himself from a "bum" dime by passing it in the church collection Good Friday morning.

Sign on East Front street open-air movie theatre that has been closed for the past six months: "Show now going on."

In the Elks' Club grill room "Bill" Dowd told this one to A. E. Force:

Dowd—"Which is the richest country in the world?"

Force—"I don't know, which is?"

Dowd—"Ireland, because its capital is Dublin all the time.'"

This is the way it was passed on:

Force—"Which is the richest country in the world?"

Arthur E. Smith—"I don't know, which is?"

Force—"Ireland, because Dublin's its capital all the time."

Tris Speaker, $50,000 Ball Player, Will Be Missed by Boston Red Sox

TRIS SPEAKER, who was recently sold to the Clevelands by Boston for $50,000, the highest price ever paid for a ball player, states that he is entirely satisfied with his new berth. Many experts are of the opinion that the Boston Red Sox's chances for winning the 1916 pennant have been greatly lessened by the absence of Speaker. For many seasons several of Boston's pitchers have appeared marvels by reason of his great catches in center field. Speaker is considered the greatest fielding outfielder in the game. He plays the outfield like an infielder. There is no doubt that Speaker will help to put the Cleveland club in the race.

Austrian Ruler Talks For Phonograph Record.

RAID BRITISH COAST BY AIR AND WATER

Submarines and Zeppelins Aid In Attack.

London, April 26.—A simultaneous raid by a German battle cruiser squadron, Zeppelins and submarines took place on the seaport of Lowestoft, about a hundred miles northeast of London.

British seaplanes, cruisers and destroyers attacked the German forces, and a battle raged in the air, on the sea and under the sea at the same time.

Although the German raid was a failure inasmuch as only a few shots were fired at the British coast, killing two men, a woman and a child, the German craft successfully made their escape. One British pilot is reported lost by the British officials. This pilot was last seen fighting a Zeppelin during a preliminary raid by four Zeppelins on the coast of Norfolk and Suffolk about three hours before the appearance of the battle cruisers and submarines. Another pilot was seriously wounded, but managed to land.

According to a dispatch from Amsterdam, British warships, accompanied by destroyers, bombarded the German naval base at Zeebrugge, in Belgium, and other towns.

In an official statement it was stated that two British cruisers and a destroyer had been hit during the engagement, but no mention was made of the co-operation of Zeppelins and submarines in the attack.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

Expressing Money in Terms of Shoes

When a man leaves this store with a purchase, he has in his possession the same value as he had when he entered our doors. The only difference is that the value is now expressed by shoes instead of dollar bills.

That is the standard of value rendered here.

There is no such thing as obtaining greater value per dollar than this store offers.

No concern in all the world can make the same grades of shoes at less cost than they are made by the manufacturers who supply us.

No store can buy at less cost than we do.

No store can give greater value per dollar than we do.

A New Departure In Service

SERVICE

In line with our constant effort to be of service to our patrons, we have adopted a plan whereby we propose to pay our customers' household bills each month, charging the total to their account and doing away with all the bothersome detail that the householder experiences in paying from ten to thirty or more bills, monthly.

Under this plan the depositor sends us one check for the total of all the bills he or she wishes to pay, and we attend to the payment of the individual bills. In this connection we also propose to purchase commutation tickets for depositors, charging the amount to the depositor's account and delivering the ticket to the depositor a day or two before the first of the month, doing away with the inconvenience that he now experiences each time it is necessary to renew his ticket.

If you have no account with us at present, we will be glad to have you open a household account, that will enable you to take advantage of this service.

If any additional information is desired, it may be obtained at the bank, or our representative will call if you prefer. We feel sure that an investigation of this new system will speedily convince you of its many advantages.

IRISH RIOTERS STILL HOLDING PARTS OF DUBLIN; REVOLT YET GROWING, ASQUITH ADMITS

SOLDIERS HAVE NOT BEEN ABLE TO PUT DOWN REBELLION AGAINST GOVERNOR AND HIS STAFF —WHOLE ISLAND UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

SIR ROGER CASEMENT IS HELD IN DEATH CELL

Leader Fears Movement Will Fail for Lack of Him—Premier Defends Action of Army in Statement of Seriousness of Situation to House of Commons—Lieut. Gen. Sir John Maxwell Gets Plenary Powers.

London, April 27.—Announcement was made in the House of Commons today that the whole of Ireland had been put under martial law. Premier Asquith made the following statement:

"The situation in Ireland is still serious. The revolutionary movement is spreading, especially in the west. The British troops in Ireland are being reinforced adequately to deal with the movement. A contingent of British troops has been sent from Wales to reinforce the English soldiers in Ireland."

Still Hold in Dublin.

The action of the Government is accepted as a reply to criticisms that its course in dealing with the Irish volunteer movement led by Sein Feinners had been weak and vacillating. Lieut. Gen. Sir John Maxwell, K. C. B., in command of the King's forces in Ireland, has received plenary powers for dealing with the insurrection. The trouble is said to be spreading westward and the Sein Feinners continue to hold part of Dublin.

Sir Roger Casement, it is reported, has expressed belief the uprising in Ireland would be a failure on account of his capture. His leadership, he said, was necessary to the success of the movement.

Several newspapers support the theory advanced by A. Conan Doyle a year ago that Sir Roger is insane. The "Westminister Gazette' advocates he be sent to a lunatic asylum.

Sir Roger is now a prisoner in the Tower of London and is occupying the cell in which Carl Hans Lody was held before his execution as a spy.

It is learned that Casement went on board the German submarine in Kiel harbor about April 14.

The submarine was accompanied by a tramp steamer manned by twenty picked men from the German navy and carrying a cargo of 20,000 rifles, machine guns and ammunition bound for Ireland.

Want Kitchener Sent.

There had been a small rising at Ardee and Louth and a rather more serious one in Swords and Lusk, close to Dublin.

Telegrams are now coming in more rapidly. They showed that Liberty Hall was partially destroyed and occupied by the military.

The London newspapers today launched a fierce attack upon Chief Secretary of Ireland Birrell and Lord Wimborne, demanding their resignations. The "Express" demands Lord Kitchener be sent to Ireland as lord lieutenant.

One report said that Sir Roger landed from a German submarine on the shore of Tralee bay, on the southwest coast of Ireland, just south of the mouth of the River Shannon, with two Irish companions. British secret service agents pounced upon them, but one of the trio escaped, and is still at large.

PARADE MEETING AT COLUMBUS CLUB TONIGHT

The Newark Convention Parade Committee of the Knights of Columbus will hold an important meeting at the Columbus Club tonight, to which all the members of the order are invited to attend. Final plans for Plainfield's participation in the big affair, which has been set for May 15, will be arranged at tonight's gathering. The committee has a lot of details to work out, and this can best be done by every member of Watchung Council giving his view. Many surprises are in store for those not on the inside.

The parade on May 15 will mark the beginning of Newark's 250th anniversary celebration, and it will mark the opening of the K. of C. State Convention. It is believed that twenty thousand members of the order from New Jersey will be in line. The Plainfielders will have an attractive uniform and will be headed by the Fourth Degree in full regalia. The committee arranging the trip is composed of Frank Burke, John Kyle, Harry Pasch, John Caulfield and Thomas Harding. An entertainment with refreshments will follow tonight's meeting.

BIG ART DISPLAY.

Pitsburgh, April 27.—Over 500 paintings, including the best work of American masters, are being shown in an exhibition that opened today at Carnegie Institute. The famous collections of the French and Swedish governments that were shown at the San Francisco Exposition are included. The Swedish collection includes statuary.

N. P. H. S. COMMENCEMENT AT P. H. S. ON JUNE 23

The North Plainfield Board of Education has fixed on Friday night, June 23, as the time for holding the annual commencement of the Borough High School, and arrangements have been made to hold it in the Plainfield High School auditorium. This will be the first time in the history of the borough that this has been done, but the arrangements are much more satisfactory and will permit the graduates and their friends to hold a dance at the same place, instead of going elsewhere, as has been the case heretofore.

WESTINGHOUSE STRIKE CLOSES MORE PLANTS

The men will meet a committee from other plants and choose an executive body to conduct the strike.

The Shadyside plant of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, employing 1,500 persons, was closed by the company today as a precautionary measure. There was no disorder.

RECEPTIONS FOR DOCTOR GRENFELL

Four Hundred Persons at Principal Gathering in the Park Club During Afternoon.

DINED BY PHYSICIANS

Fresh from the field hospitals of Northern France, where for more than four months he has been doing a noble work among the sick and wounded soldiers taken direct from the trenches, Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, the widely-known Labradorian medical missionary, came to this city yesterday as guest of honor at two receptions, and later to address the pupils of the Hartridge School. The first of the two receptions was accorded him at the Park Club at noon, where a luncheon was served under the auspices of the Plainfield Medical Society. A short time later he was present at a brilliant function, also given in the Park Club, arranged by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, president of the Plainfield section of the Grenfell Needlework Guild. It was attended by four hundred of Plainfield's most prominent residents.

Dr. Grenfell in reality needs no introduction to local people, but as he has won added laurels by his sacrifices in the European belligerent zone, his coming here was even a greater triumph than those won by him on previous visits. The learned doctor who has been giving his knowledge and skill for the benefit of the deep sea fishermen and other people of Labrador, showed results of the strain he has been under recently; yet it did not deter him from aiding in every way possible to make the Plainfield gatherings a success. Thirty physicians, four of whom were from out of town, attended the noonday luncheon at the Park Club. Dr. Ray Munger, president of the Plainfield Medical Society, presided during the gathering and introduced the distinguished guest.

Following an excellent repast, Dr. Grenfell addressed the medical men, dwelling mainly on the topic which was most pertinent to the occasion. This was a vivid description of how the great masses of wounded are cared for by the allied hispital corps in Northern France. He detailed the general plans of field and base hospitals, ambulance service, the separation of incapacitated soldiers into different groups and the most pronounced formulae used in guarding against tetanus, blood-poisoning and other enemies of fighting men laid low by shrapnel and bullets. Every detail given by Dr. Grenfell was followed with the keenest interest by each of the practitioners. At the conclusion of his story of the battlefields, the doctor supplemented his talk with a description of his undertakings in Labrador. The out-of-town physicians present at the luncheon were Doctors Sinclair and Kinch, of Westfield, and Doctors Hegeman and Ely, of Somerville.

The main affair of the day was the reception arranged by Mrs. Stewart and which began at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Stewart and Dr. Grenfell received. In one sense of the word the reception was informal, and when the gathering was at its heighth, Dr. Grenfell gave one of his picturesque descriptions of the Grenfell party's accomplishments in the far-away land of the north, and in which the women of Plainfield have been interested for many years. The achievements must be seen to be best appreciated, but as th great physician outlined each department and its labors for the betterment of the natives, who would otherwise be left to plod along without any civilizing influences, his auditors came to a full realization of how much it means to keep up the undertaking. Tea was served in concinsion.

Though the day had been a fatiguing one, in the evening Dr. Grenfell was at the home of Mrs. Stewart, on West Eighth street, where he was introduced to the young women of the Hartridge School. Here again he told of Labrador and its people, their daily life, their wants and what is best needed from the people of America to aid them. Dr. Grenfell worded his descriptions in a manner best calculated to impress the students and in several respects it was one of the best addresses he had yet given in Plainfield.

"THE GIRLS OF '76" PRESENTED

AN EXCELLENT CAST

Fully three hundred persons enjoyed the historical drama, "The Girls of 1776," presented last night in St. Joseph's Hall, by the young women of the church for the benefit of St. Joseph's villa, and all warmly complimented the participants for the excellent manner in which the entire production was given. Miss Catherine Zeller, playing "Madam Evelyn Mayfields," wife of Colonel Mayfields, ye British Army, portrayed her character in a splendid manner, her loyalty to her country coming first before everything else. Miss Anna Howe and Miss Martha Emmans took the part of daughters of "Madam Mayfields" in a charming way; Miss Dorothy Jacot and Miss Nora McDonough, enacting the parts of "Barbara Steele" and "Dolly Darrow" respectively, won much applause for their clever deception in the garb of soldiers, when they attempted to get certain valuable papers to General Washington. The portrayal of "Betsy Ross," taken by Miss Catherine Cooper, was a true picture of the mother of the American flag. Other members of the cast were: Miss Bessie Smith, "Grandmere Mayfields," ye mother of Colonel; Miss Helen McDonough, "Honoria Drake," a staunch loyalist; Miss Rose Cooper, "Ann Van Dresser," ze friend of Amanda; Miss Florence Meade, "Jaqueline Marie Valcarter," a French-Canadian girl of fallen fortune, Grandmere's attendant; and the Misses Bertha Frazier, "Troubles"; Rose A. McDonough, "Chloe"; Nora McDonough, "Minerva"; and Estella Frazier, "Dassy," the latter four slaves.

The action of the playlet passes in Philadelphia and Trenton. The settings for the presentation were especially beautiful and the costumes of the participants were in keeping with the time of presentation.

During the first interlude, the young men of the congregation rendered several vocal selections, among which was "Young America." When the latter was sung, Master Edward Moraller, impersonating "Uncle Sam," came out and lent a more patriotic feeling to the number. He was warmly applauded. Mrs. Alfred Seidel appeared during the second interlude and pleased with "The Mission of the Rose," which was sung in her usual inimitable manner. The third interlude consisted of a "medley" sung by the boys. Much of the credit for the able manner in which all the participants depicted the various characters was given to the sisters of the villa and Miss Mary O'Connor, who rehearsed the production for several weeks prior to presentation. The latter also presided at the piano last night. A social hour was enjoyed by all the attendants in conclusion.

MASONS LEAD IN MARCH OF 150 TO PLEDGE LIVES TO CHRIST AT END OF SERMON ON HYPOCRITES

FORTY UNIFORMED MEMBERS OF TRINITY COMMANDERY WALKED DOWN AISLES OF THE TABERNACLE LAST NIGHT.

ATTENDANCE WAS 5,800; COLLECTION $223.40

Delegation Was Largest of Its Kind That Ever Attended a Tabernacle Service, Dr. Biederwolf Says—Service Featured by Rendition of Special Song, Including. "The Wayside Cross."

At the close of the sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf on "Hypocrites" at the Tabernacle last night, more than 150 men, women and children (mostly men) walked down the sawdust aisle and pledged a better life for Christ.

The Tabernacle was almost filled. It contained at least 5,500 people, and this number included more than 250 members of the Masonic fraternity, who marched to the Tabernacle in a body headed by the Dutch Arms Band, and led by Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, in uniform. A delegation of fifty-two women of the Order of the Eastern Star accompanied the Masons. Included in the delegations were men from Plainfield, Somerville, New Brunswick, Metuchen and Elizabeth. In welcoming them, Dr. Biederwolf said that it was the largest delegations of Masons that had ever attended one of his services.

He made an eloquent appeal for a public expression of a life for God from all members of the Masonic fraternity, calling their attention to the fact that their order stood for the Bible, and when he had finished they led the way down the sawdust path, with Knights in uniform marching first. More than fifty Masons were among those who gave their hands to the evangelist at the foot of the pulpit as a public expression of their intention of consecrating their life to Christ.

There was also a small delegation of railroad men present at last night's service.

As a part of his welcome to the Masonic fraternity, Dr. Biederwolf asked that the National Male Quartet sing "The Wayside Cross." It was the first time the four popular singers have rendered this for Plainfielders, and the selection was very impressive. Mr. Heaton sang the verses under the rays of a cross that hangs over the platform, with all other lights out, and the other members of the quartet, with Mr. McEwan assisting, responded from behind the platform. They responded on the second chorus from the rear of the Tabernacle. The song won great applause.

The Rev. L. W. Hanner, of Norristown, offered the opening prayer. Dr. Hanner was chairman of the general committee in Norristown and "did yeoman service," according to Dr. Biederwolf. He came last night to pay a visit to his friends in the Biederwolf party.

The quartet also sang "The Little Brown Church in the Wildwood" by request, and Mr. McEwan sang "The Ninety and Nine" in a manner that reminded his hearers of Oscar Seagle.

Dr. Strong asked for the collection. After he had explained the need of money to pay expenses of the local committee, Dr. Biederwolf said that the collections would end Sunday, provided that the generous spirit for which Plainfield is noted was shown.

"I always did say that the hypocrite was about the littlest and the dirtiest and the meanest thing that the devil ever made and turned loose on God's world," said the evangelist in appealing for recognition for the church, "and if you can hide behind one you must be mighty small yourself. Some bugologist would do a good thing for science if he got you and pickled you in a bottle of alcohol and put you up on a shelf in some museum as a specimen of minutiae."

Dr. Biederwolf's sermon in full will be found in another column of The Press of today.

SINSHEIMER QUARTET TO GIVE MUSICALE HERE

An unusual [illegible]ure is in store for those who [illegible]d the musicale at Miss Van B[illegible]'s studio on Thursday afternoon, May 11. It is said that the music of a string quartet is the most absolute and perfect than can be produced and the Sinsheimer Quartet, which will play on that occasion, is a small group of real artists. Ethel Tozier-Hardy, pianiste, will support the quartet in solo and trio work.

The program, which has just been given in a musical day at the Women's Clubhouse in Orange, will soon be announced. It was heartily approved by the discriminating women of Orange and was received with much enthusiasm.

MOTHER

The man who wants to be true to the best that is in him never forgets his mother.

If he is separated from her he cherishes her memory in his heart. He delights to recall her tender ways. He meditates upon the growing lines of her hands and face and thinks of them not so much as the marks of years but as the brand of love.

There are unnatural women, but it is one of the strangest sights in nature to see a mother forsake her young.

Every true, pure woman who has gone down into the shadow of death as the price of motherhood ,has had born in her a deathless love that finds its satisfaction only in the returning love of her full-grown children.

Next to the love of a true mother is the love of son and daughter.

A young man goes out from his mother's home with his bride upon his arm. His joy is full. He looks the world in the face with a proud heart. He is courageous for the conflict.

But the battle goes against him. Then it is not his wife, but his mother, who looks into his despair. To her he opens his heart. If she has gone to be with the saints; in the night, when all the household is quiet in slumber, he stretches out his arms in the darkness to her radiant spirit and cries for her comfort and love.

We are often careless of mother. The best sacrifice we can make for her is the sacrifice of the mean and low and base in our nature; and, fixing our eyes upon her ideal of true manhood or womanhood, strive to meet it.

Then from the pinnacle of true manhood or womanhood, we may lavish upon her the love of a true son or daughter.

Then shall she see the fruits of her travail.

$25 WALKING WAGER WAS EASILY TAKEN

Dick Hart Returns to Scotch Plains Long Enough to Cop It.

In order to carry out the terms of a wager he had made with a friend in East Orange, formerly of Scotch Plains, Richard Hart visited his former home Monday and walked from Frowery's Hotel to the intersection of Terrill road and Front street in eight minutes. According to Hart, he had bet the Orange friend that he could walk it within a half hour and a $25 wager had been laid between the two. Other bets, amounting to more than $200, had been settled upon, according to Hart.

Accompanied by Jim Corona, the pedestrian made the trip Monday afternoon, and Carey Kilarney, a bartender in Frowery's Hotel, was selected to act as official timer. Those who watched the pair hike it to their objective point and back snickered at the apparent foolishness of such a wager. One could crawl to the point and back again in less than thirty minutes.

Hart explained the bet by saying that his friend in Orange had seen Scotch Plains but once, and had only a slight idea of the distance over which the controversy arose. Mike Sabitinio, the village barber, served as Hart's press agent during the engagement here.

The bride was attended by Miss Anna D. Baldwin, of Jersey City Heights, while the best man was John Francis McCarthy, of Plainfield, a brother of the bride. The ushers were Francis F. Scully, of Brooklyn, and Johnathan H. Baldwin, of Jersey City Heights.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, attended by the relatives and immediate friends, and later the couple left on a wedding tour. Upon their return, they expect to take up their residence in the borough.

Town Topics

That Scotch Plains has its peace lovers and war lovers, too, was clearly demonstrated at the primaries Tuesday, when three Republican voters gave as their choice for President Roosevelt, Hughes and Ford. The one who voted for the "flivver magnate" was seen to drive up to the polling place in one of the cars they use so much in jokes.

Local officials, especially of the borough, are beginning to become wrought up over some of the youngsters who throw stones at the street lights and signposts. Quite often there is a long strip of thoroughfare that is in darkness because the bulbs have been broken, and in some cases the street signs have become useless because of the damage done by stones. If anyone is caught in the act of throwing missiles at those lights or posts they will be brought before the Recorder and punished.

Neither Fanwood township or Fanwood borough can boast of a park that is provided for by the two places, and consequently the nearest approach to one is the section in the immediate vicinity of the local C. R. R. of N. J. station that is kept up by the Railroad. Residents came near losing that recently on account of the heavy taxes that were levied on the ground. The railroad is under considerable expense in keeping the grounds in condition, and the added item caused by the rising of the taxes by the County Board caused the company to decide to no longer keep things in shape. A local citizen took enough interest in the matter to appear before the Board not long ago and succeeded in getting the taxes lowered considerably, and so this spring the railroad has had a gang of men at work for several weeks around the station, and a regular park is resulting.

According to a recent announcement this will be the last week that local people will have a chance to get the benefit of the Parish House until next fall. The good that has been done by the reopening of the Parish Houes during the past winter is unquestionably great, although some may not realize it until after the popular resort of the young people is closed and they have to turn somewhere else for amusement.

SUMMER PLANS FOR BOY SCOUT WORK

Terrill Road Rendezvous Will Undergo a Number of Improvements This Spring.

Plans are already being made for the summer activities at the Boy Scout camp on Terrill road and from present indications the movement will be more of a success than last year. Edward Harding and Louis Hosmer, two residents of Terrill road, have become interested and are planning to make a number of improvements for the comfort of the Boy Scouts.

The ground was given last year by Frank Coriell and the buildings in the camp were erected by money contributed, many local people helping generously. It is used by all of the Plainfield Boy Scouts as well as the local troop from the Willow Grove section of the township.

Among the additional improvements to be made by the time the camp opens will be the providing of swimming and diving. There is a large pond on Mr. Hosmer's adjoining property and he proposes to make it suitable for the boys to use. The camp is to be repainted and various changes will be made about the grounds.

The Boy Scout Council has decided to make an effort to have a membership of 500 by Memorial Day and it will offer a good opportunity for local youngsters who do not already belong to join. Mr. Harding is chairman of the finance committee and Mr. Hosmer is one of the deputy commissioners.

WORK IS PROGRESSING.

The Kenyon Garden's Association is making excellent progress in having gardens laid out on property located on Arlington avenue and acquired for the purpose. The association recently secured additional land so as to complete amended plans. It is also proposed to build a bungalow on the tract as a place for keeping tools and also as a shelter for the children and mothers in case of storm.

BERLIN WANTS TO COMPROMISE

Will Probably Delay Reply to Ultimatum.

VON BERNSTORFF HOPEFUL

United States Officials View Situation as Seriously as Day Note Was Dispatched—Germany Said to Be Unwilling to Submit Unconditionally Wants Great Britain Curbed.

Washington, April 27.—It is now becoming possible to gain a general idea of the status of the submarine controversy. Germany, it is authoritatively learned, feels it cannot submit without reservation to President Wilson's demand and is therefore delaying its answer to the American note while seeking a middle ground.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, believes a satisfactory compromise can be reached. Secretary of State Lansing apparently does not share the ambassador's optimism. The position which Germany now takes aims at deferring a categorical reply to the president's demand that the imperial government "immediately declare and effect an abandonment of present methods of submarine warfare" until the two governments, by means of exchanges of views, can come to an understanding as to whether the reply which Germany submits would be acceptable to the United States.

Count von Bernstorff is understood to have cabled suggestions to Berlin which he believes might aid in reaching this agreement. Ambassador Gerrard at Berlin has reported to Secretary Lansing details of a conference he had with Chancellor von Bethmann-Holwegg. The impression which this report made on the state department apparently was not altogether satisfactory.

No Change, Washington View.

It was authoritatively stated that it had not changed the situation in the slightest degree. So far there is no indication that President Wilson or Secretary Lansing are regarding the crisis as less serious than it was the day the American note was dispatched to Berlin. Plain intimations were given out at the state department that overconfidence was not justified. Optimistic press reports stating that Ambassador Gerard had reassurred the state department were emphatically denied by Secretary Lansing.

President Wilson conferred with Senator Stone, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the senate. What transpired at the conference was not divulged, but the president now understands that there may be considerable further delay before Germany is ready to meet the issue. Count von Bernstorff said that he considered it very doubtful if a reply from Germany could come this week or even early next week. Ambassador Gerard, it is understood, has been informed to the same effect by the German chancellor.

It is stated in diplomatic channels, though not confirmed at the state department, that the publication of the American memo in regard to the status of armed merchant vessels is the direct result of Germany's desire to have certain points on the submarine issue cleared up before replying to the American note.

Germany has contended for some months that there was a direct connection between submarine warfare and arms carried by British merchantmen, and the imperial government has taken the matter up with the United States with a view to ascertaining how the American government stood on what Germany has described as the "illegal arming of merchantmen for offense."

United States Now on Record.

The United States heretofore has not made public its position on the latest points raised by Germany, and the memo makes the stand of the American government now a matter of record.

There was a striking contrast between the optimism at the German embassy and the lack of it at the state department. The consensus is that the seriousness of the situation now depends on the stand President Wilson will take with regard to the original demand that Germany abandon its present submarine methods. The hope appears to have disappeared that Germany will submit to this demand unless the United States is willing to so [illegible] as to make it less far reach[illegible] pe than the president in[illegible]

[illegible] willingness on the part of Germany to make definite concessions provided like concessions are obtained from Great Britain is made clear by the imperial government. It is not willing to surrender its submarine weapon against Great Britain without compensation. There is much interest in the statement that Count von Bernstorff has cabled suggestions to Berlin which he believes will avert the crisis.

The sincere desire of the German ambassador to maintain friendly relations between his country and the United States despite opposition in certain circles in Berlin is generally recognized here. His judgment on the present delicate situation is considered sound, and it is said he is in a position to know the respective attitudes of the two governments at the present critical moment

NEED LABORERS ON SEWER WORK

Trunk Lines Will Not Be Completed Before December, It Seems.

BOARD TAKES ACTION

Blatz Heads Committee to Confer With Contractors—Sebring Case to Come Up May 8 and Tax Appeal May 4.

The trunk sewer between Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen will not be finished before December 15, 1916, according to a report made by Consulting Engineer George W. Fuller to the Joint Sewer Board last night, unless same arrangements are made to secure more laborers on the contracts.

Members of the Board discussed the shortage of labor and its effect in causing delay for some time and then adopted the suggestion of Engineer Fuller that a committee be named to confer with contractors for the purpose of determining how labor conditions can be met. This committee is composed of President Blatz, of the Plainfield Council; Councilman Hylan, of Plainfield; Councilman Milne, of North Plainfield, and Mayor Latham, of Dunellen. They will take up the assignment of securing labor for the contractors at once.

The Sewer Board last night authorized the payment of the following claims: Cauldwell-Wingate Company and Atlantic Construction Company, $2,325.74; E. L. Bader, $3,855.70; George W. Fuller, $261.80.

Mr. Fuller also recommended that a telephone be installed at the sewer plant near Dunellen, that 1,200 square yards of macadam be put down on the road running through the sewer farm, both of which were ordered carried out by the Board.

He reported that the Sebring injunction suit would come up for trial May 8, 9 and 10, and members of the Board passed a resolution declaring that it had no intention of violating any of the rights of the Sebring owners and would adopt all methods and appliances necessary on the sewer farm to prevent the disposal plant from becoming a nuisance to nearby property owners.

The tax appeal of the Sewer Board on the assessment made on the sewer farm will come up before the State Board of Equalization sitting in New Brunswick on Thursday morning, May 4.

HELD IN $1,000 BAIL ON EXTORTION CHARGE

Cornelius Farrell With Many Aliases is Still a Prisoner in New York Tombs.

New York, April 27.—An indictment charging "attempted extortion" to which he has pleaded "not guilty" has been found against Cornelius Farrell, alias Alexander Jessup and many other aliases, who in default of $1,000 bail continues to occupy a cell in the Tombs. It is charged that he attempted to extort $100 from Hiram O. Hance, a New York lawyer who resides at Watchung, North Plainfield township, to keep from newspaper publication four letters which Mr. Hance alleges was stolen from his office and is said to have passed between him and somebody in the White House at Washington, relative to some diplomatic position in South America which it is said Mr. Hance has been willing to accept if offered to him by the President.

At the office of the District Attorney al linformation regarding the contents of the four letters was refused. It is said, however, that Farrell, who was indicted under the name of John Smith, may be brought to trial in the near future.

LARGE TICKET SALE FOR "THE MYSTIC ROSE"

Everything in Readiness for Elks' Big Show at Plainfield Theatre.

The committee in charge of the presentation of "The Mystic Rose," the Japanese-American opera which is to be produced in the Plainfield Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, under the auspices of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, report that final plans are working out most satisfactorily. Those in charge of the affair are pleased with the exceptionally large advance sale of tickets. There is no longer any doubt that "The Mystic Rose" will play to three capacity houses, as more than three-quarters of the seats for Tuesday night and about two-thirds of the seats for Wednesday night have already been taken. The sale for Monday night, which up to yesterday noon had not kept pace with Tuesday and Wednesday, took a sudden jump in the afternoon, evening and this morning, and a packed house for the opening performance seems a foregone conclusion.

A number of box parties have already arranged for seats, including Mayor William L. Smalley, of North Plainfield; G. L. Kirchgastner and party of Rahway for two boxes, and another local party whose name was not secured. The Elizabeth Lodge of Elks has purchased a block of twenty-five seats, while Dover lodge has duplicated this number. Two theatre parties from Somerville—one composed of Elks and another, friends of Miss Marie Schafer, who plays one of the leading roles, have secured reservations, while large parties from Bound Brook, Westfield, Scotch Plains and New Brunswick have secured blocks of seats.

Large frames, showing pictures of a number of the principals of the cast, placed before the Queen City Hotel, the Elks Club and near the postoffice, have received much attention from the public.

A rehearsal of the principals of the cast was held last night and the work showed that everything will be in readiness for Monday night so far as they are concerned. The entire chorus and principals will rehearse tonight and tomorrow evening to perfect stage work. Professor Skilling is most anxious that every person who is a member of the cast be present tonight as the tickets admitting to the stage of the theatre will be given out.

Mrs. Henry Carr, of Brooklyn, is spending a few days in the borough as the guest of her brother, Frank Neidig, of 30 Lincoln place.

APPRAISAL OF LARGE ESTATE IS FILED

Plainfield Relatives Beneficiaries Under the Will of Mrs. Eliza M. Zerega.

New York, April 27.—An appraisal of the estate left by Eliza M. Zerega, mother of the late Azelia C. Huntington and grandmother of Anna Moore, Florence A. Huntington and John Frederick and Bertha V. Zerega, of Plainfield, which was filed today in the surrogate's court, shows that when she died on March 26, 1909, she left a net estate of $45,461.15.

Three of her daughters, including Mrs. Huntington, receive in equal shares all personal property except money, stocks and bonds. A sister who died intestate on February 28, 1903, leaving three children, was bequeathed $25,000. The rest of the estate is divided among twenty-three grandchildren, including those in Plainfield. The personal property comprises furniture, wagons, horses, cows, diamonds, pigs, guinea gowls, a calf and 145 ounces of silver. Mrs. Zerega left bonds and securities valued at $22,956.59. The gross estate amounted to $49,462.03. Azelia C. Huntington, now deceased, and Augusta Florence Zerega, the testatrix's other daughter, were named as executors in the will dated September 8, 1889.

That's what I said to Plainfield's leading laundryman this morning.

So many people find fault and blame the laundry because a shirt fades—it isn't the fault of your laundry—it's because of the dyes in the material. Rothberg Shirts are guaranteed not to fade, a new one in exchange for one that loses its color.

MANY MOURNERS AT OFFICIALS FUNERAL

Full Masonic Service Conducted Over Body of Freeholder J. Hervey Doane.

One of the largest gatherings noted at a local funeral in many years was in evidence yesterday afternoon, when services were conducted over the body of the late Freeholder J. Hervey Doane at the family residence on East Seventh street. In addition to the relatives and scores of Plainfield friends, delegation were present from many fraternal organizations, the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, the Public Recreation Committee, and the full membership of the Union County Board of Freeholders. A number of the mourners came from distant points as Mr. Doane had an acquaintance that extended far beyond the confines of Plainfield.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church, opened the obsequies at 3:30, conducting the customary religious service for the family and close friends. During this part of the ceremonies Charles L. Lewis, who had known Mr. Doane intimately for many years, sang with deep sympathetic expression the beautiful solo, "I Know Not the Hour When My Lord Shall Come."

When Dr. Anderson had offered the concluding prayer, Samuel A. Bingaman, acting as eminent commander in behalf of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, took charge and conducted the Templar ritual service. Henry Woodland served as prelate and thirty members of the commandery participated. The impressive form was executed in full, the commitment being made at the home instead of at the grave.

Masses of beautiful flowers were banked about the casket, the number of individual pieces being so great as to give the room a tropical appearance. The floral emblems came from relatives, friends and societies. The latter included Trinity Commandery, Salaam Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; Jerusalem Lodge, F. and A. M.; Jerusalem Chapter, R. A. M.; Plainfield Lodge of Elks, Columbia Lodge of Workmen; the hospital board; the Public Recreation Committee and others. The Union County Board of Freeholders contributed an immense circle of Calla lilies as an evidence of the esteem in which their late member was held.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, Rev. Dr. Anderson offering prayer as the body was laid in its last resting place. The casket was borne by six members of Trinity Commandery, R. F. R. Huntsman, Charles A. Lee, L. B. Woolston, Samuel Bingaman, B. F. Coriell, and William A. Cockrane.

CLAN M'KENZIE GIVES ENTERTAINMENT AND DANCE

Under the auspices of Clan Mackenzie, No. 204, Order Scottish Clans, a social and dance was held in Coward Hall last night, the affair being a great success socially and financially. The music for the occasion was furnished by William Bachefsky, pianist of this city, this being a feature.

William Cuthbertson, a widely-known Scottish tenor of New York, sang "The Veteran Song" with marked feeling and responded to an encore, with "Bonnie Wee Thing." Later in the evening he sang another selection, being given an ovation for an old-time ballad.

William D. Sharpe, of New York, well-known baritone soloist, sang "My Heart Warms to the Tartan," and "Mary" as an encore, which was heartily applauded. He also sang "The Big Banshee." The soloists were accompanied by Sopus Lassen, of this city, who contributed largely to the success of the singers by his playing. Credit is also due William Hayes, of the Clan, and his committee, for the pleasant evening spent by the entire audience.

LAST CHANCE TO SEE BARNUM & BAILEY SHOW

The Barnum and Bailey circus now at Madison Square Garden, offering a wealth of varied attractions for old and young greater than ever before, closes after the two performances of Saturday, April 29.

Novelties galore are to be found with the big show this year, not including the array of acts which were imported from Europe especially for the present tour. The circus has a world of amusement features, wealth of circus colors, a menagerie of the wildest beasts imaginable, a regiment of clowns, numerous equestrian features, an army of performing animals from the jungles, caves and plains, popular music played by augmented bands—in fact, a million things that can only be found under the "canvas" of the big show.

"Persie; or the Pageants of the Thousand and One Nights"—teems with life, action and color.

Three herds of elephants presented by Barnum & Bailey's first and only lady elephant trainers, are one of the features this year. There are riders of note in the circus world, which include The Five Hannefords, whose wonderful feats in horsemanship has never been equalled; Teddy, the human aeroplane who flies through the air without wings or springs; Pallenberg's wonder bears, who ride on bicycles, skate on rollers and do acrobatic stunts just like human beings; Lupeta Perea, pride of Spain, displaying evolutions in mid-air; Moran and Wiser, who throw hats about the arena in much the same manner as boomerang throwers; Swain's rats, cats and dogs, a unique animal act in which felines and rodents perform; The Four Meillio Sisters, equilibristic contortionists; Henri Fillis and company, who introduce dancing girls and dancing horses; Marcella's birds, a troupe of parrots, cockatoos, ravens, etc.; Four celebrated Chinese Troupes; The Weisse Family, in astonishing innovations and many other novel features. Saturday is the last chance to see the big circus at Madison Square Garden.

box office price. The Daily Press has arranged not only to provide the ticket at the regular price, but to include railroad transportation to and from New York for but twenty-five cents extra.

While there are a number of good seats at the Daily Press office, the management has no assurance that any more can be procured for this special party after the present lot is exhausted, so that first-come, first-served will continue to be the rule. When all now on sale are gone, those which are being held for persons who are to call in the future will be sold, provided they are not taken by Saturday.

No feature of the New York Hippodrome, since its rejuvenation under the direction of Charles Dillingham, has perhaps attracted the public interest quite as much as the luxuriant and attractive promenade, tea rooms and lounge at the rear of the mezzanine floor, which have become the rendezvous of society folk who have flocked to see "Hip, Hip, Hooray."

From this theatre, under its new regime, has emanated a craze for ice skating which is arresting the interest not only of New York, but the entire country, and the modes and fashions of the winter were revolutionized by this movement.

But while the marvelous novelty of the production and the merits of the army of individual artists are arousing world-wide interest, it is the promenade which is causing the most talked-of of the structural changes of the big playhouse, because this is the first time that this feature has been successfully introduced here although often tried before. In English music halls and at the fashionable homes of revues in Paris, Vienna, Berlin, as well as at the operas abroad, the promenades on the balcony floor are a distinct necessity, where patrons may retire during the entre'acte to chat and rest.

END ARGUMENT IN BASIN CASE

Vice Chancellor Orders Briefs to Be Filed.

SCHOOL FUNDS INVOLVED

Assistant Attorney General Wants Time Extended to Permit Legislature to Provide Money—Counsel For Lehigh Valley Railroad Argues Special Act Is Unnecessary.

Jersey City, April 27.—Argument was concluded in the controversy between the state and the Lehigh Valley over the big basin before Vice Chancellor Stevens. The point at issue is the question as to what constitutes a reasonable time when the state must pay back to the railroad the purchase price for the basin paid in 1889, plus interest, making the total payment about $125,000. After hearing counsel the vice chancellor ordered the filing of briefs.

Under a decree of the court of chancery, upheld by the court of errors and appeals, the riparian commission had no right to sell the basin, and the state either must pay back the money and get the basin or permit the railroad the further use on lease.

On the contention that the legislature failed to appropriate the money allowed the railroad Assistant Attorney General Boggs petitioned to have the time for payment extended for a year until the next legislature meets to make the appropriation.

In his argument Mr. Boggs cited the statutes and interpreted them to mean that no money could be diverted from school funds and that the only manner in which the payment could be made would be by appropriation through the legislature.

Former Supreme Court Justice Collins contended for the railroad that the payment was not the question of an appropriation, but was merely the question of a transfer of accounts. If the money paid by the road in 1889 was credited to the income account it would have to be transferred to the fund. Through the decree of the court the counselor held the fund would be augmented illegally and the money would have to be refunded. Mr. Collins also attacked the contention that an act of the legislature was necessary to make payments from the fund. He held that the statute provided automatically for payments from the fund and only left the legislature the option of augmenting the appropriations from the fund for the use of public schools.

Mr. Collins referred to the chancery decree and pointed out that under the latter, made in 1913, a "reasonable" time for the payment of the money was set aside, and the question was, what constitutes a reasonable time.

"We do not want this matter again made the football of the legislature next session," Mr. Collins said, a sentiment which he had expressed in similar words at the last hearing two weeks ago.

TAKES SECRET TO PRISON.

Confessed Forger Refuses to Reveal His Real Name.

Newark, April 27.—Arthur C. Cox, who was sentenced to three years in prison by Judge Haight on Monday in the United States district court, was taken to the federal prison at Atlanta by United States marshals.

Cox pleaded guilty to breaking into the Leonardo postoffice on Sept. 9 and stealing a pad of money order blanks, which he forged in various sections of the country. He was arrested in California.

Postoffice inspectors attempted to secure a statement from Cox before he was taken away, but he refused to give any of his past history. He said that to tell who he was and where he came from would only cause suffering to his parents and wife and child, who did not know that he was in trouble.

JEWELERS TO MEET.

State Organization to Hold Convention at Asbury Park.

Newark, April 27.—The outline of the New Jersey Retail Jewelers' association annual convention, to be held in Asbury Park on June 26, 27 and 28, was prepared at a meeting of the association in Achtel-Stetter's, this city. There will be two days of sightseeing and entertainment and one day business.

The plan is to assemble at the Coleman House Sunday, June 26, and at night go by auto to De Lisle's, at Allaire, for a dinner. Monday will be devoted to business sessions at the Coleman House and a banquet at night. Tuesday's activities will be devoted largely to an automobile trip home and a dinner at the Holmdale inn.

Strike at Edison Works.

Belleville, April 27.—Without presenting any demands to the officials of the company, about seventy employees, comprising the night shift in the carbolic division of the plant of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., in the Silver Lake section of this city, went on strike. A similar number, comprising the day shift, joined the strikers. According to the men, an increase of 2 cents per hour for all employees, comprising three grades, is desired.

OUTLINE STAND ON ARMED VESSEL

Lansing Issues Statement on United States Position.

Washington, April 27.—The publication of an official memorandum by the state department giving this country's views on the armed ship question has further complicated the controversy with Germany.

The document upholds the right of merchantmen to arm for defense, draws a distinction between their status on the high seas and in neutral waters, points out that the rules laid down by this government cannot be taken as conclusive against the character of such a vessel and that it can only be legally treated as a warship when the attacking vessel has absolute proof that it is such.

It declares the status of a vessel is not altered by instructions from the owner's government unless those instructions are made binding by a penalty or obedience to them is encouraged by the offer of prize money.

The declaration was issued in the form of a memorandum prepared by Mr. Lansing at President Wilson's direction during the secretary's brief vacation last month. Copies of it were given to each of the embassies and legations here.

The Stout Woman Should Let Science Plan Her Clothes

Stout women, ninety-nine out of a hundred, worry about their clothes.

They are haunted by the fear of looking stouter than they are.

But stout women need worry no more. Science has taken their problems under consideration and evolved smart, becoming costumes that give them style and actually make them look considerably slimmer than they really are.

It is all a matter of line and proportion.

The Bamberger store has secured the services of a well known woman specialist in this line, who not only buys our specially designed clothes for large women, but spends a great deal of time in the department, where she is always ready to give advice and aid in the making of selections. We have Bridals and honeymoons are things to be reckoned with these days. The giving of the right gift to the happy couple is a serious matter for mature consideration.

The gift must be lasting; it must reflect the good taste of the giver; it must be serviceable and useful and pretty.

We are showing some rich examples of the far Eastern looms. Beautiful hand-made pieces in rich colorings, and in the bizarre designs of the Orient. Pieces for almost any room in the house.

THE REAL TEST.

C. L. Penny, writing in American Industries for April, says that the real test of American democracy will come during the next five years' period. The end of the next decade will determine whether or not we shall become and remain one of the great industrial powers of the world. Now is America's opportunity which if seized, will assure her industrial independence. If passed, we shall become a secondary power and if not subjected by actual welfare against which the whole country is now crying "preparedness," we shall later be virtually subjected by a financial conquest, vastly more subtle and difficult to combat.

Over and above all of this discussion lies the dormant and all-conquering inventive genius of a nation. In the face of the wonders it has produced in the past, no one can predict the future conditions with safety. It may be that no matter what national strait we might find ourselves in, our great inventors would find a way out. But it will be well to remember that the way of the inventor is sometimes hard and he often becomes very poor in the pursuit of his great end.

Let America not depend on this last great extreme. Financiers and manufacturers should combine for the cultivation of the great markets of the world backed by a clear and definite national policy. America must assume her great role now while the opportunity is hers. No vacillating policies should be tolerated in our insular possessions and especially the Philippines. We need them as feeders and one day they may determine our rank among the nations of the earth.

The American International Corporation has organized for the purpose outlined above. This is a most tremendous stride in furthering America's industrial rank among the great nations of the world. It is founded apparently on solid lines with some of America's best business men behind it and should ultimately achieve success. Englishmen realize full well its tremendous import for The Morning Post of London comments on it as "a quite serious proposition" and says further that England would do well not to lose sight of her commercial possibilities after the war.

THE SIZE OF MEXICO.

Most people have but a vague notion about the size of Mexico or the character of its people. The school boy learns little of the country in his geography, and in the history he reads the facts are meagre. In times of peace we never give a thought to the big land to the South, and so when troubles arise we are ignorant of the land that is causing disturbance. Few Americans travel in Mexico. Those who go are such as wish to make fortunes out of exploiting the land of great mines and untold wealth or else as hunters in its vast solitudes. In many regards we know less of Mexico than we do of "Darkest Africa." Recently the National Geographic Society issued a bulletin from which a few facts may enlighten those who have but a vague conception of the vast territory that is now giving so much trouble.

Before Texas became a part of the United States and the Mexican War added nearly 1,000,000 square miles to our territory, Mexico, then a Spanish colony, and the United States covered approximately equal areas of North America. Now, the bulletin states, Mexico is about one-fourth our size. However, it still has territorial expanse nearly equal to the aggregate of France, Great Britain and Ireland, Germany and Austria-Hungary, or a total area of 767,000 square miles, but a trifle less than Texas, California, Montana, New Mexico and Arizona combined—quite a bunch of territory to over-run if we must do it and establish peace and decent government.

None of the political sub-divisions of Mexico is as large as any one of the five States named, but four Mexican States contiguous to the United States aggregate an extent greater than that of Texas. Chihuahua, the largest Mexican State, approximates in area (87,000 square miles) that of Utah, Sonora (77,000 square miles) of Nebraska, Coahuila (63,000 square miles) of Georgia and Durango (40,000 square miles) of Kentucky. The rugged and desert character of the Mexican border States supports sparse populations, and cities resulting therefrom have concentrated settlement.

BEEKMAN FOR CONGRESS.

The Democrats of Mercer county, it is predicted by the Trenton Times, will undoubtedly lend loyal support to former Speaker Azariah M. Beekman, of Somerset county, who has announced himself as a candidate for the Congressional nomination in the Fourth New Jersey District. Mercer has furnished the candidate on numerous occasions, when Perrine, Southwick, Libbey and Walsh were nominated, and Hunterdon made a trial with Steele, a few years ago. Now Somerset, the third county in the district, has a fair claim to the honor.

Former Congressman Allan B. Walsh, of Trenton, is said to be considering running again, but some of the party leaders think there will be little chance of electing him, since he was beaten by Hutchinson by nearly 3,500 plurality last time, when many Republican voters refused to support their party nominee because he flirted with the Progressives in 1912. This year, with a President to elect, the revolt against Hutchinson will probably be quelled.

Strength will be lent to Beekman's candidacy because of the sentiment among Democratic workers that Mr. Walsh has been rewarded for the sacrifices he made for his party. He has practically a life position at $3,000 a year, which is about as good as any political office in this district.

SETS DATES FOR HEARINGS ON CODIFICATION OF LAWS

Trenton, April 27.—Dates for a number of hearings were agreed upon yesterday by the commission appointed by Governor Fielder to revise and codify the laws relating to municipalities. In all, seven hearings have been agreed upon, at which representatives of the various municipalities will be given an opportunity to be heard. On May 3 the commission will give a hearing at the City Hall, Newark, for representatives of municipalities in Essex, Morris, Union and Somerset counties. Other hearings decided upon were as follows:

May 2, at Trenton, for Mercer, Hunterdon and Warren counties.

May 9, at Long Branch, for Monmouth, Middlesex and Ocean counties.

May 10, at Camden, for Camden, Gloucester and Burlington counties.

May 17, at Atlantic City, for Atlantic and Cape May counties.

May 18, at Bridgeton, for Cumberland and Salem counties.

May 23, at Jersey City, for Hudson, Bergen, Passaic and Sussex counties.

Members of the commission are: Leon Abbett, of Jersey City; Edward F. Merrey, of Paterson, and Francis A. Stanger, of Bridgeton.

The session of the Sunday-school of Grace M. E. church will not be held next Sunday morning as planned but the members will assemble in the church at 2 p. m. and march in a body to the Tabernacle, where all the schools will meet for a union service. Every member of the school is expected to be present.

On the Spur of the Moment

Undoubtedly.

Oh, the winsome suffragette,
She is going to get us yet,
In her campaign to gain her freedom.
In her argument she's cute,
She's a pippin, she's a beaut,
Shouting the battle cry of shedom.

The Hickeyville Clarion

It seems as though a feller never gets enough money to take a vacation until he is too old to enjoy it, and would rather stick around home.

A woman kin wear thin lisle stockings and low summer shoes all winter and still be very comfortable if she has got a $200 set of furs.

A good baseball player kin make more money than a college professor and have a lot more fun while he is doing it.

Uncle Bushrod Peeler, aged 96, is over to our town from West Hickeyville, visiting his grandfather, who is not in a very robust state of health just at present, having been knocked insensible by a large log which he was putting on top of a pile the other day. The old man is always glad to see Bushrod, as the latter is his favorite grandchild, although he often says he don't know as he is bringin' Bushrod up right. Bushrod has got 17 grandchildren of his own. The old man never found out that Bushrod smoked until one day last summer and he was so sore about it that he knocked Bushrod down three times with a neck yoke. The old man says kids like Bushrod are mighty onmanageable these days. No member of the Peeler family has died a natural death in 15 generations, and the old man is afraid Bushrod will learn to smoke cigarettes. It must be fierce to have so much longevity as the old man has got when the cost of living is so high.

It Was Some Show.

Bill Reynolds was full of stories Monday morning about the home talent show they had over at Hubbardston last Friday night, in which Bob Kelly took the part of the villain in such a realistic and natural manner. "In the scene," said Bill, "where the hero is supposed to knock the villain cold the stage was so small that Bob stuck one foot over the footlights, poked a hole in the bass drum and darned near punched an eye out of the orchestra leader in the bargain. But finally, with the help of the entire company, they managed to double up Bob enough to get the curtain down and allow the show to proceed to a happy and final conclusion. But their troubles didn't end there. The hero glued his false whiskers on so tight he couldn't get them off, and he had to wear 'em home, and when his wife saw him coming through the front door she thought it was Carranza, and let out a yell that broke every window in the house. By the time that things were finally explained they had the hero in the village bastile, with darned near half the town standing guard while they tried to get out the militia. But it was some show, some show," concluded Bill as he wiped away another tear.—Pewamo News.

Modern Epitaphs.

In a crowded car,
And there you are.

Bill Jones passed on amid regrets;
He tried to stay, but—cigarettes.

A long farewell to Maggie Lou;
She went out in a frail canoe.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

Today's new bill at the Plainfield Theatre, which is to remain for the last half of the week, will introduce to local patrons the best of the "kid" acts. It is entitled "Juvenile Follies," and is presented by twelve of the cleverest youngsters traveling the circuit. All are under twelve years of age, but they sing, dance and act comedy on an equal footing with professionals many years their senior. The offering has met with great success in every city in which it has been presented. Today's bill also brings another big feature beside "Juvenile Follies." This is the dramatic playlet, "Fighting It Out," presented by John Atkinson and company, supporting Helen Helder, the boxing girl, who set all New York raving. Miss Hilder is positively the only woman who ever stepped into the squared circle and defeated a male opponent. In connection with "Fighting It Out," which tells a stirring and absorbing love story, Miss Hilder will give an exhibition of her prowess. Four other acts of a varied nature will be on the vaudeville program.

The ninth episode of the "Iron Claw," the serial film which has set the whole town talking, will be one of the film features of today's portion of the program. The tenth episode of "The Strange Case of Mary Page" is scheduled for tomorrow, and on Saturday the Pathe semi-weekly will be screened in connection with several other Pathe features.

--Astor Theatre--

Jane Gail, who has made thousands of friends through her work as leading woman in scores of feature films, has been selected by Bluebird Films, Inc., to enact the role of Queen Flavia in their five part presentation of "Rupert of Hentzau." Her leading man will be Henry Ainley, who will be called upon to interpret the dual role of Rudolph Rassendyll and Rudolph V., King of Ruritaria. The screen version of Anthony Hope's popular play will be presented at the Astor Theatre today. Miss Gail has played many parts of varying requirements, but she never before has been favored with an opportunity to so artistically demonstrate her high emotional qualifications. Queen Flavia passed through a most trying ordeal in living and reigning with her king and husband, while still loving the English man who had been crowned beside her at a time when the real king was held prisoner by Rupert of Hentzau. Miss Gail possesses a natural poise of queenly grace and authority and in the pictured scenes of Queen Flavia's trying ordeal she realizes the greatest heights of her emotional expression in pantomime of the photoplays. "Rupert of Hentzau," sequel of the "Prisoner of Zenda," leads the observer through a spectacular series of brilliant dramatic situations. Aside from the purely emotional work, which makes Jane Gail the peer of any woman who has ever acted in any photoplays, there will be numerous other dramatic advantages to delight the theatre-goers who find their best entertainment in photoplays. Tomorrow, Daniel Frohman presents Pauline Frederick in a very thrilling picturization of Henry Arthur Jones' powerful drama, "Lydia Gilmore," with Vincent Serrano, a Paramount master picture.

BOROUGH HOTEL BARS TO CLOSE AT 11 P. M.

Proprietors Promptly Comply With Request From Judge Daniel H. Beekman.

Fred Moore, proprietor of Hotel Chatham, and William Feaster, proprietor of the Somerset Hotel, both in North Plainfield, received letters from Judge Daniel H. Beekman, of the Somerset County Court, yesterday, requesting them to close their bars at 11 o'clock at night instead of 11:30 o'clock as heretofore, adding that in case of their failure to comply, there was a possibility that they might not secure renewal of their licenses when they expire.

Both Mr. Moore and Mr. Feaster promptly decided to comply with Judge Beekman's request and the new order of things went into effect last night for the first. Recently, the judge made a similar request of the proprietor of the Washington House on the Valley road, and he agreed to close at 11 o'clock. Henri Pedefious is now the only one at this end of the county who has not made a change in his closing hours, but it is believed that Judge Beekman will write him to do so at an early date.

The closing of the borough bars at 11 o'clock is a community interest movement, the supporters of which have been trying for several years to bring about. The bars in Plainfield close at that hour and heretofore it has been possible for Plainfielders and others to go "across the brook" and patronize the bars there up to 11:30 o'clock. Not until recently has there been any prospect of a change. Mayor W. L. Smalley and the Borough Council recently adopted a resolution asking the Somerset County Court to request the hotelkeepers in that municipality to close at 11 o'clock and yesterday's action is the result.

WEST POINT BILL AGREED ON

Measure Will Nearly Double Number of Cadets.

Washington, April 27.—The bill practically doubling the number of cadets at West Point, one of the minor preparedness measures designed to supply officers for the increase of the regular army and training of the militia, was agreed upon by the house and senate conferees.

The bills passed by the two houses differed little in essentials, but the conference committee followed almost entirely the house bill.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Theda Bara week has created a sensation among local film fans, and Proctor's palace of refined entertainment continues to be the Mecca of hundreds of photoplay enthusiasts at each performance who wish to see their favorite actress portraying her greatest role. Miss Bara appears there today in "Mrs. Audley's Secret," in which she assumes one of her most difficult parts. In addition, the management presents a heart-gripping Triangle play entitled "The Raiders," with H. B. Warner, the talented "legitimate" star at the head of a wonderful cast of screen stars. In this, his first appearance in motion pictures, Mr. Warner more than lives up to the reputation he gained in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and many other successes. The comedy part of the program is ably taken care of by Fred Mace and a clever bunch of funmakers in "An Oily Scoundrel." Tomorrow Mice Bara will portray an emotional role in "Destruction," one of the more recent of her successes. Hazel Dawn, the talented Paramount star, whose name is legion in this vicinity, also appears on tomorrow's pogram in "The Masqueraders," adapted with aptitude and huge lavishneess to the screen from the famous stage success of the same name. Marion Sais and Ollie Kirkby, those two clever seekers of revenge and retribution, also appear in the latest chapter of "The Social Pirates." Saturday's program includes Theda Bara in "Carmen," acknowledged by all critics to be her greatest picture; Edmund Breese in "The Lure of Hearts Desire," an engrossing and intensely interesting Metro feature, and "Musty Suffer," and Mutt and Jeff are retained to produce uproarous merriment for the kiddies as well as the older folks. In addition to the regular program of wonderful features next week the big local movie play entitled "It Happened in Plainfield," will be on the program each day, featuring all local people, a thousand in number, and perhaps yourself and friends. Charlie Chaplin will appear soon in "A Burlesque on Carmen," in four massive parts.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

I enclose copy of letter sent by me today to Congressman Capstick, at Washington, which may be of some slight interest to you.

HOWARD M'WILLIAMS.

The letter was as follows:

"April 26, 1916.

"Hon. John H. Capstick,
"House of Representatives,
"Washington, D. C.

"Dear Sir:

"I am an unfortunate enrolled Republican voter residing in Plainfield, N. J., which has the misfortune to be in the district misrepresented by you in Congress.

"The reasons for our unhappy plight are well expressed in the editorial in this morning's 'New York Times,' which I commend to your prayerful consideration.

"After more than twenty-five years of satisfaction in voting for Republican candidates for Congress in the States of New York and New Jersey, for the first time I am suffering the humiliating experience of being obliged to hang my head in shame for a traitorous act of an un-American Congressional representative of my district.

"Nothing more lucidly reveals the extraordinary workings of the Germanized mind (not intellect) than the statement of the spokesman of your Prussian and Hessian admirers in Elizabeth that the 'Administration wants to have war with Germany!' Any schoolboy knows that the nightmare of the possibility of any serious friction with Germany has reduced President Wilson's blood to such a condition of pernicious anemia that it required the slaughter on the ferryboat 'Sussex,' loaded with non-combatants, neutral and belligerent, men, women and children, and the serious injury thereon of a daughter of one of his dear friends, to make him take up his facile pen again to write another 'strict accountability' note, and almost a year has elapsed of denial, of apology, reparation and assumption of responsibility for the more than a hundred massacred American citizens on the 'Lusitania,' followed by three-score other outrages on neutral property and life.

"As I look out of my office windows across the Hudson River, my eyes rest on a dozen steamships (of German lines, in which the Kaiser is said to have large pecuniary investment), which have taken asylum in a friendly, neutral harbor to avoid capture or destruction by British cruisers. On one of them has been found a workshop for making infernal machines to destroy factories and steamships, with the attendant destruction of property and life. The statement of one of the alien, self-confessed German criminals, who have so abused American hospitality, shows that over 300 of these instruments of destruction were there made and shipped to various parts of our country.

"Your New Jersey admirers and sympathizers doubtless include these and similar criminals. Politics certainly do make strange bed-fellows, but let me assure you that I have a pretty strong conviction that the American Republicans of your district will find a way to empty their bed of its present strange occupants on the first opportunity.

"Yours truly,
"HOWARD M'WILLIAMS."

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Princess Lost Her Gold Ball.

And Threw It on the Spring's Edge.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

SOON as Jack and Evelyn had supper they climbed into daddy's lap for a bedtime story. This is what he told them: "One beautiful evening long, long ago a young princess put on her bonnet and clogs and went out to take a walk in a wood. She walked till she was tired, so when she came to a nice, cool spring of water she sat down beside it to rest. Now, this princess was very fond of playing ball, and her favorite plaything was a beautiful gold ball, which she always carried with her. She was always tossing it up in the air and catching it again. So soon as she was rested she began to play ball. She threw it so high that she missed catching it. It bounded along the ground and rolled right into the spring. She looked in, and the bottom was so deep she could hardly see it. Then she began to cry. 'Oh, if I could only get my ball again I would give all my jewels and pearls!'

"While she was crying a frog put his head out of the water and said, 'Princess, why do you weep so bitterly?'

"'You nasty frog!' cried the princess. 'What can you do for me? I lost my gold ball in the spring!'

"'I don't want your jewels and pearls,' said the frog. 'But if you will love me and let me live with you and eat off your gold plate and sleep upon your bed I will bring you your ball.'"

"Boo!" Evelyn cried.

"'What nonsense!' thought the princess. 'This silly frog can never get out of the spring to visit me, but he may get my ball for me. So I will tell him he can have what he wants.

"'When you bring me my ball I will do as you ask,' said she.

"Then the frog put his head down and dived into the spring. After a long while he came up again with the ball in his mouth and threw it on the edge of the spring. Soon as the princess saw the ball she ran to pick it up. She was so happy to have her plaything again that she never thought of the frog, but ran home just as fast as she could. The frog shouted after her, 'Oh, princess, take me with you, as you promised!'

"But she did not even hear him and without even a word of thanks disappeared from his sight," daddy ended.

"She forgot her manners, didn't she?" Jack grinned.

"It's a habit children have, unfortunately," said daddy, kissing the children good night.

"Sweet dreams, daddy!" cried the children.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. When ever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally If You Eat Meat Regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

The Great Voice.

I who have heard solemnities of sound—
The throbbing pulse of cities, the loud roar
Of ocean on sheer ledges of gaunt rock,
The chanting of innumerable winds
Around white peake, the plunge of cataracts,
The whelm of avalanches, and by night,
The thunder's panic breath—have come to know
What is earth's mightiest voice—the desert's voice—
Silence, that speaks with deafening tones of God.

The Morewanter.

Once upon a time there was a woman. She had a hen that laid an egg every day. "Why should I wait twelve days to get a dozen eggs?" I will give the hen twice as much feed as she is getting now, said the woman. So she gave the hen twice as much. Now, she said, I will get two eggs a day, and it will take six days to get a dozen. But, the next morning when she went to get the eggs the hen was dead. Morewanters lose all.

Go to School Week.

Sussex county has had a "Go to School Weeek" under the supervision of County Superintendent Decker. In an open letter to the people of the county Mr. Decker said the schools needed more interest taken in them by the patrons and taxpayers, and suggested that each one spend a half ora whole day in the schools during the designated week and not the following points about the school:

What the teacher is trying to do and the obstacles under which she is working.

If the school be properly equipped for the work.

If the repairs are receiving attention, and whether the pupils and teacher are doing their share of the upkeep.

Note the seating, ventilation and sanitary conditions.

Note the attendance and if it be regular.

Note the spirit of the teacher toward the pupils and vice versa.

Nature's Neglected Masterpiece.

The author, the composer, crones over his conception, planning beauty and perfection. The artist loves his creation, and, though starving, will not part with it. The sculptor destroys his statue if it does not meet with his ideal. All these brain creations are petted, molded, constructed until considered examples of art worthy to be exhibited to the world; but Nature's living greater art, the child, too often is crippled before it sees the light of day, or is cradled in ignorance. Stop and think, men and women, you creators of Nature's masterpieces, in your mad rush for other excellencies, that the climax of your lives after all and above all is the child in its perfection.

Playing With the Baby.

The rule that parents should not play with the baby may seem hard, but it is without doubt a safe one. A young, delicate or nervous baby especially needs rest and quiet, and however robust the child, much of the play that is indulged in is more or less harmful. It is a great pleasure to hear the baby laugh and crow in apparent delight, but often the means used to produce the laughter, such as tickling, punching or tossing makes him irritable and restless. It is a regrettable fact that the few minutes of play the father has when he gets home at night, which is often almost the only time he has with the child, may result in nervous disturbance of the baby and upset his regular habits.

EFFICIENCY.

Is your wife a believer in efficiency?

Yes, indeed. She always reads the last chapter of a novel first. You've no idea how many books this method saves her the trouble of wading through.

MRS. ROGERS FREE, INSANE, SAYS JURY

Mother Was Charged With Killing Her Babies.

New York, April 27.—Mrs. Ida Sniffen Walters Rogers was acquitted of the charge of murdering her infant son in the supreme court of Bronx county, the verdict being based on the belief of the jurors that she was insane when she committed the act.

The district attorney immediately moved to dismiss the indictment against her for the poisoning of her other child, a girl of eight months, on the ground that it covered the same facts, and the defendant left the courtroom a free woman.

Mrs. Rogers was accused of poisoning her children on Dec. 29, 1914. Her counsel, Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, said as she was leaving the courthouse that after all the excitement of the last year and a half Mrs. Rogers yearned for rest and had asked to be taken to some quiet place where she could see flowers in bloom. She appeared calm and rational after the first burst of emotion when the jury brought in the verdict. At first she bowed her head and wept. On one side was her husband and on the other a woman friend. Rogers was also deeply affected, and tears streamed down his cheeks.

Mrs. Rogers owes her freedom largely to the evidence of Dr. Minas S. Gregory, head of the psycopathic ward in Bellevue hospital, for the jurors, after deliberating forty-five minutes, came in and asked that a part of his testimony be read to them. The alienist, although he had been called for the prosecution and had declared his belief that Mrs. Rogers was sane, had admitted that there was doubt in his mind on account of certain of her actions.

It is understood that the first ballot of the jury showed nine for acquittal, two for conviction and one blank.

Hastings Strike Ends.

Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., April 27.—After a strike of fourteen days marked by violence and rioting, which was stopped only by the calling out of the national guard, the strikers at the National Conduit and Cable company factory here agreed to return to work for an increase of 2 cents an hour. Their original demand was for a five cent increase, but they accepted the company's offer, with the stipulation that the strikers who were sent to jail would have the assistance of Mayor Thomas J. Goodwin in seeking their release.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

SOME MISNOMERS YOU HAVE HEARD.

The Giants aren't Giants. Many of them are almost pygmies. Doyle, Kauff, Burns, Rariden and three or four others are far under six feet in height. The regular team, as a whole, probably doesn't average beyond 5 feet 10 inches or 5 feet 11 inches.

The Cubs are full grown. There's Joe Tinker, who is well along in the thirties; the ancient Miner Brown and Frank Schulte. Mike Doolan, Heinie Zimmerman, Steve Yerkes and Johnny Kling are a bit elderly, too.

The Indians aren't what their name implies. They're not savage; they don't emit warwhoops or conduct scalping parties.

The Browns are not brown.

The Dodgers still dodge trolley cars over in the wilds of Brooklyn, but they don't dodge the other ball clubs as they used to do in the bygone days.

The Cardinals belie their name. Cardinals are not supposed to use profane language, chew tobacco or drink beer. Yet some of the Cardinals do those very things.

The Yankees aren't Yankees. Some are Irish, some German, some English and the others are something other than pure Yankee descent.

The Pirates are not thieves. You'll agree with us if you consult the base stealing records. Nor are they bold. They do not sail the seas except when they make occasional trips to Boston. Some of them have buried gold, of course, but they've earned it.

As to the Reds—well, mebbe they are a bit different. Anarchists are commonly referred to as "Reds." If you don't believe that anarchy sometimes prevails in Cincinnati, ask a National League umpire.

PRESENT AND PAST IN BASEBALL.

Old time fans will always give one an argument as to whether baseball is any faster now than it was in the palmy days of "Pop" Anson and "King" Kelly. The silver temple brigade finds it mighty hard to admit that Ty Cobb has anything on some of the stars of yesteryear and that Walter Johnson is harder to hit than Amos Rusie was before Amos tried to strike out John Barleycorn every evening after the game. But there is one point on which the veteran patrons and players concede something to the present generation. They admit that baseball manners off the field are better now than they were once.

• • • • • •

JIM THORPE A BASEBALL FAILURE.

In the matter of remolding things and persons nearer to the heart's desire, some writers contend that Lo the poor Indian is stubborn clay. The ambitious potter who would contract to remodel Mr. Lo according to his own ideas of usefulness has a tough task. Passing over many instances outside the sporting realm illustrating the point, we come to the case of John McGraw, potter extraordinary to the New York baseball club. John J. bought a promising bit of material in James Thorpe, the Fox and Sac Indian, famed the world over for his unequaled prowess on athletic and football fields. In 1912 Thorpe had just proved himself the greatest all around physical star in a test against all the best at Stockholm. John, after laying down the price of an imported six cylinder car plus a year's gasoline supply for his wonderful assemblage of co-ordinating atoms, thought that, with a master's pat here and a touch there, he could convert this splendid runner, jumper, hurdler and weight man into the greatest baseball player the world ever knew. So confident was McGraw that, in addition to the purchase price, he agreed to pay Mr. Lo J. Thorpe a princely number of bucks per annum, for six semesters, to wit, three years—time enough to make over the map of Europe or run down Villa. But it was not time enough for remaking Jim Thorpe. The figures indicate that the task is all but impossible. While improvement was shown, it was slight, not at all in proportion to the labor and money expended.

City League baseball is undoubtedly the best rebuilder any bunch of civicly inclined magnates could decide upon to revive interest in the national pastime in Plainfield but just the same we would certainly like to once more feel the tinkle of semi-pro enthusiasm in the atmosphere. Remember the days when sport lovers left the business section high and dry Saturday afternoons and ambled out to Crescent Oval? The Randolph road lot was the Mecca for the outdoor throng and the battles waged there a dozen years ago were far more spirited than any that have since been staged. Organized competition stimulates interest and the league was sadly needed here last year when it leaped into prominence. Those on the "inside" of baseball predict a country sweeping prosperity for the game this summer. Would it not be expedient at this time to take advantage of "good times," which may only be temporary, and at least attempt to put the semi-professional sport back on its feet hereabouts?

Opening day will be celebrated on the Plainfield Country Club links Saturday. All is in readiness for a hustling season on the greens and an elaborate schedule of promising contests has been arranged. That golf is to be more popular than ever this year seems reasonable to expect and the Saturday afternoon and holiday attractions at the Plainfield Country Club are especially inviting to the veteran and newcomer.

Tennis as a game has never been given its proper rating in sport annals. Anyone acquainted with athletic life will admit this and at the same time will vouch for the fact that the court game is one of the greatest exercisers, most interesting and one of the cleanest of pastimes. A court is now being laid out in the rear of the Elks' Club and other fine playing centers are located at the Country Club, Park Club, Park Golf Club, and at numerous private residences. How does the number of tennis courts compare with the number of baseball diamonds? The former exceeds the latter by a hundred-fold and yet tennis is listed as a secondary sport. Each year competition has been growing better and the tennis foothold has been growing so strong of late that the game may be counted upon to establish its prestige upon a level with the best in a few years.

CAPTAIN WALDORF GUEST OF CADILLACS

Winners of Elks' Bowling Tourney Tender Farewell Reception to Leader.

Jacob E. Waldorf, captain of the crack Cadillac bowling team which won the recent house tourney at the Elks Club, was given a testimonial lobster supper by the members of the team last night. The meal was served in the grill room of the Watchung avenue clubhouse under the supervision of Chef Erwin Y. Neighbor and proved a most appetizing repast. The supper was also in the nature of a farewell as Mr. Waldorf will leave New York Saturday morning on the Lamport & Holt line steamer "Vauban" for a business trip to South America, which will last two months and probably three.

At the conclusion of the supper Harry Blimm, presiding as toastmaster, presented Captain Waldorf with a beautiful silk umbrella as evidence of the kindly feeling held for him by the members of the team. Mr. Blimm made a concise and appropriate address in which he wished Mr. Waldorf "bon voyage" and a successful stay in the southern continent. His sentiments were echoed by the other bowlers, each of whom spoke in turn. Captain Waldorf replied in his usual happy vein and stated that if the opportunity offered itself he would tell all the people in Rio Janiero all about the Cadillac team of the Plainfield Elks and teach the native bowlers some of his men's favorite tricks.

The members of the Cadillac team beside Captain Waldorf and Mr. Blimm who were present were Charles Harkins, Fred Carpenter and Frank Emmons.

DUTCHER WILL SEEK TITLE LOST IN 1915

Former Plainfield High School Athlete Slated to Appear in Newark Meet.

Ray Dutcher, former Plainfield High School athlete, will be one of the competitors for the national club swinging championship which will be decided in the Newark Y. M. C. A. gymnasium May 13. The national champs have drawn contenders from all parts of the country and the club swinging event is one one of the may carded.

RAY W. DUTCHER,
Metropolitan Indian Club Swinging Champion, Who Will Compete in Title Event May 13.

Dutcher captured the metropolitan title when a student at New York University and also held the intercollegiate title for two years. He is an all around athlete and took part in all major sports while a student at Plainfield High School. He also gained considerable renown as a canoe paddler, having won prizes at Asbury Park and other seaside meets.

He formerly held the national crown in club swinging but was defeated while defending the title last year by Lester J. McCloud. It is a foregone conclusion that he will have to perform in good style to defeat the present champ and the particular event will be watched with keen interest.

When attending High School, Dutcher lived in Dunellen and is the son of Dr. Charles Dutcher. There will be nine events on the program for the A. A. U. championships.

THINKS BENDER WILL HELP.

Big Indian Pitcher Shows Return to Old Time Form.

Chief Bender, according to Manager Pat Moran, is going to be a lot of help to the Phillies this year.

"Bender has more stuff now than he has had for several years. He is in splendid condition, and I look for him to add a lot of strength to my team," says the Phillies' leader.

Judging by Bender's work in the early games, it seems that he has a lot of stuff, and his arm works freely and without any strain. If the Indian comes through for Moran the Phillies will be better fortified with pitchers than they have been for some time.

THERE'S ROMANCE IN BASEBALL.

Some one has said there is very little romance or sentiment left in baseball.

What about the case of Roger Peckinpaugh, captain of the revised and re-edited Yanks?

When Roger was a youngster of ten he had one hero. That hero was a ball player, and he worshiped him from afar, but with increasing devotion. When the price of a bleacher seat was not available the youngster took his place at an especially constructed knothole to follow this player in his work in the field and at bat. Roger, the youngster, used to wonder whether rare fortune would ever give him the opportunity to meet this hero of his. That he considered one of his main life ambitions.

Ten years later Roger was playing side by side with this hero of his boyhood days in the big league. For the star's name was Napoleon Lajoie.

JOE CORBETT FIRED CHASE.

This Was Back In Days When Hal Was Green Kid.

Brother Joe Corbett is probably the only boss of a ball club who ever chased Hal Chase off a diamond and told him to stay away. Corbett tells the story on himself and admits it's quite a joke.

"Back in 1898," he said, "I was coaching the Santa Clara team. Hal Chase was out with the club—a tall, skinny kid. He was working at second base and made all sorts of spectacular catches, doing most of the work one-handed. I could see now that it came naturally to him, but at the time I thought it was a case of grandstanding. I had several talks with him about using two hands instead of one, but it wasn't any use.

"Finally I told Hal that he might as well quit—that I didn't have any use for that sort of ball players. He went away, but I am glad to see that it didn't discourage him. Can you beat it?"

CANN NEW SWIMMING MARVEL.

Schoolboy Comes Close to World's Record For 100 Yards.

Teddy is a schoolboy, not quite eighteen years old, and he had been trained for the 500 yard title race, yet he covered the century in 55 4-5 seconds, or within one and four-fifth seconds of the world's indoor record, set in the same pool. At his present rate of improvement it will not take long for the lad to be bidding for international laurels.

TEDDY CANN, NEW SWIMMING MARVEL.

Credit for the amazing development of this new prodigy must be granted to Matthew Mann, the former Boston instructor, who is now coaching the Mercury Foot squad. He predicted sensational speed for Cann the first time he saw him in action, and he worked hard and ably to better his form. In a couple of months he has succeeded in making him one of America's foremost swimmers.

Pitcher Shore Puts on Weight.

Pitcher Ernie Shore of the Red Sox is fifteen pounds heavier than he was last season, and with this added weight has come more strength. Boston critics are now saying he has almost as much speed as Walter Johnson, but the modest Shore shakes his head. However, he has enough.

WILL J. FRANKLIN BAKER "BUST" HOME-RUN RECORD?

J. Franklin Baker threatens to bust all existing home run records this season. The fact that he's with the Yankees entitles him to play 77 games in the Polo Grounds. That means that he'll have about 300 chances during the season to belt the horsehide into the short right field grandstand.

The grandstand in the Polo Grounds is situated to Baker's liking. Oftentimes in the days when he was an Athletic he lammed home runs into that portion of the seating capacity. On other occasions he walloped the ball against the front of the stand for safeties.

Baker was quite a long-distance clouter in the era when he played only 11 games per season in the Brush ball yard. His slugging power probably will be enhanced by the fact that he'll have seven times as many chances this year to drive the ball in amongst the patrons of the pastime.

"HYPOCRITES"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

It is not customary for an invitation to a feast to go begging. At least it is not nowadays. So this is a very important incident. But that's just the point of it. If man in all probabilities wouldn't act this way concerning an invitation to a feast of good things down here, how very strange it is that that's just the way so many of them do act concerning the feast that God has prepared for their souls. Now you didn't know that, did you, but what's the meaning of this story?

At first thought we might be inclined to justify these men in the excuses that they gave. If I prefer looking after my real estate or enjoying my wife's company to attending an evening party I don't know whose business that is but my own. And unless these men were sick it's hard to see what more reasonable excuses they could have given than the ones they did give.

And yet we read that the Master of the house became angry at these men. And so there must have been some contempt or insult in the way they treated his invitation. If the invitation came several days before the feast as the narrative implies the invitations did, why did these men not send their regrets at once. And why did not the first two arrange for the cultivation of their lands and the proving of their oxen at some other time. And certainly the third man knew far ahead that the feast would interfere with his honeymoon, unless he was married on short notice. Anyhow, they could have cultivated their land and proven their oxen the next morning. They wouldn't run away. Besides, at supper time and after dark was no time to cultivate land and to prove oxen. The simple fact of the matter is these men did not want to go to the feast and they just used the wife and the real estate as pretext behind which to hide. They didn't want to go and they made up their minds to do as they pleased, and instead of telling the man so they lied about it and knew it.

Want to Do as You Please.

That's what's the trouble with so many of you. You've made up your minds to do as you please regardless of what is pleasing to God. You have made up your minds to keep control of your own life and so you refuse to surrender your will to God. You know that if you say "Thy will be done" it's going to cost you something and you are not willing to pay it. It will mean for you to clean up your business and cut out those tricks that are not Christian and are not on the square.

If you have God's spirit you'd rather please God than please yourself. Of course you would. The only law that half of the people recognize is the law of their own desires. They do the things they do because they want to do them and they don't care a picayune whether they are in harmony with God's law or not. The reason these people did not go to the feast because they didn't want to go, and if you are not a Christian I'll tell you why. It's because you'd rather have your own way than to have God's way.

Now after thees men. I repeat that they were not a hopelessly bad sort of men; well-to-do, respectable moralists for aught we know. And so it is every day when I inquire and some days when I don't, I hear men say: "Well, I'm not the worst man in the world; I'm as good as most of you church members. I pay my honest debts; I'm a respectable citizen; I'm a moral man in every respect and what is more, I don't make a hypocrite out of myself by pretending to be what I am not, like so many of your church members do. Did you ever hear anybody talk like that? I want to say a few words to the people like that tonight.

All Kinds of Hypocrites.

In the first place about these hypocrites that some of you seem to be stumbling over; what other people are has nothing to do with what you ought to be. Some people are always saying the church is just full of hypocrites. When I hear a man say that I always feel like saying: "Come in, there's room for one more."

A man one time said this to a certain pastor and the pastor replied: "Very well, if the church is just full of hypocrites, suppose you take my church as an example and name some of them."

And the man came back at him like a flash: "There's Deacon Rhoades; he's one."

"Very well," said the pastor. "Now, name another."

"Well, well, well—well, well—he's a big one."

"Very well," said the pastor, "name another one."

"Well, well, well—well, if I was as big a hypocrite as Deacon Rhoades I would get out of the church.

"Very well," said the pastor, "you name another one."

And the old fraud hemmed and hawed and had to give it up.

That's just the way it usually ends. When the devil tries to show you the best he can do, he will get the best man or woman morally that he can find and say: "That's mine." But when he wants to show you some special products of religion he will hunt up the most miserable good-for-nothing hypocrite he can find and say: "That's a specimen of Christianity." And that's what you do. You will go into the church and look around and pick out the smallest and the poorest and the weakest-kneed specimen of Christianity that you possibly can find—some white-livered rascal who is using the church as a cover for his own name, and you'll hold it up to ridicule and say: "Aha, if that's Christianity, I don't want any of that." It's not the hypocrite that's worrying you, you just want something to hide behind. I always did say that a hypocrite is about the littlest thing the devil ever made, and if you can hide behind one you must be mighty small yourself.

Some bugologist would do a good thing for science if he'd get you and pickle you in a bottle of alcohol and put you on a shelf in some museum as a specimen of minutiae.

Don't Quit Your Lodge.

You don't turn the lodge down, do you, because there are some blacklegs in it. There isn't a lodge in the world but has some members who do not live up to their obligations. Then why don't you treat the church like you treat the lodge. Most of the lodges have some pretty high principles and you know very well that some of them have some pretty mean, trifling members. But you don't get out of your lodge or refuse to join a lodge because some fellow in it is a fraud.

I was holding a meeting in one of the biggest Kansas towns some time ago, and there was a splendid fellow there who was also using hypocrites as an excuse for not coming into the church. He was a man of great influence, he was the leader of the band, the manager of the baseball team and very popular with the young men and could have wielded a mighty influence for God. He was the proprietor of a first-class restaurant and bakery shop. It was the best eating place in the town and I took my meals in his establishment. We became friendly and he would often sit down and eat with me. One day while I was sitting at the table he came in with a great flurry and, wiping the sweat off his brow, said, "I've had an awful time," and I said, "What's up?" He replied that a man had come into his hotel and gotten credit and after running his bill up to $145, had skipped. "Well," I said, "that's tough; but why in the world did you ever allow a man to get into you for $145 before you stopped him?"

"Well," he said, "you see he was an Elk." This man of whom I am talking was also a prominent Elk and wore an Elk head on his coat. "He asked for the accommodation, and, of course, as a brother Elk, I let him have as much as he wanted. And after getting into me to the tune of $145, he skiddoed. But I've got him and I've got him jugged. The police caught up with him in the next town and what I will do to him is aplenty."

I said: "Well, that's too bad. When does the Elk lodge meet again?"

"Tomorrow night," he said.

"Well," I said. "I suppose you will send in your resignation tomorrow night?"

"Hand in my resignation!" he exclaimed; "what for?"

"Well," I said, "that man's an Elk, isn't he?"

"Well," I asked, "he doesn't represent what your lodge stands for, does he?"

"Sure he doesn't," he replied. "We don't stand for anything like that."

"He doesn't live up to the obligations of Elkdom, does he?" I asked.

"Of course he doesn't," the man said.

"He's a blackleg, isn't he?"

"Yes," he said, "and a dirty one."

"Well," I said, "he is a false member of your organization," and he answered, "Yes."

And I said: "Well, my friend, isn't he exactly what in the church we call a hypocrite?"

And he said: "Sure."

"Well, then," I said, "why don't you treat your lodge just as you have been treating the church?"

And he had to go out just then and see if his bread wasn't burning.

Now let us be logical for just a moment more.

Why not, my friends, instead of standing on the outside and pointing the finger of scorn at the poor, miserable hypocrite in the house of God, fast going down to hell, just get right with God yourself and then go to him and try to lift him up to what he ought to be. Wouldn't that be more worthy of a fair-minded soul? Why not, instead of standing on the outside, and pointing with scorn and criticism at the poor, miserable hypocrite, fast going to hell, GET RIGHT WITH GOD YOURSELF, and then go to the man and try to help him up to God!

First—They are excused. God invites you to the greatest happiness that can come to a man in this world and you say, "Excuse me." He invites you to the noblest service man can perform and you say, "Excuse me." He invites you to a happy reunion with the loved ones, whose faces faded away in the dull gloom of the grave and you say "Excuse me," and yet He has borne with you in patience and in love, but sometime God will take you at your word and say, "You're excused," and the invitation will never come again. My God, what an awful night it would be for Plainfield if all the people here who have been rejecting Christ were taken at their word and shut out forever from the mercy and pardon of God!

Second—It was their own fault. Nothing will ever shut a man outside the kingdom of God but his own free choice in the matter. If you go to hell it will be just because you would not go to heaven.

Third—It was the last invitation these men ever got. It was the last invitation. My brother, it's a sad thing that we need be reminded so often that there is a hidden boundary between God's patience and His wrath.

"Oh, where is this mysterious bourne,
By which our path is crossed;
Beyond which God Himself hath sworn
That he who goes is lost.

"How far many men go in sin
How long will God forbear;
Where does hope end, and where begin
The confines of despair?

"An answer from the sky is sent,
Ye that from God depart!
While it is called today, repent!
And harden not your hearts."

IS PLAINFIELD A CITY OF GOSSIPS?

Is Plainfield noted for its gossips? A local citizen says so and he insists that he has been a resident here for many years and ought to know.

The Rev. William E. Biederwolf, who is conducting a series of revival meetings at the Tabernacle, yesterday received a letter from a local citizen. The letter was signed by a man. Whether or not he signed his name is known only to Dr. Biederwolf, but the writer said that Plainfield had more gossips than any other city of its size in all the world. He said the women were worse here than the men, in his opinion, and he urged that the evangelist preach a sermon on gossip, following up the lines of an editorial in the Daily Press a few days ago.

"You have preached on booze, on hypocrisy, on gamblers and on all other sinners," the letter read, "and now you ought to preach on gossips. Preach on them for the rest of the week. They need it!"

Dr. Biederwolf referred to the letter in his sermon of last night, but did not read it to his congregation. He neglected to say whether or not he would preach a sermon on gossips.

The shower came up just about the time the people were leaving their homes to go to the Tabernacle for the afternoon service, and therefore the attendance was not as large as usual. Dr. Biederwolf gave an interesting talk on "The Christian and the Card Table."

Rev. Dr. L. W. Hanner, of Norristown, Pa, who was chairman of the executive committee of the evangelistic campaign held in that city by Dr. Biederwolf, led in the opening prayer last night.

The High School girls will meet with Mrs. Brake in the First Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3:15.

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong offered a few suggestions why the expenses of the Tabernacle should be cleared away. The offering was taken in one minute and twenty seconds.

The quartet sang, by request, "The Church in the Wildwood."

It was a great sight to see the delegation representing the Masonic Orders of this city and surrounding cities march into the Tabernacle preceded by members of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, and the Dutch Arms Band. The Ladies of the Eastern Star brought up the rear.

Tomorrow afternoon the evangelist will speak on "Spiritualism."

"Mac" sang "The Ninety and Nine."

Dr. Biederwolf welcomed the delegations which were represented, and stated that Plainfield turned out the largest delegation of Masons he has ever seen in his evangelistic work.

"The Wayside Cross" was sung in a very striking way. All of the lights were extinguished except the great cross above the rostrum. Mr. Heaton sang the verses as solo, and was assisted by the quartet, which was hidden under the platform as they sang the first chorus, and located by the front doors of the tabernacle as they sang the chorus for the second time.

Of course the close of the service is the most striking, and another wonderful sight was witnessed last night as scores went down the sawdust aisle and consecrated their lives to Jesus Christ. One cannot help but be inspired when he looks upon this wonderful manifestation of the Holy Spirit in Plainfield.

Banker Sends $20,000 For Relief of Soldiers' Widows.

Nice, April 27.—A check for 100,000 francs ($20,000) has been sent by James Stillman, the New York banker, to the prefect of the Alpes-Maritimes department for the relief of widows of soldiers killed in action who have three or more small children.

The Paris Liberte connects the date of Mr. Stillman's gift with the publication of the United States note to Germany, saying that the banker wishes to associate himself with the president's energetic action.

Germans Close Swiss Frontier.

London, April 27.—With the sudden closing of the Swiss frontier by the Germans and the evidence of more pronounced military operations on the Lorraine border and in the Vosges, a possible new drive by the Teuton forces on the French lines far to the southwest of Verdun is suggested.

A block of the best $1.50 seats in the theatre have been reserved for the Press party. The seats go on sale at the Daily Press office, 193 North avenue, Plainfield, Monday morning, April 24, at 11 o'clock and the policy of "first come, first served" will be strictly adhered to. A chart of the Hippodrome seating arrangements will be on exhibition in the Press office and representatives of societies and other organizations desiring blocks of seats will have to be on hand early.

Some of the feature attractions of the most spectacular show ever put on in America's greatest playhouse are the Kat Kabaret, Charlotte, the famous skater; Sousa's band, Toto, the wonderful clown; cascades at the Biltmore, Chinatown, the baggage smashers, toyland, the march of the skaters and many other wonderful novelties.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

Expressing Money in Terms of Shoes

When a man leaves this store with a purchase, he has in his possession the same value as he had when he entered our doors. The only difference is that the value is now expressed by shoes instead of dollar bills.

That is the standard of value rendered here.

There is no such thing as obtaining greater value per dollar than this store offers.

No concern in all the world can make the same grades of shoes at less cost than they are made by the manufacturers who supply us.

No store can buy at less cost than we do.

No store can give greater value per dollar than we do.

SERVICE

A New Departure In Service

In line with our constant effort to be of service to our patrons, we have adopted a plan whereby we propose to pay our customers' household bills each month, charging the total to their account and doing away with all the bothersome detail that the householder experiences in paying from ten to thirty or more bills, monthly.

Under this plan the depositor sends us one check for the total of all the bills he or she wishes to pay, and we attend to the payment of the individual bills. In this connection we also propose to purchase commutation tickets for depositors, charging the amount to the depositor's account and delivering the ticket to the depositor a day or two before the first of the month, doing away with the inconvenience that he now experiences each time it is necessary to renew his ticket.

If you have no account with us at present, we will be glad to have you open a household account, that will enable you to take advantage of this service.

If any additional information is desired, it may be obtained at the bank, or our representative will call if you prefer. We feel sure that an investigation of this new system will speedily convince you of its many advantages.

BLOODY FIGHTS ON IN DUBLIN

Rioters Still Hold Important Parts of the City.

MORE SOLDIERS SENT

They Will Show No Mercy to Rebels Irish Rebels Have Machine Guns Mounted on Tops of Buildings—Major-Gen. Maxwell in Charge.

London, April 28.—Bloody fighting is still in progress in many parts of Ireland, including Dublin, although official England can get no details because the rioters still control the telephone and telegraph wires. This is the strongest proof that the king's troops have failed to put down the rebellion and that even Dublin is practically in their control.. The Sinn Feiners are holding the post office, the city hall, the four courts and other important buildings in the heart of the Irish capital.

Major Gen. Sir John Maxwell, lately in command of the British forces in Egypt, has reached Dublin and taken command of the loyalist troops. Under martial law he is clothed with plenary powers of life and death and it is believed his orders are to put down the revolt with an iron hand.

Large forces of English, Welsh and Scotch soldiers, who were just ready to leave their training camps in England for the Flanders front, are pouring into Ireland to fight the rebels. The temper of these troops is bad and the soldiers are expected to show little mercy to rebels at this time so critical in the life of the British nation. It is conceded bloody street fighting is expected, since the rebels are believed to have barricaded themselves in houses. This fighting is believed to be already in progress.

That the rebels are armed with machine guns, which they are firing from the roofs of houses, has been admitted by Lord Landsdowne.

No action has been taken on the offer of Sir Edward Carson to send his Ulster volunteers into Dublin to quell the uprising, and it is not believed these men will be allowed to enter the stronghold of their bitterest enemies.

The latest official statement, issued by Landsdowne in the House of Commons, was to the effect that there had been uprisings in Ardee and Louth and "serious trouble" in Swords and Lusk, all close to Dublin.

ANNUAL BALL OF ALLIED TRADES' COMMITTEE TONIGHT

The proceeds from tonight's affair will go into the fund being raised for the Labor Day demonstration which promises to be bigger and better than the one given two years ago. The co-operation of all trades is urged to make both the dance and parade a success.

CITY COUNCIL WILL ELECT A FREEHOLDER

Successor to J. Hervey Doane to Be Chosen at Monday Night's Meeting.

It is expected that when the City Council meets on Monday night it will elect a successor to the late Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, who died a few days ago. The new official will fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Doane. Those who have been prominently mentioned for the place are former Mayor James F. Buckle and former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell. Former Postmaster Elias H. Bird's name is also mentioned, but he declares that he is not a candidate for the office. There is also some question as to whether he would be eligible inasmuch as he is now a member of the City Council.

Both Mr. Coriell and Mr. Buckle are said to be candidates for the office. Either one are sufficiently familiar with the duties to fill the position acceptably. Inquiry among the members of the Council shows that no one has as yet been decided upon and it is likely that a caucus will be held prior to Monday night's meeting to reach a conclusion. In the meantime other candidates may appear in the field.

The constantly increasing volume of business which the lumber company has been securing has made it increasingly difficult to handle it property upon the limited area available upon the railroad station grounds. Looking to the future, and with a pressing need at the moment for expansion, the lumber company has acquired this advantageous location for its permanent place of business.

WOMEN IN FAVOR OF PREPAREDNESS

Enthusiastic Meeting Held Here to Discuss Plans for Organizing Branch.

COMMITTEE IS NAMED

Representatives of National Special Aid Society Address Gathering at Cedarcroft— Another Meeting to be Held Soon.

With the idea of determining if enough enthusiasm existed in Plainfield to warrant the formation of a local branch of the National Special Aid Society for American Preparedness, a preliminary meeting was held this morning at the home of Mrs. E. W. Fraser, on Park avenue. The attendance was even beyond the expectations of the promoters, more than one hundred prominent women being present, and as a result permanent steps will be taken as quickly as possible. A committee composed of Mrs. C. H. Banks, chairman; Mrs. F. W. Wallace, Mrs W B Tyler, Mrs Allan Cowperthwaite, Miss Edith Smalley, Mrs J. M. Charles and Mrs. Leighton Calkins, will meet next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock to complete all arrangements for the permanent branch.

The original call for today's gathering was issued by Mrs. Fraser, who stated the proposition at the beginning of the meeting. Mrs. C. H. Banks was made temporary chairman. She intropudec the speakers, of whom there were two principals. These were Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyers, of New York, who is widely known throughout the East as an advocate of preparedness, and E. W. Duke, of New York, executive secretary of the National Special Aid Socleyt for American Preparedness. In addition to these, Mrs. Stuart H. Patterson made a report of the Red Cross work in the hospitals, and Mrs Leighton Calkins described the work of the Kenyon Gardens, an organization which has become very active in Plainfield, and which will conform, in some respects, to the ultimate plans of the National Aid Society.

Mrs. Meyers' address was on the subject of "Preparedness in Relation to the Home. She described at great length what could be done for the defence of the country if needed by the mothers and others presiding over domestic life. She mentioned the instilling of patriotism in children, the economic side of housekeeping for the conservation of table supplies, the better training of servants and many other important details. Mrs. Meyers is a very energetic and enthusiastic speaker and her remarks provoked general favorable comment. Mr. Duke devoted his speech to a full explanation of the aims and objects of the National Special Aid Society for American Preparedness. He pointed out what great help could be given by the women of the country to prepare against invasion from a foreign enemy and told how the present movement has been rapidly sweeping over the country. Branches are being organized at the rate of five or six a week and the combined membership is now well into the thousands. One of the first cities in this section to organize a branch was Summit, where the outlined work is now well under way. Mr. Duke also showed the weak side of the United States' defence, quoting facts and figures taken from military and naval reports, and then impressing on the minds of his hearers where efficiency could be first introduced to overcome the defects that are now being deplored by the country's leading men who have made the subject a study for years.

Following the meeting of the permanent organization committee next Tuesday morning, a call will be issued for another general gathering at which the charter roll will be ready for signatures.

PICTURE EXPERTS PLEASED WITH PLAINFIELD'S SCENERY

The possibilities of Plainfield's beautiful suburbs being used as a background for a number of outdoor films to be made by the S. Lubin Moving Picture Company of Philadelphia are quite excellent at the present time as a result of a visit of experts here during the past week. The party consisted of members of one family who are in the employ of the big Philadelphia concern. They are John Muldowney, Miss Margaret Muldowney, Miss Ruth A. Muldowney, Miss Bessie Muldowney and Miss Kate Muldowney. . All are cousins of Mrs. Charles Pagliucca, of Liberty street, at whose home they were entertained during their stay here. They left for Philadelphia yesterday.

The party was taken by Mr. Pagliucca to nearby places rich in naural scenery, among them Watchung, Feltville, Washington Rock and Oak Tree. John Muldowney was especially impressed with Watchung and the roads back of Scotch Plains and will probably have a number of scenes staged in these parts. All of the visitors attended the reception given by Plainfield Lodge of Moose Tuesday night and Miss Ruth Muldowney, who is an experienced singer and impersonator, rendered several acceptable solos and also imitated Charles Chaplin, Harry Launder, Chauncey Olcott and other notable stars.

TWO IMPRESSIVE MEETINGS ARE HELD AT TABERNACLE IN HONOR OF THE MOTHERS OF PLAINFIELD

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY LAST NIGHT GAVE THEIR HEART TO THEIR MOTHER'S GOD AND PLEDGED A CHRISTIAN LIFE.

ATTENDANCE WAS 8,500; COLLECTION $183.63

Afternoon Service Most Beautiful of Campaign—Dr. Biederwolf Answered Followers of "Pastor" Russell Last Night Calling One Circular a "Lie, Pure and Simple."

"Until some old wind-jamming, hot-air merchant of an infidel can trot out something else that will drag a drunkard from his cup, woo the gambler from his game, make the libertine pure and the thief an honest man, I shall continue to nail my hopes on the Cross of Jesus Christ, where my mother nailed hers," declared the Rev. William E. Biederwolf in his sermon on "Atonement" at the Tabernacle last night, and when he ended 160 men and women came forward to declare for the same life and the same religion.

Included in those who walked down the sawdust aisle were more than forty men employed at the plant of the International Motor Company. They came in a delegation of about 100, and almost half of them answered Dr. Biederwolf's appeal for a Christian life. The attendance at the evening service was 5,000.

One of the most beautiful and impressive of all the services was that of yesterday afternoon. It was "Mothers' Day," and almost a hundred of the aged and careworn mothers of Plainfield and North Plainfield occupied seats of honor immediately in front of a stage that bore a load of beautiful blossoms as heavy as the years they carried.

The oldest "Mother" there was Mrs. S. F. Batchelor, of West Seventh street.

She was ninety-two. She stood up before the audience of 1,500 and received a handsome bouquet of flowers from Mrs. Brake, while Dr. Biederwolf and the audience prayed "that the pathway of her life through the years that remain should be strewn with roses and lilies of God's love and God's mercy.

A feature of the service was the request musical program, when the mothers called for old songs, songs that they had not heard in years. Dr Biederwolf made it clear that no song would be sung unless it was really old, and the person making this request had to have gray hairs. Many of the mothers called for songs that no one else could lead, so they bravely stood up before the congregation, and in voices that thrilled either with the excitement or with memories of church services back in the yesteryears of youth, they carried the tune through one verse. One selected a song that no one knew but her, but she did not falter as she sang her solo. Many of the songs asked for were known to a majority of the older persons in the audience, and the Pine Tabernacle rang with melodies never heard there before and that will never be heard there again.

Appropriate songs by the National Male Quartet and by Mr. McEwan were pleasing features of the services.

Mother's Influence for Good.

In his short talk on mothers, Dr. Biederwolf told of the debts that all children owed her, a debt of memory and service and kindness which can never be repaid even by a life of devotion and care; but he also told the mothers of a debt that they owed their children. This is a debt of prenatal influence, of training in Christian life and of a Christian example. He said that a father's failure might be forgotten, but that one of a mother would be carried in the brain of a son or daughter through all the time that they have in this world and possibly into the eternity of the future.

Dr. Biederwolf made a plea for the Family Altar League. He asked that every mother and father in the audience sign a pledge to put a family altar in the home around which there should assemble the father,

HACKMAN'S LICENSE IS REVOKED FOR 2 WEEKS

James Tate, a hackman, must wait two weeks before he works again. This morning in police court he was arraigned on a charge of driving his automobile without lights. Judge De Meza has had several drivers before him on this charge recently, and has determined to bring about a more general respect for the law, so he revoked Tate's license for two weeks.

SEND FLOWERS TO THE SICK IN PLAINFIELD

More than 175 bouquets were sent to the shut-in and the sick of Plainfield this morning from the Tabernacle. The flowers used were those on the platform of the Tabernacle at the mother's meeting of yesterday afternoon. The Biederwolf party held a drawing room meeting at the home of Mrs. Frederick W. Yates, on Watchung avenue, this morning.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT OF MISS ANNETTE M. VANMATER

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. VanMater, of Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Annette Maria Van Mater, to C. S. Trewin, of Palmerton, Pa., at a delightful pink luncheon given at their home Wednesday afternoon to a few girl friends. Mr. Trewin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Trewin, of Roselle. IS PLAINFIELD A COSMOPOLITAN CITY? HERE'S PRETTY GOOD PROOF THAT IT IS

Those who have somtimes wondered whether or not Plainfield is a metropolitan city should have attended yesterday afternoon's meeting at the Tabernacle. There was an audience of at least 2,500, possibly more, and after the spirit of the service had begun to reach out from the pulpit Dr. Biederwolf said that he often wondered at the makeup of such a congregation —from whence they came and how they happened to come together in so small a place. He did not ask that any member of the audience explain how he or she happened to leave home or to come to Plainfield, but did ask that they stand up and tell their native land or native State. The result was surprising.

The first to respond was a woman, and she came from Glascow, Scotland, she said. With a whoop of welcome, "Mac," who sings solos and directs the big chorus choir at the Biederwolf meetings in a brogue like that of Harry Lauder, made it two from Glascow, and from other parts of the house the name was echoed, until the first lady found that six more beside herself were from that city. There were fifteen different countries represented as follows: Scotland, Canada, Wales, England, Switzerland, France, Australia, Germany, Turkey, India, Ireland, Sweden, Denmark, South Indes, Chili, Norway, Nova Scotia, Russia.

The States represented were Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, New York, Kentucky, Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, Indiana, Vermont, North Carolina, Illinois, Massachusetts, Kansas, Connecticut, California, Rhode Island, Maine, Delaware, Missouri, Montana and Tennessee.

HIPPODROME TO PRESENT NEW FEATURES AT DAILY PRESS SHOW

Completely Revamped Program to Be Given Next Monday Night at Big New York Playhouse, When Plainfielders Will Be Present.

Plainfielders who have seen the show at the Hippodrome this season need not hesitate to go again next Monday with the big theatre party which the Daily Press has arranged. Yesterday Charles Dillingham, the manager, announced that the "second edition" for this year will be presented for the first time on Monday night next. This means that all who go in the Daily Press party will be first nighters at a New York production, which is unusual, even for New Yorkers. Mr. Dillingham has stated that the show will be remodelled from beginning to end. Every principal in the acts, it is said, will introduce a new number, while Charlotte, the world's greatest skater, will present a new number in the ice ballet scene. Sousa and his band will change their entire repertoire and new costumes and several additional novelties will be introduced.

When the Daily Press arranged for its special trip, no intimation was given of the new program to be started next Monday night, and it was not until yesterday that this newspaper learned that it will be able to take Plainfielders to the biggest playhouse in the world to be the first spectators at a completely revamped show. Of course, all the old features which have made the performance the talk of the theatrical world will be retained, so that there will really be two shows in one.

As has been announced a number of times, the special train carrying the Plainfield Daily Press party will run from Dunellen, stopping at all stations in this city and Fanwood. It will leave New York at 11:45 returning, and will reach this city about 12:30, as it will run on express train schedule. The time table going in has been arranged for Dunellen at 5:54; Clinton avenue, 5:57; Grant

TAKE STEPS TO BUY MOTOR FIRE APPARATUS

Definite action towards replacing the present antique fire apparatus of the borough with a motor hose and chemical truck was taken last evening at the monthly meeting of the Defender Fire Company, when E. R. Smalley, Charles Wrage, T. J. Ronayne and C. T. Voorhees were appointed a committee to approach the residents of the borough for personal subscriptions. It is believed that enough money to purchase such an apparatus can easily be raised in this manner.

Additional business other than routine was the appointment of Charles Wrage and C. T. Voorhees as a committee to take up the matter of a better alarm system.

TALK ON HOW TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS ON RAILROAD

C. A. Donnelly, a trainman in the employ of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, recently read a paper on "Safety Fkst" before the Railroad Club of the Wyoming division of that system. It was described as a heart-to-heart talk on prevention of railroad accidents, and attracted immediate attention among the practical railroad men who heard it first. Several of these brought it to the attention of J. F. Maguire, general manager of the railroad, who is also the chairman of the line's general safety committee. So impressed was Mr. Maguire and other officials of the company with the soundness of the doctrine laid down by Mr. Donnelly that the paper has been printed in pamphlet form.

"It contains so many valuable suggestions in line with the safety first movement," says Mr. Maguire in a preface, "that the general safety committee considered it advisable to have it printed and distributed to our employes in connection with our safety first movement."

Steps have been taken to have the pamphlet put in the hands of every English-speaking employe of the railroad, and translations will be made for the benefit of other employes who are not able to read English.

WILL PRESENT NEW FEATURES

avenue, 6:00; Plainfield, 6:04; Netherwood, 6:08; Fanwood, 6:11. The fare, including railroad and best $1.50 seat in the Hippodrome, will be $1.75 from Plainfield and $1.80 from Dunellen.

There are still a number of excellent seats available for this performance at the Daily Press office, and these can be procured until 6 o'clock tonight, or tomorrow afternoon and evening. A few tickets will be held for late arrivals on Monday, and the Press will try to take care of those who come up to the time the train leaves, but cannot guarantee this.

If imitation is the most sincerest form of flattery, then it follows that John Philip Sousa should be the vainest man in the country, for no one has been more imitated than the "March King." In fact, there is hardly a country or a town, great or little, that has escaped a Sousa imitation, for it has been one of the greatest assets of vaudeville performers for twenty years.

Recently at the Hippodrome, the jubilee programme was made merry when fourteen of America's most popular composers marched out on the stage while Sousa's band played "The Bride-Elect," and, grouping around the March King, imitated his characteristic style of conducting. Among his confreres who paid him this compliment were Leslie Stuart, Irving Berlin, Raymond Hubbell, A. Baldwin Sloane, Alfred Robyn, Silvio Hein, Jerome D. Kern, Rudolph Friml, Victor Jacobi, Gustav Kerker, John Golden, Louis Hirsch, Hugo Felix and R. H. Burnside.

As the world knows, Sousa is one of the most graceful and original of conductors. His characteristic gestures seem to sketch the composition he is conducting: he paints with the movements of his baton the swaying waltz or the stirring march. The up-and-down, pump-handle gesture with which he marks the rhythm of a Sousa march is as characteristic and as famous as the clicking of the Rooseveltian teeth. But the important feature of the Sousa gestures is the fact that they are perfectly natural and unstudied. They just happen, and Sousa could no more help conducting in this fashion than he could avoid writing a resounding march when the spirit moves him to composition.

The first public imitation of the Sousa conducting was given by Walter Jones, in the Lederer revue, "In Gay New York," at the Casino. Jones had been playing in revivals of the old Rice shows at Manhattan Beach where Sousa gave daily concerts in the theatre that was "swept by ocean breezes." Jones was a great admirer of the bandmaster and attended these concerts regularly, and his active sense of humor urged him to attempt to reproduce the Sousa gestures for the amusement of his friends. Shortly after "In Gay New York" had started its successful career at the Casino, a newspaper man suggested to Walter Jones that he introduce his Sousa imitation in the play some night. Jones fell in with the idea, had a wig made and borrowed a bandman's coat for the occasion. It was kept a secret from everyone, except the orchestra, which, of course, had to be rehearsed. Sousa had been invited to the performance, but was kept in ignorance of the surprise to follow. Just before the second act, Jones came on the stage completely made up as the bandmaster, with pointed beard, curled mustaches and eye-glasses.

Sousa, in his box, gasped with amazement, and the audience roared approval as the actor climbed down into the orchestra pit, took up the baton and led the orchestra through the mazes of "The Washington Post" march. Enthusiastic applause and laughter proclaimed a merited hit, and as Sousa beamed good nature at the success joke, George Lederer hurried back on the stage and told Jones to keep the Sousa imitation in the show. This was the beginning of the world-wide craze for Sousa imitations. The great Lafayette, the vaudeville artist who was burned to death a few years ago in Edinburgh, was the next Sousa imitator. His was a most laughable caricature of Sousa's mannerisms, while Jones' had an absolute impersonation of the bandmaster in action.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves material, which, if not completely behind a certain amount of incombusible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water, with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember, inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowl pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

CHAMPLIN L. RILEY CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Public Recreation Committee Completes Business of Its Annual Session.

The election of officers of the Public Recreation Committee took place at a postponed meeting held in the Public Library parlors last night. The election resulted as follows: Chairman, Champlain L. Riley; vice-chairmen, H. C. White and A. B. Jones; secretary, W. H. P. Veysey; treasurer, William N. Sandford. The last two named were re-elected. Clifford Braider and Charles S. Sminck were elected to membership in the committee. This addition to the committee is considered especially good, inasmuch as both men will render valuable aid to the work of the organization. Mr. Braider has conducted the music work at the Netherwood fresh air home and has drilled the chorus for the Biederwolf campaign. He is keenly interested in social welfare work and lends much of his time to various local enterprises. Councilman Sminck is also actively interested in anything that tends for the betterment of the city, and his appointment will in all probability be of immense value in new suggestions.

During the meeting a rising vote of thanks was given the retiring chairman, H. C. White. During the past year many new features have been added to the activities of the committee, and Mr. White has spent much of his spare time in following each line of endeavor. He spoke to the members later and told them of the New Jersey Day proclamation which the governor has issued for May 12, and urged the local committee to take part in the exercises. Mr. Sminck is a member of the State Board of Conservation and Development, and is much interested in the work.

Mrs. T. C. Vail, the treasurer of the West End Community Center, read a concise and interesting report of the financial status of that organization. It was reported to be in a flourishing condition and entirely self-supporting. At the conclusion of the meeting it was announced that all meetings in the future would be held the second Thursday of each month.

SALE FOR THE BENEFIT OF BONNIE BURN SANITORIUM

There will be another sale of handmade baskets tomorrow to be held at the store of Smith Brothers on West Front street. At a similar sale held in Stanley's store on Good Friday $50 was netted to be added to the workshop fund of Bonnie Burn. The baskets are made by the convalescent patients at the sanatorium. Orders are not taken there because of the fact that perhaps one day there will be ninety present at work, while on another day but twelve will be working. The willow used in the making of these baskets costs ninety cents a pound, which explains the higher prices assessed for them. Ordinarily baskets purchased will contain willow costing fifteen cents a pound. The public is urged to patronize the sale and increase the fund, as well as set an incentive to the workers at the sanatorium, who take a keen interest in the work. It has been said by medical men that beside fresh air, occupation is beneficial to the inmate.

CALL WOMAN NUISANCE IN PETITION TO JUDGE

Ella Hedgeman, colored, was so afraid her neighbors would kill her that she bought a pistol to protect herself, but the neighbors who live in her block on West Fourth street had nothing against her, they said, and insisted that she bothered them. To prove their claim they presented the following petition to Judge De Meza this morning:

"Honorable Dear Judge: This woman is a nuisance and we do declare her to be a nuisance.

"Sam Scruggs, Bertha Scruggs, Edward Perkins, Ella Perkins, et al."

Judge De Meza persuaded the woman to move out of the neighborhood, and she promised to do this at once.

PEEPING TOM DEVELOPS IN POLICE COURT CASE

Isaac Storcht, charged with disorderly conduct, turned out to be a "Peeping Tom" for Plainfield, when tried this morning in police court. A young lady appeared against him and told of his watching her undress through the keyhole. Judge De Meza put him on probation for a year.

LONG DRIVE OVER WATER ON PARK GOLF CLUB LINKS

The new second hole at the Park Club will cause an unprecedented demand for "floaters," as it will require a drive of nearly 150 yards over a pond in order to land safely on terra firma. The chagrin of driving into the water will be somewhat of a relief, if it is possible to recover the ball. The "Glory Dimple" is one of the few balls that does not sink. A couple of them in the bottom of your bag may come in handy some time.

The formal season of the Plainfield Country Club will open Saturday, and the full restaurant service will also be put into effect. Despite the unfavorable weather conditions the course is in the best of condition and a very successful opening is expected.

PROPAGANDA PLAN SHARPLY SCORED

Senator Denounces Effort to Sway Congress.

Washington, April 28.—Senator Husting of Wisconsin, a Democrat, in a speech in the senate unfolded what he conceived to be a pro-German propaganda behind the sending to the senate of thousands of telegrams urging that the country be kept out of war with Germany and generally expressing sympathy with the German side of the U-boat controversy.

Senator Husting fixed the responsibility for the propaganda upon the "American embargo conference" in Chicago. He exhibited a letter sent out by the conference urging that the telegrams be sent and directing that bills for the expense be forwarded to the organization in Chicago and that they would be paid. The letterhead of the conference introduced by Senator Husting gave the following as the officers:

Colonel Jasper Tucker Darling, president and chairman of the executive committee; W. R. McDonald, general manager; J. H. Forrest, secretary; C. H. Palmer Lundquist, assistant secretary, and William D. Falk, treasurer.

McDonald and Forrest are newspaper men who formerly worked in Washington. Senator Husting was severe on the organization, which he said was working in a way calculated to embarrass the president in the international negotiations.

The senator charged that Wolf von Igel was back of the propaganda and that Von Igel's private papers now in the custody of the government would prove that he was inspiring or aiding the propaganda.

BOLT ON PHILIPPINES.

Thirty-five Democrats Against Plans For Independence.

Washington, April 28.—Thirty-five revolting Democrats, led by members of the Tammany delegation, in the majority caucus of the house put a quietus upon the administration's plan for turning over the Philippine Islands within four years.

The recalcitrants, with the almost solid minority arrayed against the pending bill, will constitute an ample majority to defeat the independence measure. It was predicted that at least ten more Democrats, who were not present at the caucus, would join the revolt. Twenty-eight of the thirty-five served notice upon their party colleagues that they would not observe the caucus decree.

ANOTHER COUNTY PUTS PRISONERS TO WORK.

So far as is publicly known the Freeholders have as yet done nothing about providing employment for the prisoners in the county jail. There seems to be some deep rooted aversion on their part to finding some method of putting these men at work, and the example set in other counties means nothing to them. The Board which most recently has developed this humanitarian method of caring for its unfortunates is that in Morris. There the prisoners are to be employed first in helping to build a workhouse, put in and till crops on the county farm, and in ditching for laying water pipes. It is said that the confirmed offenders, who welcome the opportunity of spending the winter in jail at the expense of the county, are already looking for work where they will not be confined, or are leaving the county.

For many years Mercer county, in which Trenton is located, has tried the experiment of working its prisoners. A farm and quarry was purchased, and at first it was a drain on the taxpayers, but of late years it is said to have paid. Crushed stone is furnished to the city of Trenton, and the farm produce is sold.

Aside from Mercer county Hudson, Essex, Morris and Sussex are the only ones which now employ their prisoners, and the State has established a prison farm in Cumberland county. State prisoners are also employed in three or four places building roads.

The Trenton Times, which has always been a staunch advocate of the employment of these men, is right when it says that less attention has been given to the problem of economical care of prisoners than the subject deserves. This was no doubt due to the fact that politics have played too great a part in county government, and because in some of the smaller counties the maintenance of a farm or workhouse would have increased the cost of caring for the convicts.

Now that the smaller Board of Freeholders system has been so generally adopted and is becoming more popular, some of the other counties are likely to resort to the plan which Mercer has found to be so satisfactory and which will prove to be beneficial to the prisoners also. At the present high prices for labor every able-bodied man ought to be able to more than earn his keep, even when the expense of hiring guards is taken into the calculation.

SHOULD ACCEPT MARJORIE'S FUND.

Contributions of dimes for Marjorie Sterrett's battleship fund have now reached a grand total of over $20,000 from children all over the United States. And not a day passes that a group of youngsters do not call at the Daily Press office and leave ten cents for the fund, departing with one of the attractive buttons which are furnished to contributors. Naturally no one can expect that these future citizens, by the ten cent contributions, can raise enough to buy a battleship costing several millions, but they are doing a great work to promote the preparedness propaganda all over the United States.

The Secretary of the Navy has declared that there is no power vested in him to accept this money for the purpose, and Congressman William S. Bennett, of New York, has taken it upon himself to see that a proper law is enacted. He has introduced into the House of Representatives a resolution which directs Secretary Daniels to receive the money, and this will probably be reported out of the naval committee within a very few days. Surely Congress can do no more fitting thing than to pass this resolution, thus recognizing the splendid work by the boys and girls of the country who are getting their first real lesson in patriotism through the interest they are taking in the battleship fund. One hundred and fifty newspapers through the country from coast to coast are accepting the contributions, and more are being added to the list each day, so that the movement is a national one in every way.

Incidentally, of the half dozen cities in New Jersey where funds are being raised, Plainfield leads the list, over $160 having been collected here for the cause.

PRACTICAL PREPAREDNESS.

Under orders from Washington, mechanics of the Brooklyn navy yard are rushing work on the battleships so that they will be able to leave on May 20. Advancing the date for the departure of the battleship division has stirred the navy yard. The men were unable to learn the reason for the change in orders, because of the close watch kept on the reservation since the visit of Assistant Secretary Roosevelt nearly a week ago. The Wyoming was to have stayed at the yard for repairs until the middle of June. Many repairs will have to wait because of the orders of Secretary Daniels. The New York is in dry dock with her cracked cylinder removed and workmen are making preparations to install a new one. The work will take about ten days. The repair work on other parts of the hull and machinery is to be temporarily abandoned. The Arkansas already has new twelve-inch guns in place of the two cracked ones with which she came north, and is ready to leave the yard. The Texas, scheduled for at least fifty working days of repairs, has had considerable time cut off her schedule. The new battleship Nevada is ready for immediate departure. There is little work to be done on the destroyers.—Paterson Call.

Congressman Capstick appears to have kicked into a hornet's nest with his vote on the McLemore resolution. For a while it appeared that the voters, many of whose memories are short had forgotten about the vote, but attention has again been focussed on the matter by the action of the German societies in Elizabeth in sending a resolution to Washington commending Mr. Capstick for what he has done. If some of the prominent Republicans who are criticising him for his action remain in the same humor at election time, we suspect that the representative from this district will have a rough time of it if he runs for re-election.

Have you secured your tickets for the Hippodrome party yet? There are still some good seats left at the Daily Press office for next Monday night's performance. The mere fact that many people have seen the show should not deter them from going again, as the performance is to be entirely re-drawn beginning with Monday night.

The late spring has one consolation. All the farmers agree that it means splendid crops, which may reduce the high cost of living a little later.

If "April showers bring May flowers" is literally true, next month will break all records for blossoms.

And still there are no prospects for a "clean-up week" in Plainfield. Surely one is needed.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

A Spring Symphony.

My neighbor has a daughter who Takes singing lessons, as girls do.
She practices the morning long;
Six weeks she's sung the same old song.

My neighbor has a raft of boys,
Who make a most astounding noise.
They play baseball, and "one old cat."
For racket there's some class to that.

My neighbor has three charming maids,
And you should hear the serenades
The young men sing beneath their bower;
It doesn't matter at what hour.

A pianola, too, has he.
He hits it up in greatest glee.
He starts to playing it at eight;
'Till midnight he keeps up his gait.

My neighbor has a kid that yells
From midnight on in frequent spells.
He keeps on yelling until dawn;
Then dad gets up and mows the lawn

Performance is continuous,
But still, the neighbor next to us
Is one of many on the pike,
For neighbors are most all alike.

A new excuse

Plainfield Theatre.

"The Juvenile Follies," the kid act which topped the new bill at the Plainfield theatre yesterday, registered a big hit with the audiences afternoon and night. Twelve youngsters are in the cast and they hand out a clever bunch of comedy, hits, songs and dances. Helen Hilder, the boxing girl with the sketch, "Fighting it Out," is another act that went big. Miss Hilder, who has a reputation of being the only female boxer who knocked out a male opponent, gave an exhibition of mitt work that brought down the house. Russell's Dancing Models and Lloyd Castamo and Sullivan, singers and dancers; Cathorne & Co., exponents of up-todate comedy, and Adelaide Robertson, character songs and sketches, completed the vaudeville program.

Lovers of photoplays will have the succeeding episode of "The Strange Case of Mary Page," together with several one and two reel Pathe films for their delectation tonight. Tomorrow's screen portion of the program will include a Pathe semi-weekly and a big feature production just released.

Owing to the theatre being engaged the first half of next week for the Plainfield Elks' production of "The Mystic Rose" the usual amateur performance held on Wednesday night will be changed over to Friday. Keep the date in mind if you want to have a big laugh.

--Astor Theatre--

If there is an impression that Pauline Frederick's interpretation of the great villaness in "Zaza" and "Bella Donna," the Famous Players Film Company's production in which she scored such personal triumphs, represent her only type of screen characterization, it will be dispelled when this company's Paramount picture, "Lydia Gilmore," will be seen at the Astor Theatre Friday and Saturday. In this adaptation of the powerful dramatic success by Henry Arthur Jones, Miss Frederick plays an entirely different type of woman—the loyal mother who goes through the mental tortures of the damned to save the name of her little boy from disgrace at the hands of his father. It is a tremendous role with compelling forcefulness in its every moment. Mrs. Gilmore is a sensitive, high strung woman who is passionately devoted to her little son, Ned. The gradual cooling of her husband's affection has slowly alienated Mrs. Gilmore's love for him, and in this pent-up emotion has been poured out in her adoration of the boy. When the infidelity of her husband and his cowardly murder become known to her, Mrs. Gilmore, instead of giving way to her natural feelings of revenge and hatred for the man, is overwhelmed by the one great desire to shield the name of her son from disgarce. So, for the sake of little Ned the mother perjures herself on the witness stand and wracks herself into total exhaustion while fighting to keep the name of Gilmore clean. Everyone who saw Pauline Frederick on the stage in "Innocent" or "Joseph and his Brethren," or on the screen in "The Eternal City," "Zaza" or "Bella Donna," will realize that she is ideally suited to the exacting requirements of this great role. As the star is appearing under the direction of Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford, who have directed all her motion picture performances, the same high standard which was set in these former productions is certain to be maintained. Always a high class performance at the Astor Theatre; we cater to the children as well as the adults, and show nothing but star attractions, first run Paramount, Bluebird and other Broadway features. Our house is well lighted by our new lighting system whereby every seat in the house is visible. Our motto—"Quality not Quantity." We give Travelstamps.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

While it may be true that the saloonkeeper who can find no law of this State forbidding a man to bring his five-year-old boy with him to watch his descent along the slippery path, it is equally true that he will be unable to find any law which compels him to allow the boy to remain in his saoon or to furnish liquor to the father while he has the boy with him. And he should bear in mind that while the Council may not have the power to revoke his license, it will have power next January to refuse him a renewal, for the matter of granting a license is entirely within the arbitrary control of the Council, and it may refuse, for any reason which to it may seem fit, and cannot be held accountable for its refusal Could not the present Council adopt a resolution condemning the presence of children in saloons, and setting forth that the allowance of such a practice ought to militate against a renewal of the license of an offending saloonkeeper? While such a resolution would not have any legal effect, its moral effect would be tremendous.

While on this subject I wish to say that it is hardly fair for Mr. Depew or Mr. Biederwolf to assume that the Plainfield Council grants licenses because of the item of revenue, and that the residents of our city are selling their souls to the demon drink for the paltry forty cents per capita which Mr. Depew figures out. I have been a resident of Plainfield for over forty years, and my recollection is that prohibition did not prohibit It is possible that our present energetic Mayor might enforce a policy of no saloons. I should be glad to see it done. The policy which has been in vogue for several years is one which aims at control and not at revenue. If a prohibition policy should be adopted next year as a result of the present agitation, the responsibility of those whose votes make such a course possible will not end at election. — it will rather commence. The police alone will not be able to cope with the situation, but all who believe in prohibition will have to organize so as to bring it about, for "blind tigers" will have to be sought out and closed, and those running them prosecuted and convicted. If we are to have prohibition we must pay the price. I am ready to do my part.

EDWARD C. PEARSON.

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

Nobody is much good who has not in him some idea, some ideal, which he cares for more than he does for life.

And, we Americans, all of us, regardless of creed, color, extraction or past allegiances, hold one thing dearer than all else in life, yes, dearer than even life itself—LIBERTY—man's birthright and his unalienable right to the proper pursuit of happiness.

The principles that Washington fought for, that Lincoln suffered a martyr's death to perpetuate, are a vital part of our lives today, and we owe it to our children and our children's children to combat and hold them sacred—to perpetuate them for their enjoyment.

Our forefathers died to make us free.

Are we prepared to fight for and defend that precious heritage for posterity's sake?

We who so lustily sing of the "land of the free and the home of the brave" who have enjoyed liberty for so long that our appreciation of it has been blunted—face a situation pregnant with evil possibilities.

We have seen other nations—as peaceful, God-fearing and liberty-loving as ourselves, trampled under foot, despoiled and degraded—ruined beyond repair—because in their uninterrupted enjoyment of liberty and peace they had not taken the precaution to prepare and defend their right to enjoy these privileges.

We Americans must be awakened to the full significance of these events and as we ponder over the lessons to be drawn from the terrible tragedy in Europe, we must all be made to see the handwriting on the wall—very plainly the message reads "Awake—and Prepare America."

Major General Leonard A. Wood will interpret for us this lesson tomorrow evening at the Plainfield High School.

Let us all turn out to bid him welcome—we are with him heart, soul and hand, yes and pocket too, in the great work he is doing to help this country awake to a realization of its weakness.

Welcome, General—Plainfield is for preparedness, first, last and all the time.

SAMUEL ROTHBERG.

- Proctor's Theatre -

THEDA BARA IN "CARMEN," AT PROCTOR'S TOMORROW.

The program of photoplay productions furnished to the patrons of Proctor's local theatre today is a pretentions one, and includes such stars as Theda Bara in "Destruction," Hazel Dawn in "The Masqueraders," and Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby in the latest chapter of "The Social Pirates." "Destruction" is a typical Fox production and with so able a star as Miss Bara in the leading role, the result can lead to but one conclusion—a perfect story, perfectly presented. "The Masqueraders," by Henry Arthur Jones, already long famous on the speaking stage, is here picturized with most of its original dramatic power retained, plus a gain in the telling of the story by the presentation of numerous scenes that, of course, could not be shown in the stage version. Beautiful Hazel Dawn is at her best in this production, and is ably supported by a typical Paramount cast of talented screen artists. "The Social Pirates" series is becoming more popular each week, and the episode presented today is said to be the most interesting yet released. Tomorrow, Theda Bara appears in what is conceded to be her greatest picture, "Carmen." Picturegoers will be delighted with the full play given Theda Bara's personality in this feature, for never has her strange charm been seen to better advantage than in her interpretation of "Carmen." In addition, tomorrow, Edmund Breese, the popular Metro star, will be seen in a fitting vehicle entitled, "The Lure of Heart's Desire," and Harry Watson as "Musty Suffer" and Mutt and Jeff will cavort about in excruciatingly funny comedy creations, to the delight and amusement of all present. On Monday, Geraldine Farrar will appear in "Carmen" as produced by the Paramount Company, and patrons will thus have a chance to compare the merits of these two extraordinary productions. A novel feature will be the presentation of the big local movie play throughout the entire week, starting Monday. This picture is now being produced right here in town and the cast will be entirely composed of local people. This is a treat indeed, and one that you cannot afford to let slip by. In the very near future, Charlie Chaplin will appear at Proctor's in his latest comedy creation—a burlesque on "Carmen," which will be presented in four massive parts.

Summer SALE of WHITE (Original)

Opens Tomorrow, Saturday, With a Day of Courtesy

Several Hundred Thousand Garments Will Be On Sale

Crossing the Atlantic on the homeward way, the ship's clock is set forward a certain amount of time each day to give the passengers the extra day gained by coming westward.

This year the White Sale clock is put forward a day that our Saturday visitors, who may not be able to come Monday, also may be able to share in the good things to be gained on the opening day.

NEW, SPECIALLY PRICED UNDERCLOTHES FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS, BLOUSES, NEGLIGEES, PETTICOATS, SMOCKS, APRONS, HOUSE DRESSES, CLOTHES FOR LITTLE CHILDREN, CORSETS, BRASSIERES AND HOUSEHOLD LINENS —THESE ARE THE 1916 WHITE SALE.

It is the Fifty-ninth Sale of White offered by the Wanamaker Store—and it was this house of business that originated the White Sale in America.

It offers fine things at once-in-six-months' prices. Things woven properly, cut well and made carefully. Sizes that fit. Fashions new and interestingly original.

Prices are low. In the face of conditions they are amazingly low. Everything in the make-up of the sale has advanced in price. Cotton materials are high, laces and embroideries are scarce and high, sewing thread is expensive, even pins, paper, boxes and cord for the packages, are up.

Close co-operation with our regular makers has enabled us to avoid most of the difficulties. White Sale supplies were ordered nearly a year ago in many cases. Fashions are of the latest hour because the materials have only lately been made up. Everything is new.

UNDERCLOTHES ARE WIDE AND GROWING WIDER. NEW BLOUSES ARE SIMPLE AND FRILLS ARE NOT FORGOTTEN. NEGLIGEES ARE PRACTICAL AS WELL AS PRETTY. PETTICOATS HAVE THE WHOLE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE SILHOUETTE.

The entire Third floor, the Main Aisle, Main floor, and the Linen Store on the First floor, will be great snowy caverns of the White Sale.

White Sale Underclothes

They introduce the wide bouffant silhouette of the Paris mode.

They are of soft, fine materials—rose, mauve, maize, blue and white batiste, checked nainsook, striped flaxon, plaid voile.

Many garments are exclusive copies of new lingerie styles recently imported by us from exclusive Paris designers

Philippine hand made cluny, point de Paris, novelty Valenciennes and novelty filet, are some of the laces used.

Sturdy hand-loom embroideries and copies of the beautiful Madeira work, are employed.

Nightgowns, 85c to $25.
Envelope chemises, 85c to $18.
Corset covers, 45c to $3.75.
Combinations, $1 to $7.50.
Chemises, 50c to $4.50.
Sports petticoats, $1 to $3.
Dress Petticoats, $1 to $35.
Drawers, 50c to $5.

Paris Lingerie and Blouses

Within the last two weeks five huge cases have come from Paris, containing hand made blouses and hand made lingerie.

Brides ordering their trousseaux will wish to take quick advantage of these white things which have come so far.

Negligees, Smocks, Petticoats, House Dresses and Aprons

Dressing sacques of washable materials are attractive, at 50c to $3.

Kimonos of dotted Swiss, and there are others of different materials, $1 to $16.50.

Petticoats of washable silk start at $2.85. Colored petticoats of messaline or taffeta, $2.85 and $3.85. White sateen petticoats are $1 to $2.50.

Smocks of colored cotton, $1.85; of silk pongee, $6.50; middies, $1 to $3.85.

Aprons for all the maids in the house at all times, 25c upward.

Extra-Size Underclothes

The Shop of Extra Sizes will offer pretty as well as merely practical new garments. In addition all garments now on the shelves in incomplete size-range have been marked considerably less.

From the Philippines and Japan

The Far East has quite an important part in this Sale. The Philippine lingerie is lovely. Its hand embroidery designs often copy the French but they usually introduce at the same time a motif of their favorite drawn work.

The garments are cut over our own patterns and are generally made by hand. Prices are moderate—a nightgown at $2.50, a combination at $3, and so on.

Japanese lingerie is of silk hand embroidered—the gowns, $3 to $5.75; corset covers, $3.50 and $4.50; envelope chemises, $3.75.

White Sale Blouses Two Important Purchases

Dress Blouses at $6.75

500 fresh from the workrooms. Mostly copies of Paris models. Exquisitely fashioned of crepe Georgette, washable satin, chiffon, laces, tulle, foulard. Because the maker used up his remaining materials in them, these blouses equal our standard $8.50 to $16.50 qualities.

Waists at $1.50

600 crepe de chine, Georgette crepe and lace; $5 and $5.75 grades.

Lingerie, be-frilled and simple models in styles confined to this Store.

Batiste, voile, dotted Swiss, silk, linen.

They are the manufacturer's surplus this season—the waists made up in excess of his orders. All fresh. Majority in several sizes.

Third floor, Old Building.

A Shower of Gold Fell Upon Her.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Girl Who Lost Her Spindle Gets Homesick.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"IF I knew any children who would like to hear a story I could tell one," said daddy after supper. Jack and Evelyn clapped their hands.

"There was once a girl who dropped her spindle in a deep well. Her mother scolded her and said she must go after it. But when the girl jumped into the well she came out in a beautiful meadow where lived an old woman by the name of Mother Holle. The girl worked for her, and every day when she made the bed she shook the feathers so hard that they fell to earth like snowflakes. Mother Holle was good to the girl, and each day she had all the baked potatoes and boiled meat she wanted.

"But after awhile she began to grow unhappy living with Mother Holle. At first she did not know why she was so sad. Then it came to her that what she wanted was to go home to her own folks, even if they were not very kind to her. She was homesick, although Mother Holle was a thousand times kinder to her than her own mother and sister.

"Finally she said to Mother Holle: 'I am homesick, so I cannot stay with you any longer. I like you very much, but I must go back to my own people.'

"Then Mother Holle said: 'I am pleased that you want to go back to your own folks. You have served me so faithfully that I will take you home.'

"Then she took the girl by the hand and led her to a broad gateway. The gate opened, and as the girl passed through a shower of gold fell upon her. The gold clung to her, so that she was covered with it from head to feet.

"'This is your reward for your industry,' said Mother Holle. And she handed the girl her spindle, which she had dropped in a deep well.

"Then the gate closed, and the girl found herself back in the world close to her mother's house. As she went into the courtyard the rooster perched upon the well called out:

"'Cock-a-doodle-doo!
Your golden daughter's come back to you!'

"The girl went into her home and found her mother and sisters."

"Were they glad to see her, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"They were glad to see her gold. You remember she was covered with it. They asked her to turn around and around and gave her a good welcome. They quite forgot how unkind they had once been to her, making her jump down a deep well to find her lost spindle," said daddy.

"If we go to bed now like good children will you tell us another story tomorrow night, daddy?" Jack made a bargain. And daddy smiled.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Philadelphia—The happiest Easter Monday bride is Miss Olive May Wilson, the "Santa Claus Girl," and heroine of the poor kiddies for miles around this Quaker town. It was she who made Christmas a day of rejoicing for the boys and girls who would otherwise have been overlooked in the regular rounds of St. Nichols. Her idea has been taken up in all of the big centers of the country, and Christmas has been made a greater day by this wonderful little woman. Gifts and congratulations are pouring in today from all sections, and she is very happy. She was married Monday to Birchall Hammer, of Mount Airy, Pa., a former University of Pennsylvania athlete, who for the past two years has worked with Miss Wilson in her annual charity.

Washington—Mrs. Wilson, wife of the President, has the leading part in a pageant to be given here in connection with the anniversary celebration of the founding of the American Bible Society. So great is the interest in the pageant that it will be given morning, afternoon and evening on Saturday, May 6.

San Francisco—Women's adaptation of trousers is turned down emphatically by the California women who will go to the military encampment on June 1. Instead, Norfolk jackets and sensible wide khaki skirts will be the uniform here. The action of the California women is directly opposite that taken in New York, where the "home defenders" who are to train this spring have voted overwhelmingly for trousers.

Des Moines—A "Public Service Housekeeper" will soon be chosen by the Associated Charities of this city. Her duties will be to get acquainted with the families of laboring people, ascertain the conditions under which they live and manage their household affairs. She will instruct them in methods of efficiency and economy, and tell them how to make the family budget go further.

New York—Miss Gladys Donnelly, New York's woman civil engineer, is returning triumphantly from her latest big "job." She is the daughter of a noted engineer, and she has been actively associated with him since she received her degre in engineering. Father and daughter were called to Honolulu to devise a means of laying the floor of the Pearl Harbor drydock in 52 feet of water. With the assistance of his daughter, the engineer designed the floating dock from which huge slabs can be dropped to the harbor's bottom.

Boston—"Old maids are the products of Christianity, and that is why you have so many professional women, especially doctors, here," declared Dr. Mary Stone, Chinese missionary, in an address before members of the Medical Women's Society. "We cannot educate women doctors in China because they generally marry before they complete their course. They are engaged at birth and are sent to live in the family of their intended husband. Their life there is practically slavery. Their sole idea of life is to be some man's spouse, and few of them dream of facing the world themselves and fighting a lone battle." Miss Stone is herself a native Chinese woman, who received her education in America and returned to work among her own people. She is now "brushing up" at Johns Hopkins University.

Washington.—That women's chance for a long life is greater than that of men is the deduction drawn from statistics compiled by the Census Bureau. It appears that females are longer lived than males to the extent of more than three years. This is, in some respects, the report says, because of the greater number of violent deaths among men, but the figures also indicate that the death rate of females during the first year of life is fewer than for the male. The average expectation of life for white males is 50.2 years, and for white females, 53.6 years.

New York.—That the question of women's dress will be brought before the coming biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs is indicated by Mrs. William G. Brown, chairman of the local board of the federation. "Ten thousand delegates will take back to their homes a concrete idea of dress reform that will be a blessing to the whole country," she says. "Most clubwomen want to establish a general rule against indecent extremes."

Washington, D. C.—The annual Dixie ball of the Robert E. Lee Chapter, U. D. C., will be held this evening at the Raleigh. Among the patronesses are Mrs. Thomas Watt Gregory, Mrs. Charles D. Carter, Mrs. South Trimble, Miss Nannie Randolph Heth, Mrs. Burleson and Miss Caroline Longfellow. On the reception committee are General Gorgas, Col. Robert E. Lee and other southern notables. The ball is one of the brilliant functions of the spring at the capital, and this year it promises to outshine the other dances.

St. Louis, Mo.—Mrs. Clara P. Garrett, of this city, has won this year's grand prize of the St. Louis Art Salon for her sculpture, "Mother and Daughter." Mrs. Garrett is a native of Philadelphia, but has spent most of her life here. She studied in Paris and exhibited there, and has won many honors in sculpture.

San Francisco—Mrs. Won Sun Yuo Clemens, for years an active social worker here, and her sister, Mrs. Howard Gould, who left for China a few months ago to introduce child training among the Chinese, have established their first school in Pekin, and are winning high praise from government officials, according to word received by their friends here. The German Minister gave a dinner in their honor, and a number of diplomats and officials were present.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Helen Morton, Chicago sculptress, who was the first woman to attempt to instruct insane patients in modeling, will give an exhibition of her works here during the next few weeks. She is known in Chicago as a horsewoman, and has won many blue ribbons at various horse shows on the merits of her horses and her skill in riding. Her first work was exhibited in New York last year and won attention in the art world.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Because the position of Mayor of the city, to which she had been elected, seemed too high and lordly to her, Mrs. Ellen F. Aldrich refused to be Mayor of Sawtelle, Cal. She balked at the eleventh hour, as the oath was about to be taken. She declared she wanted to mingle with the people, and the Mayoralty would make this impossible. Mrs. Aldrich formerly lived in Dayton, O.

THAW—MACFARLANE.

New York, April 28.—Miss Barbara Thaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Blair Thaw, of this city, will be married this afternoon at 4 in the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The bride is one of the three beautiful Thaw sisters. Her elder sister, Beatrice, married Don Francesco Theodoli, of Italy. Miss Barbara is to marry today Lieutenant Scott Macfarlane, U. S. N., attached to the battleship Oklahoma. It will be a naval wedding, all of the male attendants and the groom himself being in uniform.

HUSBAND SUES "CHICKEN QUEEN"

Surprises Expected In Summit Couple's Quarrel.

CORESPONDENTS HIDDEN.

Lawyers Hint Society Fold Will Be Astonished When Full Facts Are Made Known—Wife Files Counter Charges Against H. J. L. Washington.

Summit, April 28.—Society in New Jersey and New York city, it was hinted, will be amazed when the name of the young man who is alleged to have broken up the home of Henry J. Lamar Washington is made public. The rich young southerner is suing Lucille Marguerite Washington for divorce in the supreme court of New York.

The "tea house" and chicken farm located here, of which Mrs. Washington was queen, figure in the cross suits for divorce that husband and wife are waging.

Neither corespondent is named. Report says society will be surprised when they are.

The wife is accused of unwifely behavior at the chicken farm she opened after her husband left her. The Hotel Traymore, Atlantic City, is the scene of his alleged infidelities.

Alimony of $300 monthly was asked of Justice Delehanty by the wife.

To reduce the alimony demanded by the wife, Mr. Washington sought to charge up the value of gifts he made to her during courtship and at the time of the marriage. Justice Delehanty expressed doubt whether a husband had a right to do this.

It is said husband and wife, twenty-nine and twenty-five, spent $130,000 in three years entertaining.

Mr. Washington asserts his wife received a young man at the Summit home, made trips with him between Summit and West Orange and has been in his company in New York and elsewhere. The husband says he gave Mrs. Washington two touring cars, maids, chauffeurs and other servants and gave her the Summit house, which cost $32,000.

The husband admits he used up three legacies and the income of a patent medicine business inherited from his grandfather. He is employed at present, he says, by his uncle, Dr. Alton Harris, of 141 Riverside drive, in New York city, in the munition business.

Mr. Washington's father was the late Colonel W. H. Yashington. Mrs. Washington's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Osborne, live at the Ansonia, in New York city. Justice Delehanty reserved decision on the application for alimony and a $5,000 counsel fee for Mrs. Washington's attorneys.

FINDS MANY MOSQUITOES.

Wrigglers Abound From Jersey City as Far as Cape May.

New Brunswick, April 28.—Broods of salt marsh mosquitoes on tidewater marshes all the way from Cape May to Jersey City are reported by Thomas J. Headlee, state entomologist, in a bulletin sent from the New Jersey experiment station at this city. The wrigglers, he finds, are growing slowly and may be expected to emerge if not destroyed beforehand during the next two weeks.

Extermination of all kinds of mosquitoes is going forward, Dr. Headlee says, in Bergen, Essex, Union, Atlantic and Hudson counties. This is a combined area of 1,154.8 square miles, of which 82,251 acres are salt marsh.

OPERATE ON BAD BOY.

Attempt to Improve Lad's Character Ordered by Court.

Newton, April 28.—An operation was performed on Rue Merriam, seventeen years old, in an effort to correct a stoppage of his nose, to which doctors claim his apparent incorrigibility is due. The operation, which was performed by Dr. Blace Cole and Dr. Shepard Voorhees, was ordered by Judge Allen R. Shay of the Sussex county courts as an alternative for imprisonment of the boy.

The boy's nose was injured several years ago, when he was struck by a baseball, and doctors say he has since been unable to breathe through it.

HOLD DEADLY CARGO.

Edgwater Police Detain Canal Boatload of Bromine.

Edgwater, April 28.—A cargo of bromine, the deadly "gas" of the European war, is being held up here by the police, pending investigation. The cargo, consisting of forty cases, arrived on a canal boat at the Borough dock. The cases show that the chemical was manufactured in Midland, Mich.

The police on learning that the chemical possessed highly explosive as well as deadly gas elements took charge of the cargo, and it may be held up from shipment abroad indefinitely, perhaps permanently.

Baker to Open Newark Show.

Washington, April 28.—It has been arranged to have Secretary Newton D. Baker of the war department go to Newark May 13 to open the industrial exposition in connection with the city's anniversary celebration and to speak at the board of trade banquet as the representative of President Wilson.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

WE'LL TAKE THIS BACK IF IT RAINS.

Weather permitting the City League will stage the curtain raising stunt tomorrow afternoon. Each of the six teams is primed to get away to a flying start and that the opening will be an auspicious one is a foregone conclusion. The league is still in the infant stage but there is every reason for believing that it will be an even greater pulling card this year than last and business on the circuit should boom. One of the greatest collection of diamond stars ever gathered together under one organized head in these parts is ready to take the field and the trio of contests, slated for as many different parts of the city, will offer cards of a calibre that will furnish an excellent afternoon's diversion for the sport lover.

PUGILISM A WHOLESOME PASTIME.

Dame Rumor promises the introduction of pugilism as a pastime for frequenters of Saengerbund Hall. The borough club, if the announcement is given credence, will be the first to take advantage of the recent big of legislation legalizing boxing in New Jersey and who knows but what North Plainfield may yet become a mecca for lovers of the ring game. No better facilities for staging fistic bouts are offered than those at Saengerbund Hall, and with the proper management good cards of clean, wholesome sport of this variety could be arranged. That there would be local support has been proven by the general wave of approval accorded the preliminary announcement and Plainfield is within easy reach of every center that has endorsed the sport in this section of the country.

WHAT MAY BE IN STORE FOR US.

No one knows how many good boxers live in the immediate vicinity of Plainfield. Who knows but what we may have the logical candidate for a retrievement of the laurels lost by our Dunellen friend, "Ruby Robert" Fitzsimmons? Those opposed to the fight game certainly must treat themselves to an awful shiver when they dain to think for a minute of the wealth of advertising a place like Plainfield would get from a properly staged and managed championship go. Picture the scene of a battle between a local scrapper and Jess Willard or the hub-bub a defy from a Plainfield lightweight would create if directed at Matt Wells? Many are the admirers of Bob Fitzsimmons and Bob is one of those ring exponents who scoff at the term "boxing," and demand that the fight game be clothed in its proper colors.

HARD WORKER AND CLEAN SPORTSMAN.

Fitting and proper was the reception accorded by the bowlers of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks to J. E. Waldorf. As an individual unit Mr. Waldorf has accomplished wonders in behalf of the alley games at the Watchung avenue club since he became prominently identified with it and to lose him might mean a falling back in the old time well worn rut and the necessity of a complete reorganization. Simultaneous with announcement of his departrue on a two months' business trip to South America comes his appointment to head the bowling committee for the ensuing year. Summarized, his appointment is a hard task well placed and that he will shoulder the burden and continue to work for a higher standard of sportsmanship for the lodge and its individual athletes is the confidential belief of every one of his club-mates.

WHAT SHAKESPEARE MISSED.

The great quantity of mere gab such as now issues from the speaking tubes of the hard-boiled eggs of City League fame is one of the things that Shakespeare missed. What club on the circuit hasn't a rabid free speech agent who will boast of its strength and predict an easy hike to Pennantville? Is there a manager in the organization who doesn't think that his charges will race home with the bacon? Of course there isn't. What's more there are six managers, six captains, fifty-four regular players and a choice collection of subs and two-legged side-line decorations who are laying claim to the same old championship rag. But which one of these managers or captains or sets of players will be passing this same line of talk five months from now remains to be seen. It's safe to conclude that they all won't but there's no telling which one will still be in a cheery frame of mind.

SONS OF ERIN MAY BE CURIOSITIES.

Trouble that has been brewing of late on Irish soil leads the sentimentally inclined to pause and ponder over what the world will do for Irish cops, ball-park keepers with the Erin brogue, and diamond lights who have the map of Ireland plainly distinguishable on their brows in days to come. Well, it is known that in days gone by and in the present era the Irish element has won a sound foothold in America's doings, especially sportdom. Scan the array of names in any athletic contest and see the big percentage that might be classed as Irish handles and then join the ranks of those who are trying to picture sport without its Flanagans, Doyles, O'Tooles, Murphys, MacDonalds, Morans, Sharkeys, Sullivans, Killifers, Flynns, O'Neills and Logans.

Baseball as a profession is gaining popularity every day. The influx of college talent into the world of baseball has lent a blanket of respectability that is catered to by every manager in every league in the country. No longer does the hotel manager duck around corners in an attempt to dodge diamond performers seeking accommodations. The game today is participated in largely by gentlemen; not merely gentlemen in appearance, but gentlemen who have had the advantage of a college polishing off. The salaries paid compare favorably with those of any other profession and the work is decidedly more enjoyable and fitted to some of the graduates turned out of college doors these modern times.

If you are a student of the "ads" you KNOW WHAT IT OUGHT TO COST.

Buying for the home cannot be done wisely and economically unless the "buyer" is a student of the advertisements—no more than a store may be made prosperous without advertising.

SHARWOOD TAKES LAKEWOOD MEDAL

T. S. Wheeler, of Plainfield Scores 105 in Fourth Sixteen.

Sidney E. Sharwood, of the Merion Cricket Club, of Philadelphia, dropped a large-sized gas bomb into the camp of the metropolitan golfers yesterday when he returned a card of 80 in the qualifying round of the annual spring tournament of the Country Club at Lakewood, winning the medal. The prize in this event generally goes to one of the New York representatives, but Mr. Sharwood had it by a margin of one stroke, Frederick Herreshoff, of Garden City, coming close upon his heels, with 81.

Back of these two, tied at 84, were Horace T. Cook, of Trenton, N. J., who once ran Walter J. Travis a close race in the Lakewood final, and Harold A. Steiner, of the Inwood Country Club, L. I., who was runner-up at Lakewood last autumn to Max Marston, of Baltusrol.

As several of the leading metropolitan stars, such as Messrs. Travis and Marston and Philip Carter, the junior metropolitan titleholder, failed to tee up, there was no one to put the finishing touch of a 7 in the unit column of the mass of totals on the score board. Mr. Herreshoff would have done so had he not wasted four strokes on the par 3 eleventh hole by playing two balls into the water, and Mr. Sharwood looked good enough to turn the trick until he used up six shots on each of the sixteenth and seventeenth holes. After that, the Philadelphia representative was glad enough to get his par 4 on the home hole and so finish in an even 80 strokes.

In the fourth sixteen, T. S. Wheeler, of Plainfield, turned in a card of 105—out 60 and in 45.

COACH SANFORD'S FOOTBALL MEN LOWEST IN STUDIES

Coach Sanford's football men did poorer work scholastically than any of the other athletes at Rutgers, while the gymnasts tood highest in their studies for the first term of this year, according to averages compiled by Dean Bevier.

The football players scored over 350 points on the gridiron last fall, but their classroom average was only 69.5, while the gymnasts scored 77.1 per cent. The swimming team had 74.4 per cent. and the basketball squad had 72.5. The Glee Club beat out the athletes with a record of 76.9.

Non-fraternity men outpointed the fraternity members by 74.5 to 72.5. Delta Upsilon led the fraternities with 75 per cent. average. The average of the entire student body was 73.3.

COUNTY BOXING CARD PLANNED BY MOOSE

Elizabeth Lodge Writes Those Interested in Pugilism to Lineup.

The Loyal Order of Moose of Elizabeth, being the first in this vicinity to receive a sanction from the Amateur Athletic Union to conduct boxing bouts in New Jersey under A. A. U. rules, is now ready to receive applications for entry blanks from amateur boxers who are members of the A. A. U. The secretary of the committee, W. H. Harrison, can be addressed at the Moose Club, Elizabeth. The bouts will be held on May 12 and 26, this year.

P. H. S. TRACK MEN READY FOR RELAYS

Cream of High School Talent Expected at Franklin Field.

Accompanied by a crowd of rooters, Plainfield High School's track team will leave the North Avenue station tomorrow morning on the 9:02 express for Philadelphia, where it will arrive just in time to jump into togs and compete in the High School quarter mile relays. Hand, Field, Trowbridge and Daniels will start from the tape in the order named with their position at the pole.

Coach Noll and Ralph Runyon, a former P. H. S. track man, but now sporting the Penn colors, gave the fellows their final workout on Parker Field yesterday and all seem to be in fine fettle for the grind. Runyon will compete in the high jumps and pole vault and says that he expects to make some of the college favorites extend themselves to carry off honors.

SHAMROCKS TAKE TWO ON FOURTH STREET ALLEYS

Although the Shamrocks beat the Saurer bowling team last night on the T. A. B. S. alleys they did not have it as easy as before. Several of Saurer's heavy men were missing. The teams were evenly matched, and the game was on ice until the last ball was rolled.

LOU SLOCUM WILL LEAD NETHERWOOD

Popular Pitcher Elected to Captain City League Outfit.

The Netherwood baseball team has secured the services of Lou Slocum as captain for the 1916 season. With Slocum working in form everything has a bright aspect for the Netherwood nine.

This will be Slocum's first attempt as captain, but he is well liked by the Netherwood players and when he calls the roll Saturday on Emerson Oval every player will do his best to win the game.

Netherwood will play the Plainfield A. A. the first league game and owing to the uncertain weather the team is not in the best of form, but all the other teams have also been held in check with the same reason. Every Netherwood player is expected on the field at 3 o'clock.

N. P. H. S. TO FACE OLD RIVAL TOMORROW

North Plainfield High School ball-tossers will entertain an old rival tomorrow afternoon, when the New Brunswick High School nine visits Hyde Oval for the annual clash with the borough boys. An interesting battle will undoubtedly ensue, for the rivalry is keen between these two schools, especially after the close basketball contests during the past season. The Brunswick School will be represented by one of the strongest combines ever turned out of that institution, practically the same team that won so many victories last season, will appear. Herman, in the pitcher's box for the visitors, will be the one individual that will stand between N. P. H. S. and victory. He was responsible for one victory over the boroughites last season, and expects to duplicate the feat. "Babe" Dilts will be the moundsman for the home team and by the convincing manner in which he has been fanning his opponents, a pitched battle will follow. The rest of the team will assume their regular positions, with the exception of McDonough, who will be switched from the outfield to the catcher's position instead of Mair, who is out of the game for a short period.

PLAINFIELD ATHLETIC NINE TO MEET CRESCENT A. C.

The Plainfield Athletic Nine, one of the newer aggregations organized in Plainfield, will play its opening home game tomorrow afternoon on Hope Common, when they will engage the fast Crescent A. C. of this city as their opponents. The game is scheduled to start at 3:30 p. m. The P. A. N. ball tossers opened their season last Saturday at Bound Brook when they defeated the Boy Scouts of that place by a score of 6 to 3.

The batteries for the Plainfielders tomorrow will be Newell and Meakim, two well-known younger players of the West End, while Johnson and Shoeman will appear for the visitors. In all probability the local nine will present the same lineup that it put on the field last week, which is composed of: Poling, lf.; Newell, rf.; Barry, 2b.; Brandt, 3b.; Keating, ss.; Wilson, 1b.; Newell, p.; Cowley, cf.; Meakim, c.; and Rimmer, rf.

THROUGH THE GREEN

By "Joe" Greene.

Some very good four-ball matches are being scheduled in the metropolitan district for next month. To see Phillip Carter, the Metropolitan Junior Champion, and Jerome Travers, who won the National Open at Baltusrol last June, tee up against Oswald Kirby and Maxwell Marston, the tall blonde from Cranford, is a bit of golfing lore that should not be missed.

There is a widespread disposition on the part of the Metropolitan goffers to request the Hackensack Club to change the date of this stellar four-ball match from Saturday, May 13, to Sunday, May 14. While many players prefer not to attend matches on Sunday, it is said to be almost impossible for Hackensack to secure the entire quartet except on Saturday or Sunday.

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the Park Golf Club tomorrow. Many improvements have been made to the club house, and the grounds and a very prosperous season is anticipated.

Brooklyn Jimmy Carroll, who was one of the most prominent middleweight fighters of about twenty-five years ago, died suddenly last night. Carroll was 50 years old. His death was due to blood poisoning, caused by cutting too deeply into a corn on his left foot. Yesterday afternoon he was rushed from his home at 116 West Forty-fourth street, to a private sanatorium, where the physicians declared that it was necessary to amputate his leg to save his life. Before the operation could be performed, however, Carroll died.

As a middleweight boxer Carroll never lost a fight. At one time he was matched against Bob Fitzsimmons for the middleweight title, and was backed by a prominent sporting man for $10,000, but the latter died before negotiations were completed.

CITY LEAGUERS READY FOR THE GONG DESPITE THE THREATENING WEATHER

Good weather is all that is needed to stage an auspicious opening of the City Baseball League tomorrow, all six teams being slated to get into action in various parts of the city. The Netherwood champions are scheduled to line up against the Plainfield A. A. clan on the Netherwood lot. The unsettled condition of the East End combine, due to the fact that Gifford Jones, the manager, has expressed a desire to retire, may interfere with the playing of this contest, but those concerned say the game will be played. The Netherwood team, winners of last year's title, will formally accept their pennant tomorrow afternoon before the game with the Plainfielders.

Clinton avenue will appear on the Hope Chapel lot and the Tabs will play First Baptist. No definite announcement of batteries has been made as yet. The umpires will be assigned by President Walter C. Dobbins tomorrow morning. Each team has a roster of nineteen players, and it is likely that a majority of these will be into the games tomorrow.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Bunch of "window-wishing" kids in front of a fruit store on West Front street noticed by philanthropic Somerset street man, who "blew" the juveniles to three oranges.

Stephen G. Snare, reported by another local paper to have expired suddenly in Elizabeth, decairing to every other startled friend he met on Front street that the report of his death was "very much exaggerated."

Cranford man who owns a "flivver" coming to Plainfield every other afternoon to buy meat for his family, claiming that he can save one-third the cost in his home town despite the high cost of gasoline.

Well-known West Ender telephoning from a downtown drug store to his wife, whispering the lie that he had been detained on business, and then starting off with two cronies for the nearest thirst-quenching emporium.

This little dialogue was overheard in the Kensington Hotel dining room at lunch time a few days ago: Martin Stutsman: "I understand that John Bunny is with Barnum and Bailey this year." Tax Collector William R. Townsend: "Why, you poor simple fish, don't you know that John Bunny is dead?" Stutsman: "Well, so are Barnum and Bailey." Chorus of diners: "We'll be easy with you, Bill; make it ten cent cigars all around." And the best part of it is, the genial tax collector stood for the Havanas.

"THE ATONEMENT"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

"Once in the end of the age hath He appeared to put away with sin by sacrifice of himself."—Heb. 9: 26.

The sermon of Evangelist Biederwolf Thursday evening was as follows, in full:

"Once in the end of the age hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself." Heb. 9: 26.

I'm going to talk to you tonight about the atonement of Jesus Christ, the central doctrine of the Christian faith, the temple of God's religion, whose foundation is laid deep in the eternal purposes of the Father and whose pinnacle flashes in the light of uncreated glory.

The latest attempt to discredit the Christian faith and to explode the whole system of Christian doctrine has just been made in Germany. They can hatch out more deviltry along this line over there than in most all the rest of the civilized world together. This time one of them, a fellow by the name of Swartz, starts out to prove that no such person as Jesus ever existed. Well, it takes a pretty brave man to fly in the face of what we know like that. But it only goes to show that it is still true that "fools rush in where angels fear to tread." He might as well try to argue the sun out of the sky. Lay your Bible aside for a minute and pick up secular history. No, I'm not going to quote Josephus, for if I did, some wild-eyed atheist would jump up and holler "Interpolation," so I'll give you the benefit of the doubt if you want it. But what about Tacitus? A historian is mighty careful to tell the truth; that's his business. He lived right after Christ, and a long paragraph tells about Him and says He was put to death by decree of Pontius Pilate. The infidels and atheists and Godless unbelievers of later time worked kinks into their brains and callous spots on 'em trying to prove this celebrated passage unauthentic. But Edward Gibbon, one of their number, the great scholar of the Roman empire, said, "Boys, it's no use; the passage stands every test; it's genuine as any passage ever penned."

Description of Jesus.

Publius Lentulus, in a letter to the Roman Senate describes Jesus as a "man of stature somewhat tall, his hair, the color of a chestnut fully ripe, plain to the ears, whence downward it is more orient, curling and waving about the shoulders; his forehead plain and very delicate; his beard thick, in color like his hair; his eyes grey, quick and clear."

Two thousand years ago they led this man out to die. His death warrant was found by the French army, written on a brass plate and signed by John Zorobabel, Raphael Robani, Daniel Robani and Capet.

This is the man of whom the text says, "Once in the end He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself." That sentence at once surrounds the death of Christ with a peculiar and distinctive significance.

Other men have laid down their lives for the truth; other men have been stoned and beaten and crucified by the Godless gang, but never has been said and never could be said of any other man that he put away sin by the death he died.

Paul says that He who knew no sin was made to be sin, or as the original puts it—made to be a sin offering—an offering for sin—in our behalf.

The death of Christ has some relation to sin such as no other death ever had. "The fellow that can't see the doctrine of the atonement in the Bible can't see anything." I want to help you to see it tonight, to help you to understand it and to appreciate it. And if you'll listen to me now with an honest mind, I think I can do it—I can help the most of you. Some of you I can't help because you don't want to be helped.

Now, it's mighty important that you be right on this subject; if you are not, it means to be lost forever. I don't mean that any human mind can fully grasp it, but if you'll lift your eyelids of prejudice and partiality and false teaching, you'll see enough light to bring you into right relations with God through the cross where Christ put away your sin by the sacrifice of Himself.

Meaning of "Atonement."

Now what do we mean by the atonement? More theological battles, I think, have been fought around this great truth than all the rest of the Christian doctrine put together. I've got several shelves of books in my library on the atonement, and I've read them all, and studied them, and blue-penciled their theorizations, but after all I've never found so easy a way to understand and appreciate the atonement as just to come with an honest mind and open heart to the word of God and read what God has to say about it.

What does the atonement mean? It's a very ancient word, and means "at-one-ment"; it means the reconciliation of those who have been separated. So Shakespeare in "Richard III" makes Buckingham say to the Queen:

"Ay, madame; he desires to make atonement between the Duke of Gloucester and your brother."

And so the atonement of Jesus Christ was God's plan to bring about a reconciliation between Himself which He made by the world. You've got to begin with sin. Make light of that and the cross becomes a tragedy, and the word of God from Genesis to Revelation a mess of meaningless jarson.

Mrs. Eddy says, "Man is incapable of sin"—Yes she does; she says it on page 471 of the 164th edition. But John says, "If we say we have not sinned we make God a liar." So God's a liar or Mrs. Eddy is, and so, of course, Christian Science is without atonement.

But God says every man has sinned, and He says the soul that sins must die. He told Adam and Eve not to do a certain thing. But the devil tried to make Eve believe that she misunderstood God. He wanted to put her wise; he's a shrewd old guy, and he's been working that game on the human race ever since. So he got Adam and Eve to disobey God. But God said, in the day you do "thou shalt surely die." And what happened when they sinned? Why, that very minute they died, just as God had said they would. Now Adam and Eve could not understand death in the physical sense like we do because they had never seen any one die. They had never seen any one turn pale, roll back their eyes and, gasping for breath, fail to get it. They had never heard the death rattle in the human throat or looked upon a human body that lay cold and stiff and marble-like in its ghastly pallor, and they must have understood it as some sort of interference with their relations to God; and this is just exactly what happened in the very day they sinned. They were severed from God; alienated and astray, and this is death.

Day You Sinneth, You Die.

Physical death of course followed, but separation from God is what God meant when he said, "In the day thou sinneth thou shalt surely die."

You congratulate yourself because you are not a great sinner, but the smallest sin, my friend, has an exceedingly fine edge, and it had done its work—it had severed between you and God. That is all, but that's enough, and you are a condemned soul tonight just as much as the prisoner who sits in his cell waiting the hour of his execution.

There's no comfort in such an assurance, but I pray God it may arouse you. Go on in your sin and your separation from God. Go on in your dances, patronize your indecent stage, build your houses, drive your carriages, plunge into worldliness of every sort, but just keep repeating all the time to yourself, "I am a sinner under sentence of death. The condemnation of God is upon me. Condemned! Condemned! Condemned!"

And you want to know, of course, if there is any way to get back to God; to make peace with Him and be reconciled. And I tell you, "Yes." God Himself has furnished it. The remedy is in Jesus Christ dying on Calvary to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. It is the atonement.

"Well," said an old infidel to me the other day, "I don't believe in your atonement." I said, "Why?" "Because my ideas and my opinions lead me to believe there is nothing in it."

"Well," I said, "your ideas and your opinions will lead you straight to perdition if you don't make mighty sure they've got more sense in them than the ideas and opinions of most people who talk like you."

When a man denies the atonement do you know what he does? He does four things:

He Lies Against God.

He lies in the face of the written word of Almighty God. From Genesis to Revelation, the atonement runs through like the scarlet thread through all the cordage of the British navy. Take the atonement out of this blessed book and as a solution of the problem of life it's of no more value than a last year's almanac.

He denies the testimony of the world's history. You try to write history and leave out Jesus Christ as the atoning Son of God and see where you come out. Hume tried it, and so did Gibbon, and they couldn't account for the world's mighty strides of civilization.

Some old wind-jamming skeptic comes along and proceeds to rip up the Scriptural doctrine of the atonement, and I say, "Old Skeptic, what else has ever charmed the drunkard from his cup, and wooed the gambler from his cards, made the libertine pure and the thief an honest man?" And I say, "Until you can trot out something that will make me a pure, holy man and keep me that way, that will do this old sin-cursed world what the gospel of Jesus Christ has done for it, I'm not going to espouse your hell-born doctrine, but I'm going to nail my hopes on the cross of Christ where my mother nailed hers and where millions of others, the brainiest and best of the world, have done the same thing.

He controverts the testimony of universal instinct of the human soul. Expiation through vicarious sacrifice runs like a golden cord through all history, all poetry, all prose and song; you can see it in Thor's hammer, in Brahma's wounded foot, in the cry of Promethus bound, and everywhere.

He flies in the face of all reason and sense.

Arguments of Infidels.

Now let me say this: I know the infidel arguments that are put up against the doctrine of the atonement. I've read them all, and I have yet to find the first argument of common sense and reason.

I say, Mr. Infidel, what are your objections to the atonement?

"Well," he says, "It wasn't necessary. What's the need of Christ suffering? If God is love and full of goodness, why can't a man just confess his wrong and be forgiven, just as an earthly father forgives his child without demanding satisfaction in the payment of a penalty."

"God," he says, "ought to be as merciful as man." Well, you talk nonsense when you talk like that.

Now, listen to me. Some of the great Christian writers on the atonement hesitate to say that God couldn't have devised another way to save us. I don't. God says it was necessary for Jesus to die, and that settles it for me. "Christ must needs have suffered," the Bible says, and I don't believe God would ever have allowed Him to suffer so; I don't believe He would ever have let the Godless gang to spit in His face, and the howling mob to smite Him. He never would have allowed His blessed Son to stagger along the Via Dolorosa underneath the weight of the mighty cross they tied upon His bleeding back fresh from the scourging of the Roman governor until tired and exhausted, He stumbled and fell and they cursed Him and smote Him and cried "Ha! ha"; and when they came to the place where they hurled Him down on the cross, and I can see the spikes as they go into the flesh, one into His right hand and another into His left and a third through both His feet, and I don't believe God would ever have let them do it if He could have saved the world by a method less costly. It was necessary.

Would Turn Hell Loose.

Why can't God forgive like an earthly parent? For three reasons.

If he were nothing more than a father He's got a mighty big family and He must deal with each member of it in a way to protect them all.

He's more than a father. He's a moral governor and He's got to have concern for the rectitude of His government. The interest of the universe is at stake.

Suppose you set up an earthly court on that principle and all hell would turn loose on the state.

God is a righteous and a holy being as well as a loving one, and He's got to act in harmony with ALL the essential attributes of His divine character. And the atonement instead of belittling the mercy of God, magnifies it, because what in His righteousness and justice He exacts, in His fatherly love He provides. You've got to keep the whole character of God in mind in dealing with these questions.

"Well," but says the old infidel again, "I can't see how the suffering of Christ can expiate guilty man's sin, so God can let him go free. I don't believe in substitution."

Yes, you say you don't believe in it, and yet it don't offend your sense of justice very much when you see it take place in human affairs. I might tell you it's God's business and not your's, but I won't.

Ought to be in Hell.

Now listen to me, and I'll help you to see it if you've got anything to see it with. But don't flaunt your little persimmon intellect in the face of God because there are divine depths that human plummets cannot sound.

When a rebellious sinner shakes his puny fist in the face of God and goes about in his sin, smashing the divine law right and left, he brings God up against a serious problem. God could annihilate you in a second if He wanted to. But He don't. He ought to. There are people here tonight and you ought to be in hell, the way you are treating God. We'd all be there if it wasn't for His love. And so love searched the depths of infinite wisdom for some plan by which four things could come to pass:

First—That the guilty sinners might be spared.

Second—That he might have his heart broken and become good.

Third—That the principle of justice in God's essential nature should be honored.

Fourth—That His holy law should be vindicated and His moral government honored and upheld.

This plan love found in the Atonement, and God, the Son, talked it over, and God said: "Oh, Christ, will you help me do it. It's going to mean an awful thing for you, but will you come and help me save them?" And Jesus said, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God," and in that mystery of mysteries, the Incarnation, the Son of God became man, and in both His human nature and divine He went up to Calvary's cross and gave His life a ransom for us all.

Oh, you say, Jesus couldn't have suffered a penalty equal to what was due for all our sins. No, of course He couldn't, and no one ever said He did. It was not a commercial transaction; it was a moral satisfaction, and His divine nature gave a costliness to His sacrifice and a value to it when accomplished which it pleased God to accept as in eternal harmony with the demands of the situation. And you have the audacity to sit down there and say that God didn't know as much about what was right and consistent with the moral order of the universe as you do.

Now notice one other thing.

God Honored Moral Law.

God so honored the moral law of His government that He wouldn't let Jesus come into humanity without sharing the consequences of humanity's sin.

And Christ not only came into humanity and into all that sin had brought upon it, but He identified Himself with it and both in His life and in His death, He called humanity into such a union with Him as made Him the real representative and federal head of His people. Humanity became identified with Him. And we hear Paul saying, even while he marvels at the wonders of atoning grace, "If one died for all, then all died." The atonement throbs with reason if you've got a mind to see it. Like an old infidel, the other day, flaunting his fool argument in defiance to God's plan, said, "I don't believe in your slaughter-house religion." Well, I tell you now, if you are ever saved and kept out of hell, it's going to be by this very same plan which came out of God's superior judgment and out of His great heart of love and upon which you pour contempt. There's no other way. If you are ever redeemed it won't be by corruptible things such as silver and gold, but by the precious blood of Jesus Christ. "When Jesus died on Calvary, He made it possible for you to come and be saved." And I should think instead of stabbing the Son of God with your heartless sneers, it would break your heart and bring you to the foot of the cross in tears.

See from His head, His hands, His feet,
Sorrow and love flow mingling down;
Did ever such love or sorrow meet,
Or thorns compose so rich a crown?

It ought to break your heart, and this is the other great glory of God's marvelous plan. Wherever it is heard it touches the heart and makes men good as no other thing could do. You talk about punishment being reformatory. It usually leaves a man worse than he was before. You can pound some men to death and never reform them. But there's a better way.

Men and women, this is the salvation that I preach to you. Without it you are lost. Don't say because Christ died for all, therefore all will be saved whether you repent and believe or not. Suppose this tabernacle was full of sick people and I offered a remedy to every one who was able to walk down this aisle and get it, and if you were one of them, and didn't have enough faith in my word, and no gratitude in your heart to come, you could lie back there and rot in your disease before you would be saved.

Jesus Paid For Every One.

Jesus paid the price for everybody. But God says if you don't repent and believe and accept Him, you'll be damned and that's all there is to it. The atonement is sufficient for every one and it is offered to every one. But just because Christ made atonement for you, don't think you can live like the devil and sin as much as you please, and then walk up and demand the benefits of the Atonement as your rights, and expect intelligent people to have any respect for you.

I read of a man who had a dream that if he did enough good deeds, every deed would be a rung in a ladder by which he could climb up into heaven. Every time he did a good deed, when he gave anything to the preacher's salary; when he went to church; when he gave a coin to a beggar; every time, he added a rung to the ladder. Bye and bye he had only two more rungs to fill out before heaven's door was ready to enter, the gate rolled back and Jesus looked out upon him and said, "I am the door; he that entereth not by the door, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

Climb up by your morality, if you think you can do it you're a thief and a robber! If you'd begin today and be absolutely perfect the rest of your life, you might have a right to enter in, if your past record wasn't there to appear against you.

Some people preach what they call the moral influence theory of the Atonement. They find the full meaning of the Atonement in the beautiful example Chist gave us as an inspiration to holiness and character building. But is that enough? Shucks, No! If that were all, then I as that God and the Son of God are guilty of mocking our infirmity for there isn't an earnest man in the world, no even the best Christian that lives who doesn't kneel down by the side of his bed after each day of effort to imitate Christ, and says, "Have mercy upon me, O God, for I have this day come short of the glory of God." No, sir, your morality alone will never do, and nothing else will ever do except Faith in what Jesus Christ has done for you and then a life that's on the square with God and man.

Are a Thief and Robber.

You can climb up by your morality, your culture and your respectability and all you've got on God's earth, but you're a thief and a robber if you turn away from Christ and expect to climb into heaven without Him.

Christ wants to save you and has done the best He can do, but you are like the young man whose Godless dissipation and sin had broken his mother's heart and sent her to her grave. The first night after the funeral, you know what an awful night it is, after the hearse has backed up and the coffin has been carried away and you sit dumb with grief in the old home from which the light seems to have gone out. You feel as though you would die. That night the old father sat broken-hearted by the fireside and his dissipated Godless son came down stairs and picked up his hat.

The father said, "Where are you going?"

"I am going down town."

"Oh, my boy," he said, "don't go; this is the first night mother has been out of the home and I am so lonesome; sit there where mother used to sit and stay with me tonight."

But he said, "No, I've got an engagement," and as the old man plead with him, he said, "Step aside, for I am going out," and the old man threw himself on the floor and before the door and said, "My son, if you pass out of this house tonight you will have to go over my body to do it."

And with a curse the boy trampled his father's body beneath his feet, opened the door and went out into another night of sin.

And so I say to you tonight, if you go to hell, you will have to go over every prayer that has been offered for you, over every tear that's ever been shed for you, over every sermon you've ever heard, over your mother's grave and over your baby's coffin, some of you, but more than all this you'll have to go over the body of the crucified Christ who throws himself before the door of hell and begs you to stay back.

MARTIAL LAW FOR IRELAND

Revolt Spreads, Declares Premier Asquith.

STREET FIGHTS CONTINUE

Dublin Is Still Cut Off—Rebels Hold Portions of City—Heavy Forces of Troops Sent From Wales—Chief Secretary For Ireland Is Target of Attacks.

London, April 28.—The house of commons was astonished to hear from the lips of Premier Asquith this announcement:

"The situation in Ireland is still serious. The revolutionary movement is spreading to the west."

The house of commons, assured that the Dublin revolt was "well in hand," received the above announcement by Premier Asquith with unconcealed consternation.

All Ireland has been placed under martial law. Large contingents of British troops from Wales are on the way to Ireland to re-enforce the government forces already there. Major General Sir John Maxwell, formerly commander in chief of the British forces in Egypt, left for Ireland to take full control of the country under military law.

These additional facts were announced by the prime minister in parliament. Mr. Asquith asserted that the troops now en route for the seat of the revolt are "adequate."

Street Fighting Continues.

The premier declared that the rebels are still in possession of important buildings and that street fighting is continuing. He added that a thorough investigation will be made into the causes of the outbreak and the responsibility for it. The government's first duty, however, he emphasized, was to put the rebellion down.

Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulsterites, and John Redmond, head of the Nationalist party, both made a clear cut declaration in the commons condemning the Dublin revolt and pledging their influence and followings to the government's support in quelling the riots "now and forever more," as Sir Edward Carson put it.

The closest possible military censorship has been put into effect on all news regarding the developments in Ireland. While the government was emphatic in its expression of confidence that the revolt will be put down quickly, the general feeling here is that important facts concerning the present status as well as what happened in Dublin during the last forty-eight hours are withheld.

Secretary Birrell Attacked.

Bitter attacks against the government, and particularly against the authorities in Ireland, were made in the house of commons, the criticism being concentrated on the alleged lack of preparatioin and timely dispatch of sufficient forces to the scene of the riots. One member demanded the resignation of Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland.

From an account by Lord Lansdowne in behalf of the government it appears that the rebels are still in possession of the city hall, the Four courts, and the Western road and the Amiens road railway stations, the main centers of communication with England. Telegraph and cable communication is still largely interrupted.

The only place from which the rebels were driven out since the rebellion was initiated last Monday is Stephen's green. The statement by Lord Lansdowne, held up by the censor for nearly twenty-four hours, still holds good, and it has not been supplemented. He declared the rebels on Monday made a "half hearted attack on Dublin castle, but did not press it," and then occupied Stephen's green and the other points enumerated. From Stephen's green they were ejected, "with a certain number of casualties," he said, but this is the only point mentioned by him as having been retaken by the government's troops.

The rebels, perched upon the roofs of buildings, fired upon government troops returning from the barracks. "Tuesday they still occupied certain buildings and houses in Sackville and other streets," Lord Lansdowne's statement said in conclusion. He repeated Chief Secretary Birrell's statement that the situation is "undoubtedly well in hand."

Attacks on Cabinet.

The house was startled at the prime minister's statements, and as he admitted that the situation is serious and the revolt is spreading murmurs of surprise became audible. Some of the members took repeated occasion to express their astonishment over the fact that all the things reported by Mr. Asquith should have come to pass after the chief secretary for Ireland had announced in the house two days ago that the government had the situation "well in hand."

Others developed this line of argument further, and soon a series of bitter attacks were voiced against the government. While the central authorities in London were accused of lack of foresight and unpardonable unpreparedness to meet such a serious state of affairs, the Irish authorities were assailed with even greater spirit, and insinuations were made that they had been tacitly conniving with the rebels.

One member, William Moore, Conservative, representing North Armagh, even went so far as to say that "confidence in Ireland would be restored if Chief Secretary Birrell handed in his resignation."

In the midst of this crossfire of attacks and "explanations," the two foremost Irish statesmen, Sir Edward Carson, organizer of the Ulster volunteers, and John Redmond, leader of the Nationalists, gave the session a dramatic turn by burying for the moment their bitter antagonism for each other and joining hands in renouncing the rebel lion unqualifiedly and thus expressing their loyalty to the government.

"I am satisfied with the premier's statement that the government will be able to regulate affairs in Ireland," said Sir Edward. "I want to assure the country that I will gladly join hands with John Redmond and the Nationalists in doing everything possible to put down those rebels now and for ever more."

The cheers aroused by this announcement were redoubled when John Redmand, rising immediately after his political antagonist had ended, said:

"In behalf of my colleagues and the overwhelming majority of the Irish people I wish to express my cordial detestation of the acts of the Dublin rioters. I will heartily join with Sir Edward in the hope that the situation will not be taken advantage of by any political party."

No Signs of Internal Strife.

The premier was manifestly elated over these expressions of loyalty. He took occasion later to refer to them as an assurance to Great Britain's allies that the Dublin revolt does not mean serious internal strife.

"Our allies," said he, "already have been made aware by Sir Edward Carson and Mr. Redmond that the movement is sectional only and has no sympathy from the representative Irish leaders."

The enthusiasm and comparative harmony provoked by the frank declarations from the lips of the two Irish "feudists" gradually subsided, and the criticism of the government was resumed. Finally Sir Henry Dalziel, Liberal member from Kirkcaldy burghs, requested that the house of commons sit on Monday to discuss the situation in Ireland, Premier Asquith having previously met pertinent questions by saying he did not deem it advisable "to debate the situation while the conflagration is raging."

KAISER AND GERARD TO CONFER ON NOTE

American Envoy Leaves For German Front.

Berlin, via Amsterdam, April 28.—Ambassador Gerard has left for general army headquarters to confer with the kaiser on the submarine question.

Germany's reply to President Wilson's U-boat "ultimatum" is expected to be framed immediately upon the return to Berlin of the imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, who, together with the chief of the German naval staff Admiral von Holtzendorf, has had extended conferences with the emperor at army headquarters.

Just when the reply will be dispatched to Washington is not yet decided. A good deal still depends upon the outcome of the conference between the American ambassador and the emperor. The journey to army headquarters takes twenty hours each way. The sending of the note therefore may be delayed until the beginning of next week.

Berlin hopes the crisis is past. Certainly the feeling is that the danger of a break with the United States has been averted.

Press comment has become more and more optimistic in the last few days, and even the extreme radical organs concede that a settlement of the submarine controversy satisfactory to both governments is possible without loss of honor or dignity to Germany.

Casement In Tower.

London, April 28.—Sir Roger Casement, who was arrested last week when he was attempting to land arms and ammunition from a German auxiliary on the coast of Ireland, will remain in the Tower, whither he was removed on April 25 from Brixton jail.

WILL REQUEST TROOPS' RECALL

Obregon to Deny Americans Are Needed.

DENIES CARRANZA BREAK

Scott and Funston Start For Conference at Juarez—Basis of Discussion Not Known—Not Believed Demand Will Be Made For Definite Time Limit For Pursuit.

Chihuahua, April 28.—That the Carranza forces are now fully able to cope with the Villa bandits operating in southern Chihuahua will be the burden of the argument of General Alvaro Obregon, minister of war of the de facto government, when he meets in conference at Juarez or El Paso with Major Generals Scott and Funston. General Obregon said he hoped to arrange for an early retirement of the American troops.

Before his departure for Juarez, General Obregon, who was accompanied by General Jacinto Trevino, Carranza commander at Torreon, outlined the official proposals he intends to submit to Generals Scott and Funston. Incidentally the Mexican minister of war denied reports that there was friction between himself and General Venustiano Carranza.

Regarding the coming conference General Obregon said:

"I am going to Juarez to convince the American representatives that our army is more than amply sufficient to control the small groups of Villa bandits which are still at large and outside the law. I hope to arrange for the prompt retirement of the American troops into their own country."

General Obregon was emphatic in denouncing the reports circulated in the United States that he had broken with the first chief.

"I wish emphatically to deny the inventions of the American yellow press, which has insinuated there is friction between myself and General Carranza," he said. "I wish further to state that there is perfect harmony among all the chiefs of the Constitutionalist cause."

Scott and Funston on Way.

San Antonio, Tex., April 28.—Major General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the army, is on his way to El Paso to discuss with General Alvaro Obregon, Carranza's minister of war, questions incident to the presence of American troops in Mexico. General Scott left here accompanied by Major General Frederick Funston.

Just what Generals Scott and Funston were to discuss with General Obregon remained unknown here, but little credence was given to the unofficial report that General Obregon was prepared to demand that a definite time be set for the withdrawal of the American troops. It was regarded as likely that throughout the conference General Obregon and General Scott would communicate at intervals with their respective governments.

It was believed here that the conference probably would take place in Juarez, the Mexican town opposite El Paso. It is understood that the United States government has no objection to Generals Scott and Funston meeting the Mexican representatives on Mexican soil, and it was realized that General Obregon might not care to carry on the discussion on American soil.

General Funston is acquainted with General Obregon, but General Scott has never seen him.

FAILS TO GET IGEL PAPERS.

Count Von Bernstorff Makes Written Demand For Them.

Washington, April 28.—Count von Bernstorff has made a formal written demand upon the state department for the return of the papers which agents of the department of justice seized from Wolf von Igel, attache of the German embassy and formerly secretary to Captain von Papen.

The ambassador conferred with Counselor Polk on the matter. The conference was described as informal. Apparently it led to no results, for the ambassador did not get the papers, nor did he appear overconfident of getting them pending a demand which the German imperial government will later make upon the United States. Counselor Polk had promised to send the papers to the embassy for the ambassador, but there now appears to have been a change of plan.

mother, sons and daughters once each day in prayer. Many of these cards were signed and will be sent to the headquarters of the league in Chicago. Today the flowers that were used in decorating the Tabernacle yesterday will be made into bouquets and sent to "shut-ins" and sick of the city.

Before his sermon of last night Dr. Beiderwolf said that three local people had called on him recently asking retraction of some things he said in his lecture on "Russellism" last Sunday afternoon. He did make one correction. A statement published in the local papers had bee put out of the lecture, he said, but the mistake was not that of the paper. It had printed the lecture as given out by the evangelist.

The conference he had with the followers of "Pastor" Russell amounted to nothing, said the evangelist. "They just at up about an hour and a half of my time and we got nowhere."

Says Russell Spread a Lie.

"I asked them if Russell taught that God created Jesus Christ, and they said he did. I asked them if he taught that Jesus Christ was a man, and they said he did. I asked them if he taught that Jesus got his divine nature after the Resurrection, and they said he did. I asked them if they would put their signatures to this and put it in the paper, and they said they would, but they backed out."

Dr. Biederwolf said they had failed to understand one statement that he made. "They say they can't seet it," he exclaimed. "Well, I can't give them a brain tonic or perform an operation above their eyes."

"Now that they have got on their head about this thing, I have a picture here I want to show you," and he held up a small circular. "On it," he said, "was reproduced three temples advertised by 'Pastor' Russell. One was in Brooklyn, the other in London and the other bore the name 'Washington Temple' and a picture of Russell. The building last named was the Masonic Temple in Washington," he explained and then said, "It is a lie, pure and simple. A man who would do that might do other things." He begged his audience and seemed to believe there were followers of "Pastor" Russsll there, to give up "this pernicious and damnable teaching."

Mr. McEwan sang "If You Love Your Mother Meet Her in the Skies," and the National Male Quartet sang a number of pleasing selections.

Judge William N. Runyon made a plea for a more generous giving in asking for the collection. His address appealed to all Plainfielders to do their share in the great work by giving even to the point of sacrifice, as the widow who gave her mite and of whom God said "She did what she could."

A number of members of the Presbytery of Elizabeth, with their friends occupied seats of honor on the platform.

In his welcome to the delegation from the International Motor Company, Dr. Biederwolf said that "The page we have written in history in regard to labor is not the one God would have us write." He admitted that the laboring man did not receive a fair share of the wealth he created, not even half, and declared himself a friend of the man with the dinner pail. The delegation sang two verses of "He Included Me."

PLEASURE PROMOTERS TO ATTEND REVIVAL SERVICE

The Plainfield Pleasure Promoters will give its weekly dance at Watchung tomorrow evening. Owing to the fact that last Sunday was Easter, the club cancelled all festivities. The club is making arrangements to attend the Tabernacle services conducted by Dr. Biederwolf, in a body. The Promoters is a social club composed of young and married couples, who gather for the sole purpose of new acquaintanceship and sociability. The club was organized by Charles P. Freligh, pianist and assistant manager at the Astor Theatre, and the membership is growing very fast and there is no doubt that the dance Saturday evening will bring together at least two hundred people. Anyone is welcome to see how successful the affair is conducted.

PITTSBURG STREET CAR MEN VOTE FOR STRIKE

Pittsburgh, April 28.—Street car men of Pittsburgh voted 100 to 1 at an all night session, the result of which was announced this morning to empower their leaders to call a strike unless the Pittsburgh Railway Company has granted their demands Sunday midnight.

PROHIBITIONISTS TO DINE.

A banquet for the Prohibitionists of Union county and their friends will be held on Friday evening, May 5, at 7:15 o'clock, in Emmet Thomas's parlors, 287 North Broad street, Elizabeth, opposite postoffice. George B. Harger, of New York, will be the speaker. State Chairman Donald MacMillan will be the toastmaster. County Chairman Eugene A. Smith has issued a call for the same time and place for the Union elect delegates to the State Convention to be held in Trenton on Tuesday, May 16.

It was indeed "Mother's Day" at the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon, as one would certainly realize when they looked down upon the sea of mothers' faces. The older mothers were seated comfortably in rocking chairs directly in front of the beautifully decorated pulpit. These old ladies were brought in automobiles which were loaned by many of the kind people of Plainfield.

The quartet sang some selections which were greatly appreciated.

Dr. Biederwolf said the platform was decorated the prettiest of any he had ever seen. He expressed his appreciation to Mr. Stanley, who had so kindly loaned many of the Easter lillies palms and other potted plants.

"Mac" sang "Memories of Mother."

Dr. Biederwolf wanted to know where the mothers came from and asked them to name the State or the country, not mentioning the same place twice. The result was that twenty-four States and eighteen countries were found to be represented.

It was interesting and impressive to hear the older mothers name and start to sing some of the real old hymns which were so dear to them.

Mrs. S. W. Batchelor, of 826 West Seventh street, received a beautiful bouquet of flowers, as she was the oldest lady present, nearly ninety-two years old.

"Mac" wished to introduce a new song, so he, Mr. Sluyter, who was selling books in the audience, and "Sunny Jim" Heaton, who was sitting at the left of the pulpit, each took a turn at the chorus, which was then taken up by the chorus choir. In the meantime the International Motor Company, headed by the Dutch Arms Band, marched into the Tabernacle to the tune of "Colonel Miner's March."

Members of the Presbytery of Elizabeth and friends were present.

The International Motor Company received a great innovation as they were seated, and had every reason to believe that they were welcome to the Tabernacle. The men appreciated the reception, of Mr. McEwan they sang two verses and the chorus of "He Included Me."

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie led in the opening prayer.

Of course the quartet pleased the audience. They sang "While the Years Are Rolling By."

Assemblyman William N. Runyon had something to say. He said it, too. Something about that little thing which we care so little for, that is, MONEY.

Just before Mr. McEwan sang a solo, Dr. Biederwolf made the men from the I. M. Co. feel at home by his hearty welcome.

COPY BOY MADE GREAT AUTHOR

TOLD BY FELLOW REPORTER

Lively Irish American Youngster, Full of Tricks and Quaintness, Furnished Story Writer With Theme That Eventually Brought Fame and Fortune—Davis' Rise Phenomenal.

Richard Harding Davis did not allow his literary ambition to slamber while he was a member of the Press staff, says J. O. G. Duffy of the Philadelphia Press, writing of the well known author, who died recently. One day Robert Neilson Stephens, later to become distinguished as a playwright and novelist, told me that he had been breakfasting with Dick Davis, who had read him a story intended for a magazine. I asked him what it was about. "It's about Gallagher," answered Stephens. This was as much as I could persuade him to confide to me. He told me, however, how agreeable Davis was in his home and of his playing the banjo and singing, some of the songs being of his own composition.

At that time one of the little fellows employed as "copy boys" on the Press was the redoubtable Gallagher. He was a lively Irish American youngster, full of tricks and quaintness. His work was really on the fourth floor of the old Press building at Seventh and Chestnut streets. But he would steal an occasional five or ten minutes to go down to the reporters' room on the third floor to entertain the men who gathered there with his racy remarks and general antics. One of his accomplishments was a sort of clog dance executed on top of a table. It was a most cheerful sight to see his bright eyes and beaming countenance when he burst in among the reporters with information which he had gathered from the telegraph room and cried, "Gentlemen, I has de honor to announce dat de Phillies winned de game." His munificent patron was no other than Richard Harding Davis, for whom the urchin had a great liking. He never suspected and Davis never hinted that the well groomed reporter was making a careful study of Gallagher and that the result would prove the stepping stone of a distinguished career in literature.

"Gallagher" was not published until after the author had gone to live in New York. No doubt it was much revised and rewritten until Davis became satisfied with it. Its instant success and the rapidity with which Richard Harding Davis forged to the front in popularity as a writer of short stories need not be recapitulated. His rise was without a parallel in his own generation. The scene of that first story was laid in the Press office. As I have shown, the little hero of "Gallagher" was a real boy of that name.

And now for the first time is published the story of "The Return of Gallagher." It might have been four or five years after the boy's disappearance from this office. One night between 9 and 10 o'clock a stranger mounted the rickety stairs to the fourth floor. Two or three of the men employed there in his time remained, and I happened to come in from another department. There stood a young fellow of perhaps eighteen or nineteen, growing out of his clothes. His face gave evidence of the truth that "life is real, life is earnest" for the youth who must work.

He walked into the office a little way and paused a moment. A diffident grin illuminated his features. He seemed to be looking for some one he knew. No one paid a great deal of attention to him, and after a time he walked over to where Hamilton Peltz, the news editor, was seated.

Friendly as Ever.

"Hello, Mr. Peltz!" he said.

Peltz was absorbed in copy and hardly glanced up.

"Hello," he said affably and continued with his work.

"I guess you don't know me," the youth continued, with the grin still spreading over his face.

"No, I can't say that I do," Peltz replied, glancing up from his work.

"Well, I used to work here. I'm Gallagher."

Recognition came quickly, and those of us who had been on the paper when Gallagher was crowded about him, asking where he had been and what he was doing. After some conversation Gallagher looked about the office and said:

"Say, there used to be a bully fellow worked here. His name was Richard Harding Davis. Many a nickel and many a dime, too, he gave me for dancin' on the table in the city room and turnin' flipflaps. Is he still here?"

"What, haven't you heard?" we chorused. "Why, he left here long ago and has become a famous writer. He wrote a story about you. It made him famous."

"Aw, go on. What're you givin' us? What would he find about me to make a story of?" Gallagher asked.

We assured him it was the truth we told, but he was skeptical even after we showed him a copy of the book.

Finally we convinced him it was indeed he who was the hero of the book, and he left, taking the copy with him. That was the last ever seen of Gallagher in the office of the Press.

MRS. JULIA STEVENS.

Mrs. Julia E. Stevens, colored, aged 85 years, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Martin, of 414 East Fourth street. Death was due to the infirmities of age. Mrs. Stevens was born at Washington, D. C., but had resided in Plainfield nearly all her life. The funeral will be held at Mrs. Martin's residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 and burial will be in Evergreen cemetery.

PLAINFIELD A. A. TO RETIRE FROM LEAGUE

Baseball Organization Will Meet Tonight to Fill the Unexpected Vacancy.

Gifford Jones, who as the manager of the Plainfield A. A., entered that team in the City Baseball League and posted the names of his players at the league meting on Monday night, has given up the management, and it is reported that the team will disband. A special meeting of the league will be held tonight at the Plainfield Daily Press office to take action on the retirement of the Plainfield A. A., and the election of the Farmer A. C. to membership. It is understood that the latter team stands ready to take the place of the Plainfield A. A., and will assume its playing dates. This is quite important for otherwise there would be a serious hitch in the opening of the league tomorrow. The other five teams are all ready for tomorow's opening.

The disbandment of the Plainfield A. A. will permit those players to sign up with other teams in the league if they desire and the other managers want their services. Jones, it is said, has secured a position in Newark which will necessitate his removal from the city.

INSPECTORS INVESTIGATE LOCAL POSTAL CONDITIONS

Postal Inspectors Updyke and C. A. Larabee, the latter of this city, are spending several days in town investigating general conditions at the local postoffice with a view to improving the service. The inspectors are looking into every department, both as to the carrier service and the work inside the postoffice and it is possible that some suggestions will be made which will bring about the desired result.

For several months there have been complaints from time to time regarding the delivery of letters here and elsewhere and in many instances the cause of the delay could not be explained. Postmaster A. E. Hoagland is co-operating with the inspectors in an effort to arrive at some satisfactory conclusion.

SINGING SECTION WILL GIVE CONCERT ON MAY 30

The committee in charge of the arrangements of the concert to be given by the singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein met this week and decided to hold the concert on the evening of Decoration Day.

Henry Haurand this morning received a postal from Karl Deichmann, of New York city, stating that Emil Munch, who sings for the Victrola phonograph concern, has been engaged for the concert.

N. Goethe, the famous violinist, the leader of the Ritz-Carlton string band, and originally leader of the first cabin orchestra of the steamship Vaterland now interned in New York harbor, is also expected to consent to be present.

The committee will meet at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to arrange the program. The concert is given to defray the expenses of the singing section to the prize singing contest to be held at Carlstadt from July 2 to the fourth, inclusive.

NEW MARKET RIFLE CLUB ARE GUESTS OF COMPANY K

In response to an invitation extended by Captain Peterson and Lieutenant Littell, of Company K, who were present at a recent shoot on the range of the New Market Rifle Club, fifteen members of that club came to the company's armory last evening to receive instruction in the art of rifle handling. The instructor was First Sergeant George L. Apgar, who gave the visitors lessons in sighting, holding and work on the strap and information in general about rifle handling. The visitors accepted another invitation to come to the armory a week from Monday night to receive instruction from Captain Peterson and Lieutenant Littell. Sergeant Apgar classified the visitors as bright, intelligent fellows, and he said that several times during the evening he found himself instructing them about some procedure with which they were familiar.

Following the instructions given to the club members, the uniformed rank of Freedom Castle, K. G. E. Commandery Five, held a drill and a smoker. Captain Pratt was in charge of the drill. The commandery accepted an invitation to be present at the Tabernacle on Wednesday evening of next week, when Dr. Biederwolf will address the various fraternal organizations of this city and vicinity.

HALL IS DECORATED.

Saengerbund Hall was decorated this morning with the flags of all nation for the second annual ball of the Allied Trades of Plainfield, which is to be held there this evening. The music will be furnished by Squire's orchestra and Professor Valdes. M. V. Sutton is chairman of the committee in charge.

Miss Carrie J. Debele, of Philadelphia, is visiting her brother, W. G. Debele, of Somerset street.

SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MEN ASK AID FOR DEFENDERS OF VERDUN

Prominent Bankers, Diplomatist and Educator Appeal for Funds in the Name of the Suffering Soldiers of France--

The National Allied Relief Committee, co-operating with the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, is sending out what perhaps will be the most broadcast appeal yet issued on behalf of the war sufferers of Europe.

This appeal is for funds for the relief of the soldiers of France wounded in the fighting around Verdun.

What lends additional interest to this appeal is the fact that it is signed by six of the most prominent men in America. Those who signed it are: August Belmont of the banking firm bearing his name; Hon. Jos. H. Choate, Ex-Ambassador to England; Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank; Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, and Henry L. Higginson of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Company, Boston.

It is anticipated that the contributions received from this wide-spread appeal will be devoted also to relief work among a large number of wounded resulting from the greatly increased activities of the contending armies.

The appeal is reproduced herewith.

COOK & WILSON SHOW IN PLAINFIELD MAY 19

Wild Animal Organization Will Use New Lot on Arlington Avenue.

Local interest will be aroused by the announcement that Cook & Wilson's greatest wild animal circus is to exhibit at Arlington avenue and Rose street in this city on Friday, May 19. Cook & Wilson opened at Trenton on Wednesday with everything new. They announce a performance given largely by wild animals, captured in their native wilds and trained with the utmost difficulty by men and equally fearless women, who constantly risk life and limb in keeping their ferocious pupils under subjection. There is no "dead wood" in the Cook & Wilson exhibition, for every animal in the zoological collection carried by the show is trained and contributes its share toward making the performance the most interesting display of its kind ever organized. Many of the "tricks" performed by these jungle beasts are described as almost incredible. A company of tigers and pumas work together in apparently friendly rivalry under the eye of their watchful trainer; leopards, jaguars and other fierce wild beasts go through an intricate program and a school of bears exhibit marvelous intelligence in what is described as the most remarkable act of its kind ever seen in this country. All these big wild animal numbers are given in a colossal steel arena, so strongly constructed as to obviate any possible danger to the audience. In the rings, schools of elephants, horses and ponies give novel and surprising performances of trained intelligence, and for good measure, there is an exceptionally clever arenic performance, in which scores of the world's greatest aerialists, riders, acrobats and other circus stars appear. The performances take place at 2 and 8. There is a preliminary concert by Al. J. Massey's splendid military band, and, in the morning, at 10:30, a magnificent free street parade.

500 REBELS DIE IN FIERCE BATTLE

Carranza Troops Victorious in Fight Between Large Forces.

Mexico City, April 28.—In a battle between 6,000 rebels and the Constitutionalist army, just north of the city of Oaxaca, the rebels were defeated with a loss of 500 men killed and many wounded or taken prisoners, according to a message received at the War Department from Oaxaca.

The battle line extended over a front of fifteen kilometers, at the foot and on the slopes of Sierra de Ixtla. The fighting lasted five hours before the insurgents were forced to flee into the mountains.

The Constitutionalist troops were commandedd by General Castro, who is pursuing the rebels.

A despatch from Durango tells of the defeat of the bandit chieftain, General Felix Guzman, by Major Martinez of General Eduardo Hernandez's brigade of the Constitutionalists. The fighting lasted three hours and took place near Hacienda de Santa Cruz. The bandits lose twenty-six men killed. Ammunition, guns, thirty horses and a car of corn were captured.

125,000 MAY GO ON STRIKE IN N. Y.

Cloak and Skirt Workers Persist in Demands on Employers.

New York, April 28.—The long-threatened lock-out of more than half the 60,000 cloak and skirt workers in Manhattan and the Bronx will take place either today or tomorrow, probably not until tomorrow morning. On the exact time the lock-out goes into operation the Employers' Association is silent. But that there is no chance of Mayor Mitchel's Board of Conciliation being able to move the employers from their present intention is evidenced by a statement givenotu today in which they decline to budge.

Expecting the lock-out, Ben Schlesinger, president of the International Garment Workers of America, which is the official union of the cloak and suit workers, announced today that the war was on and that the employers' lock-out will be followed by a general strike next Monday morning. All told, May Day will see not less than 125,000 idle men and women in the city, including carpenters, painters, metal workers, suit and cloak makers, and workers in other industries. The police department is making arrangements to prevent disturbances.

BOROUGH COURT CASES.

John Filmore, 43 years old, an old offender about town, was arrested by Officer Pope in a helpless condition in front of the residence of Henry De Mott, on Somerset street, yesterday afternoon. His condition was such that it was necessary for the officer him to the borough jail. When ar him to the borough pail. When arraigned before Recorder Hand this morning he was given a sentence of 90 days, which was suspended upon condition that he leave town for good.

John Anderson, of Berkeley Heights, arrested by Officer Pope for begging from house to house along Rockview avenue, was also released upon condition that he leave town for good.

SUGAR TAKES A JUMP.

The sugar refineries have advanced the wholesale price of sugar 15 cents per hundred pounds, it was announced today by a local merchant. This makes the price of cane sugar $8.15 and beet $7.95. These prices are reported to be the highest in the history of the local market. A number of the local retail stores which stocked up with sugar at much lower quotations are still selling sugar at the rate of $7.40 per hundred pounds.

PREPARING FOR SOCIAL DANCE

A social dance will be given in Moose Hall on West Front street on Friday night, May 5, under the auspices of some of the former members of the Yama Yama Club. Charles Pagliucca is chairman of the committee completing arrangements.

KLOVER CLUB DANCE.

The Klever Klover Club, the membership of which is composed of young people of this city and vicinity, held a dance in Debele's Hall last evening. The affair was wel lattended. Music was furnished by Berrill's orchestra, of Bernardsville.

George Scales, of Rahway, was taken ill while performing his duties in the printing office of W. J. Trembath this morning and obliged to go home.

Romance of a Railway.

The Uganda railway possesses a history unrivaled for romance. Not only does it run through wild jungle, traverse lofty viaducts thrown across deep gorges and climb mountain passes to a height of 8,300 feet, but in its early days it received far too many unwelcome attentions from the natives. It was found that coils of telegraph wire became quite the rage in feminine fashions, while in the hands of sturdy warriors bolts and nuts became formidable weapons. The floods of the rainy season are now the only untoward occurrences that break the ordinary routine of the line. — London Chronicle.

FUNERALS BY AEROPLANE MAY BE ATTEMPTED SOON

Biplanes to Take Place of Hearses if Plans of Undertaker Materialize.

Funerals in the air are to be the next innovation to which the aeroplane is to be turned. To be in style one must make arrangements to have the mortal remains carried on a swift and somber hued biplane to the final resting place, and the first aerial cortege will probably be seen in New York within a comparatively short time.

So announced the head of a funeral company, at a dinner of the Aeronautical Society of America the other evening. He added that he intended to be the first to cater to the coming demand, and his new establishment is to be fitted with a landing stage for air craft on the roof and all conveniences for mourners who wish to make the trip.

"They laughed when we first talked of motor funerals to supersede the old hearses," he said, "and they may laugh at this. But it's coming, and I'm going to be the first in the new line."

A. Leo Stevens, the dirigible aviator, is working on the plan, and arrangements are being made with an aeroplane construction company for the services of several weight carrying machines until the company can furnish a flotilla of its own. Frederick W. Barker, president of the society, indorsed the plan by remarking that "it was another of the revolutionary plans for utilizing the aeroplane that, while startling, should be perfectly feasible."

TOMMY TELLS OF WAR.

Paints Vivid Picture of Suffering of Men in Trenches.

"Mix heaven and hell; add earth, occasional glimpses of sky; much blood, continuously flowing; flesh, almost beyond recognition as human flesh, and, above all and with all, multitudinous modicums of mud, and you begin to envisage war."

In these words Henry Logan, who was introduced as "a plain English Tommie from the trenches," endeavored to convey to members of the Thursday Morning Current Events club of Philadelphia a picture of the great conflict that is convulsing Europe at present.

The battle of Loos furnished illustrations for the spectacle that Private Logan sought to convey. In this engagement 1,250 men of the battalion to which he was attached were ordered to charge by an officer who later faced a court martial as the result of his stupidity.

"In a minute," Logan said, "we were tangled up in the enemy's entanglements. Of those 1,250 who went in fifty got back to the trenches. I was one of the fortunate few, but I was temporarily blind, and later I was discharged as unfit for further service. But if I was blind I was not deaf, and the moans of those who lay out there between the lines for the next two days will never be forgotten so long as memory remains to me."

Kinsey is about seventy-five years old and holds the record for length of service with transatlantic lines. He has been a purser for more than fifty years, during which time he has visited nearly every country on the globe and has encircled the world several times. He will retire to his home in Southampton, where Mrs. Kinsey is awaiting him.

SCENTING A CRIME

How a Russian Police Inspector Formulated a Theory.

WORKING UP A MURDER CASE.

He Made All the Known Facts in the Case Fit Into Each Other Perfectly and Then Proceeded to Demonstrate His Accuracy of Deduction.

We are not encouraged to believe that the Russian police inspector is the equal of the trained French official if Anton Chekhoff's story of the deductive method in Russia is illustrative.

One morning a young man hurried into the office of an inspector of police and reported that his master, an officer of the guard who had been separated from his wife and lived alone, had been murdered. He was greatly excited. The inspector went with him at once to the scene of the tragedy.

When he arrived at the house he found the door to the officer's bedroom locked, the key on the inside. The servants, unable to awake their master, had concluded that he was dead. The inspector found the door uninjured. He had it forced open. The bed had been tossed about, the pillows on the floor. On a table near the bed was the officer's watch and some silver coins. The officer and his clothing were gone except for a single boot that lay on the floor. The inspector examined the room carefully. The only thing he found was a partly burned safety match. It was known that the officer did not smoke and used only sulphur matches for his candles. He examined the garden below the window. The grass and some bushes had been trampled. He found a piece of cotton on some twigs and some fine threads of dark blue wool. At some distance from the window, in the garden under a bush, he found the second top boot.

The inspector came to the conclusion, from the evidences, that the man had been strangled and his body taken out through the window.

The fact that the watch and money were undisturbed showed that the purpose of the crime was not robbery. The safety match indicated that some person above the ordinary was connected with the affair, since peasants or common servants would have only sulphur matches. The fact that one boot remained in the room made the inspector believe that the guardsman had been killed while he was undressing. The finding of the other boot in the garden indicated that this one had been partly removed and had fallen off while the body was being carried away.

The inspector in his report reconstructed the crime: On the evening in question the guardsman, who had been on a prolonged debauch, went to his room drunk. As he sat on his bed, taking off one of his boots, he had been attacked and smothered with the pillow. During the struggle the candle was knocked over and afterward one of the assassins relighted it, striking a safety match. When the man was dead his body had been taken out through the window and carried across the garden. As it passed the lilac bush the remaining boot, partly removed by the man before he was attacked, dropped off.

The inspector, having arrived at this deduction, determined to locate the safety match. He went to all the shops in every direction, but not one of them carried in its stock such a thing as a box of safety matches. Finally, at some distance from the scene of the tragedy, he found a shopkeeper who had a single pack of such matches. It was a broken pack, with one box missing. The shopkeeper remembered precisely who had purchased this missing box. It was the wife of the guardsman, a big, masculine woman of unusual physical strength. She lived near the apartment in which the guardsman had been murdered. It was now night, but the inspector went at once to the woman and charged her with the murder of her husband.

"I know all about it," he said. "Take me at once to the place where you have concealed your husband!"

She got a key from a nail on the wall and went out into the courtyard. The inspector followed. They finally reached a little house at the end of the garden. The woman unlocked the door and they entered. By the light of a candle the inspector saw the long body of a man lying motionless on a bed in the corner of the room. He approached to examine the murdered body.

But here his deductions went to pieces. The supposed dead man sat up, and the explanation of all the tragic incidents appeared. The guardsman was going to bed every night drunk. His wife heard of it and went across the garden to his window to remonstrate with him. He put the window up and, seeing who it was, threw his boot at her. She was a resolute woman in masculine efficiency. She climbed in through the window, thrashed the drunken guardsman soundly, dragged him across the garden and locked him up in the bathhouse, where she determined to keep him until he should be sober. He had been thus a prisoner for one day, while with swift deductions the inspector had worked out his complicated murder.—Melville Davisson Post in Saturday Evening Post.

How the Memory of the Great Poet and Dramatist Is Honored By All Nations On April 23rd--the Ter-Centenary of His Death.

Copyright, 1916, by The International Syndicate.

What needs my Shakespeare for his honour'd bones,
The labor of an age in piled stones?
Or that his hallowed reliques should be hid
Under a star-y pointing pyramid?
Dear son of memory, great heir of fame,
What need'st thou such weak witness of thy name?
Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thyself a live-long monument.
For whilst to th' shame of slow endeavoring art
Thy easy numbers flow, and that each heart
Hath from the leaves of thy unvalued book
Those Delphic lines with deep impression took,
Then thou our fancy of itself bereaving,
Dost make us marble with too much conceiving;
And so sepulcher'd in such pomp dost lie
That Kings for such a tomb would wish to die.
—Milton's Epitaph on Shakespeare.

SHAKESPEARE, perhaps the greatest dramatist of all time, has been honored every theatrical season in every large commercial center of the English speaking races for a century or more. The interest in his great works has grown and his genius more widely and more genuinely appreciated. As the three hundredth anniversary of his death approached it was planned to accentuate his place in the great histrionic art by having a special celebration of his name by special productions of his great plays in every important part of the world. This was not surprising, for he wrote, as all great men do, not for his age and race but for all time and for all people. He belongs to the world of literature and his portrayal of human character is more or less an interpretation of the human instincts of all civilized nations, and a recognition of this was to be exemplified by a union of all these nations in doing homage to the memory of this truly illustrious man. But the war of the European powers has interfered with this plan and in consequence the celebration will be restricted in its extent, and it is feared much less elaborate and enthusiastic in the manner in which it will be done.

Shakespeare in Germany.

Celebrations of his supposed birthday have been held in both England and Germany for the past quarter of a century, for Germany knows his works quite as well as England. The German stage has treated him far more reverently than the theatres in England or in America, and the German people have ten times more opportunity to see the masterpieces of Shakespeare than have the people of London or New York. In Berlin and in Munich there is a Shakespeare season each year where one may see almost all his works, including "Measure for Measure," "Troilus and Cressida" and "Pericles," rarely, if ever, given in English-speaking countries. His memory has been honored in that land by the erection of a picturesque statue—the work of Otto Lessing. It stands in the city of Weimar and is one of the few statues which gives the poet a perfectly easy and natural pose.

In England the ter-centenary celebration will not be as elaborate as it would have been in times of peace, but the memory of the dramatist will not be neglected. Outdoor performances of such plays as "Mid-summer Night's Dream" and "As You Like It" will be given for the benefit of the wounded soldiers. At one or two of the beautiful country estates where these men are quartered there will be pageants showing the most notable characters of Shakespeare's plays. In London the clubs will celebrate, while at the schools appropriate entertainments will be given.

Celebration at Stratford.

The national celebration will be held at Stratford-on-Avon, the poet's birthplace, where young girls dressed to represent Shakespeare's heroines will dance around the Gower monument—that splendid memorial set up in honor of the bard. Stratford-on-Avon has for years been the mecca of the intellectual of all lands who come to wander about the birthplace of the man whose writings have been translated into every known language. It is a well known fact that more of his productions have been printed than any other book in the world excepting the Bible. The average number of persons wh pass through the door of Shakespeare's birthplace every year is thirty thousand, one-fourth of whom are Americans. The old house has been restored as far as possible and now belongs to the English Government. The poet was born in a small room facing the street which is the real show place of the house, although the kitchen and cellar are also well preserved. In the garden are flowers and trees mentioned in Shakespeare's plays. The site of "New Place," where the poet died, is also marked, as is Tudor House which was restored by Miss Marie Corelli, the noted writer.

Trinity Church, where the bard is buried, is charmingly situated amid trees on the banks of the Avon. The poet's grave inside the church is covered with a marble slab and above it is the bust by Gerard Johnson, executed soon after Shakespeare's death, and accepted by the children of the latter as an excellent portrait. Nearby is a window representing the Seven Ages, which was erected with the contributions of American visitors. The Shakespeare Memorial Building contains a theatre in which the annual memorial performance is held, a library of rare volumes of Shakespeare's works and a picture gallery containing the famous Droeshout portrait of the poet. The man who made this picture was Martin Droeshout, a Flemish engraver, who was still in his boyhood when Shakespeare died, and it is doubtful whether he ever saw the poet and the portrait was probably engraved from a painting which was recently brought to light at Stratford. "The Ely House" portrait, a more pleasing picture, hangs in the birthplace. It was formerly the property of a Bishop of Ely and was painted in the seventeenth century.

Nearby is the magnificent statue presented to the town of Stratford in 1888 by the sculptor Lord Ronald Gower. The top is surmounted by a colossal figure of the poet, and around the base are figures of Lady Macbeth (representing Tragedy), Prince Hal (History), Falstaff (Comedy) and Hamlet (Philosophy). There is also a fountain and clock tower presented to the town in 1887 by an American whose name does not appear on the gift. Charlecote, the scene of the poaching incident which started the poet on his journey to London, is a few miles away, as is the cottage where the poet courted his wife, Anne Hathaway.

The monument to Shakespeare in the Poet's Corner in Westminster Abbey was placed there by popular subscription in 1741. It is nearly always wreathed in flowers. In the National Portrait Gallery in London hangs the famous Chandos portrait of Shakespeare. It shows important variations from the portrait bust owned by the Garrick Club and the Droeshout engraving, and was probably painted not many years after the poet's death from descriptions furnished by his friends. The Zoust portrait came to light in 1725, and several others, such as the Janson portrait and the Felton portrait, all show variations from the Droeshout picture—so, after all, we can only imagine what manner of man the Bard of Avon was in appearance. There is also a death mask which resembles a portrait owned by the Kesselstadt family, but neither portrait nor mask has been proven to resemble the poet.

Honored in Denmark, France and Italy.

Denmark, Hamlet's land, has honored Shakespeare by a splendid memorial showing the poet seated in a large stone chair. The figure is both colossal and dignified. It stands in Copenhagen and is the work of L. Hasselriis. There will be an elaborate presentation of Hamlet in that city in honor of the ter-centenary anniversary.

In France the people are holding a series of lectures on the art of Shakespeare, and in Paris they are especially well attended. Literary clubs are planning banquets with readings from Macbeth, Hamlet and Julius Caesar. In the rural districts the school children will give a series of pageants. At Bordeaux they will present one or two plays with elaborate staging.

In Italy several of the operas inspired by Shakespeare's works will be produced. Gounod's "Romeo and Juliette" will be given with an all-star caste, while "Otello" and "Falstaff" will also be sung. Italian admirers of Shakespeare will have a banquet.

In Holland the Shakespeare Club will celebrate the day by a dinner and readings from some of his plays. They will also send a wreath to his grave at Stratford-on-Avon.

In Japan.

Even in far away Japan there will be an outdoor performance of "As You Like It" given in Japanese. All of the Shakespeare plays have been translated into the Japanese language and have become the basis of the drama course in the schools. At Tokio, Yokahoma and Kioto a Shakespeare play will be given by native actors.

Greatest Celebrations Here.

For more than ten years the Shakespeare societies of our country have been preparing for the ter-centenary. Their celebration will not end on April twenty-third, as we shall likely have elaborate Shakespearean productions throughout the year. Already we have been treated to a notable production of Macbeth and The Merry Wives of Windsor by American players, and Henry the Eighth with Sir Herbert Tree as Cardinal Woolsey. America is fortunate in having this distinguished player "in our midst" as he is recognized as perhaps the best portrayor of Shakespearean characters, appearing on the stage today. He has also put on a moving picture Macbeth on a most elaborate scale. Perhaps the greatest of all the celebrations will be those held by the public school children everywhere from the Atlantic to the Pacific. More than fifty thousand schools have special programs arranged for the week in which the anniversary occurs. They range from a simple reading of a play to the most elaborate pageant.

There are several statues erected in memory of the poet in this country, the finest one being on the Mall in Central Park, New York City. This is one of the best works of John Q. A. Ward. It will be wreathed in flowers on Anniversary Day.

After three hundred years the real greatness of Shakespeare is fully recognized, men and women of all nations are proud to do him homage, and in the language of one of our noted writers, "one cannot conceive of any future state of civilization where he will not reign supreme as the literary idol, for his soul is in men's hearts."

THE day of Shakespeare's birth cannot be exactly ascertained. The inscription on his monument says he died on April 23rd, 1616, in the fifty-third year of his age. Tradition has fixed the same date as his birthday.

He was the son of John and Mary Arden Shakespeare, who lived on Henley street in the little English town of Stratford-on-Avon. Their home was a poor one, and the room in which the great poet was born was poorly furnished, its walls were white-washed and its ceiling consisted of uncovered rafters. His father married Mary Arden, the daughter of a well-to-do farmer, in 1557, and was at that time a bailiff and a glove maker. The wife inherited a small sum of money from her father and with this they purchased the home where their gifted son was born.

After a time unprosperous times came to the Shakespeare family and the father tried various ways of making a living, such as dealing in corn and timber, and finally opening a butcher shop. William was the third child. His early life was passed like the village boys of that age, and history does not record an act which would set him apart from other lads of his age. He attended the public school of the village and was studious, learning Greek and Latin. One of his biographers describes him as a "chestnut-haired, fair, brown-eyed boy, good humored and ever ready to wait upon his parents." Owing to the financial reverses of his father young William was forced to leave school at the age of fifteen and assist his father in the butcher shop. Aubrey in his biography asserts that the lad often assisted in the killing of the sheep and calves offered for sale. The father was compelled to mortgage his property. Taxes were unpaid and finally the property went under the hammer. The young man then became a clerk in an attorney's office, and how well he spent his time there is exhibited in his remarkable knowledge of law as shown in his writings.

Married at Eighteen.

At the age of eighteen he married Anne Hathaway, one of the daughters of a farmer of Shottery, a little village within a mile of Stratford. This lady was eight years his senior. Three children came of the union, two of whom survived their father. The couple lived in a picturesque cottage, but not altogether happily, according to Shakespeare's biographers. Strolling players frequently came to the village and the young man took an active interest in their performances and soon came to know the old English comedies and also the "stage business" of the performers. He often wished to go to London, but with a family dependent upon his slender purse it was next to impossible for him to leave his work even for a few days. A poaching expedition, however, settled the matter. It seems that he went with some others on a poaching trip to the deer park at Charcote and was recognized and about to be arrested. In revenge he made a ballade on the owner which caused that gentleman to redouble his persecution of young Shakespeare to such an extent that the young man was obliged to leave that part of the country or to spend some time in jail as the laws against poaching at that time were severe. He left his family at Warwickshire and started for London, the land of opportunity which his genius demanded.

Goes to London.

On reaching the city he found himself practically penniless and for a time he eked out a living by holding the horses of gentlemen outside the theatre. Some time later he seems to have found some of his strolling player friends who helped him to obtain work in a printing establishment. But this did not satisfy his ambition, and through his acquaintance with James Burbage he managed to get a part on the stage. Queen Elizabeth loved the play and was an enthusiastic patron of the player. Little wooden theatres began to spring up in various parts of London and were crowded to their capacity. Shakespeare, although he continued to act upon the stage until a few years before his death, never attained very much prominence as a player.

In 1593 his first work appeared in the shape of a narrative poem, "Venus and Adonis," dedicated to the Earl of Southampton, the poet's patron and friend. "Lucrece" followed a year later and was dedicated to the same nobleman.

First Play.

It is not certain at what date Shakespeare's career as a dramatic author began, as his earliest dramatic exercise seems to have been whipping into shape for the stage plays which were out of date. It is generally conceded that "Love's Labor Lost" was his first original play and after that he turned out plays rapidly.

In 1596, after an absence of ten years, he returned to Stratford and purchased valuable lands and assisted his father in rebuilding his fortune. About this time Hamnet, the only son of the poet, died. After John Shakespeare, his father, had received material aid he set about to obtain a coat of arms. The son was now a rising author in favor at Court and the father began to search the family tree for ancestors who had done good service for the Crown. After awhile he discovered that one of his forefathers had done service for King Henry the Seventh, and the crest was forthcoming. Two years later the poet was styled "gentleman" in a legal document. Shakespeare's prosperity continued, and a year later he purchased a house at "New Place" and set about to make it one of the show places of that time. This property passed into the possession of his daughter Susannah, who became the wife of an eminent physician. This house is now used as a museum for Shakespeare relics.

Loved His Birthplace.

The poet loved his birthplace and frequently visited the village where he had now become a man of importance, in fact so important that his neighbors began to ask him for loans, some of which are still unpaid. Unlike most men of artistic temperament, he was a fairly good business man, a shrewd bargainer and a tax dodger of the keenest type, for he actually evaded the restrictions against brewing malt liquor for his private use. His wife's debts he left unpaid and was careless about his own. He was continually in litigation with somebody. As there was no copyright at that time the poet refused to have his plays published as he feared this might lessen their financial value to his company.

Aubrey, who was his earliest biographer, declares that he was "a handsome, well shaped man, modest and amiable and otherwise gentlemanly." From 1595 until his death he divided his time between London and Stratford, coming to the latter place to rest and perhaps to get atmosphere for his work, for in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and the "Taming of the Shrew" his references to the part of the country in which he spent his boyhood days are unmistakable. "As You Like It," too, is a play of pastoral lovers, the heroine of which Shakespeare has made one of the most enchanting women of literature.

A Favorite at Court.

He was frequently called to Court in reference to new plays and there is a tradition that Queen Elizabeth was so delighted with the humor of Falstaff in "Henry IV." that she commanded Shakespeare to continue the story and show Falstaff in love, and "The Merry Wives of Windsor" was written. So eager was the Queen to see the play that she commanded the poet to have it ready in fourteen days. Her request was fulfilled, but many Shakespearean scholars declare that on account of its being so hurriedly written the humor of Falstaff lacks the spontaneity and freshness of the Falstaff of "Henry IV."

His "Merchant of Venice" was written when the Jew was contemptible in the mind of Western Europe, where he was regarded as the personification of greed. Today the tragic figure of Shylock is one of the most commanding characters in dramatic art.

Toward the close of her reign the Queen became exacting and suspicious, continually finding fault with the new plays. When "Richard the Second" was put on she plainly showed her dislike for the theme. But back of this dislike for the play was her anger at its author for his friendship for Essex, whom she had sent to the block, and Southampton, whom she condemned to life imprisonment. These men were his friends and their downfall weighed so heavily on his mind that when the Queen died in 1603 he alone of all the poets remained silent when poetic eulogies were filling the air. Shakespeare's favorite child had died in 1596, and in 1601 his father, to whom he was devoted, had been laid to rest in the little cemetery beside the Avon.

The early years of the seventeenth century were stormy ones for the poet and he was now in the mood for turning out tragedies. "Julius Caesar" was written during the closing years of Elizabeth's reign, and "Coriolanus" was finished shortly after her death. "Hamlet" followed, and is said to be taken from a folk tale of Northern Europe of the fifteenth century. Shortly after the accession of James I he showed favor to several actors, among whom was Shakespeare, and when "Othello" was presented he asked that others be given.

"Macbeth" was completed in 1606, and its Scottish background shows the suggestion of King James. "King Lear" was his next work, and in this the dramatist mounted to the sublimest heights of dramatic creation. Other plays followed in quick succession and Shakespeare's fame spread over the known world.

Retired at Forty-seven.

He left London and returned to Stratford in 1611 with an ambition to become a country gentleman. He was but forty-seven years of age, but men grew old early in those days, and he felt that the time had come to retire. His sources of income had been from his plays, from his stock in the Globe Theatre, which unfortunately was destroyed by fire in 1613. He owned valuable land in Stratford from which he derived a good interest and one of his biographers is of the opinion that his income in later life was not less than fifteen thousand dollars per year. His family at that time consisted of his wife and two daughters. The oldest was already married to Doctor John Hall, and the second, Judith, wedded John Quincy, a wine merchant of Stratford, shortly before her father's death. Early in 1616 Shakespeare had a draft of his will prepared which he signed in March. It is related that he died on April 23rd, 1616, of "a feavour" after "a merry meeting" at Stratford with his old friend Ben Johnson and the poet Drayton. It is not unlikely that the cause of this fever was the unsanitary condition of the street in which he lived. Two days later he was buried inside the chancel of Holy Trinity Church. Over his grave are cut in stone lines that have become familiar to the English-speaking world:

"Good friend, for Jesus' sake forebeare
To dig the duste enclosed heare;
Bleste be the man that spares these stones
An curst be he that moves my bones."

WIDOW DIES MYSTERIOUSLY.

Woman In Contest Over Will Found Dead In Her Bed.

New Brunswick, N. J., April 28.—Mrs. Mildred Opie Willett, the young widow who has been the principal figure in a fight centering about the will of her septuagenarian husband, was found dead in bed. The case is given a mysterious aspect since only an hour before the discovery Mrs. Willett had been talking with friends in her room and seemed at the time to be in the best of health.

She married Willett two years ago when he was nearly seventy and she was twenty-five. A few months later he died. His heirs fought to break the will by which she inherited his large estate.

It is thought that heart failure may have been the cause, but Coroner Hubbard, who is making an investigation, refused to make any statement on the case.

GET BRITISH SHIP RULES.

Instructions Show Captains May Use Their Discretion.

Washington, April 28. — Secretary Lansing announced that he had received a copy of the British admiralty orders containing instructions governing the actions of British armed merchantmen on the high seas. The orders have an important bearing on the attitude of the United States, for the reason that the state department has defined what it considered as peaceable and also warlike merchant craft.

The British admiralty orders, which Secretary Lansing officially asked Great Britain to communicate, show conclusively that the merchant captain may use his discretion and surrender or resist. The orders are in reality instructions for the guidance of captains who elect to resist.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

SERVICE

A New Departure In Service

In line with our constant effort to be of service to our patrons, we have adopted a plan whereby we propose to pay our customers' household bills each month, charging the total to their account and doing away with all the bothersome detail that the householder experiences in paying from ten to thirty or more bills, monthly.

Under this plan the depositor sends us one check for the total of all the bills he or she wishes to pay, and we attend to the payment of the individual bills. In this connection we also propose to purchase commutation tickets for depositors, charging the amount to the depositor's account and delivering the ticket to the depositor a day or two before the first of the month, doing away with the inconvenience that he now experiences each time it is necessary to renew his ticket.

If you have no account with us at present, we will be glad to have you open a household account, that will enable you to take advantage of this service.

If any additional information is desired, it may be obtained at the bank, or our representative will call if you prefer. We feel sure that an investigation of this new system will speedily convince you of its many advantages.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by. The man who has a diploma from the School of Experience is pretty well fixed.

OBREGON DECLARES FOR WAR ON U. S.—VILLA BANDITS TAKE AND HOLD MILES OF AMERICAN SOIL

TOWN OF LA JITAS, TEXAS, RAIDED AND ROBBED BY BAND OF 500—NO RESISTANCE OFFERED.

SCOTT AND FUNSTON MEET MEXICAN LEADERS

"Get Out or Fight" is Ultimatum of Minister of War—Washington Hears News Officially, But Says Reports Have Not Been Confirmed—No Word From Villa is Received by the U. S. Soldiers.

Washington, April 29.—An official despatch received here today reported that 500 Villistas have crossed the Rio Grande and have captured the town of La Jitas, Texas... The report, which has not been confirmed, says that the town surrendered without a battle. The raiders are now said to be in possession of approximately twenty square miles of American territory.....

Obregon Ready to Fight.

E Paso, April 29.—General Obregon, it was stated on good authority here today, has promised his associates that he will declare war on the United States, ignoring General Carranza, unless General Scott and Funston agree to a withdrawal of the American troops from Mexico within thirty days.

The conferences between General Obregon, as the representative of the de facto government of Mexico, and Generals Scott and Funston, representing the United States, begin today.

General Obregon declares that he is confident that he will be able to convince the representatives of the United States that the American troops now in Mexico should be withdrawn at once, leaving further pursuit of Villa to Mexicans.

Generals Scott and Funston are equally confident that they will be able to convince General Obregon of the extreme desirability of the American forces under General Pershing remaining in Mexico, while the native soldiers show what they can do in the way of running Villa to earth.

General Obregon reached the border first. He prompty made known the nature of his mission in these words:

"I have come to try and convince the representatives of the United States Government that the forces of the de facto government are well able to finish up the work of exterminating the bandits who infest the country and to try to arrange for the prompt withdrawal of the American troops to their own territory."

General Scott and General Funston arrived later and the first question they asked was what General Obregon had said of the situation. When told, General Scott arched his eyebrows a bit and said:

"This should be a most interesting conference."

Genera Funston's jaw tightened just a bit, but he made no comment.

"IF SOME PEOPLE ARE TO BE SAVED THEY MUST CHANGE THEIR HITCHING POST" DECLARES DR. BIEDERWOLF

EVANGELIST DELIVERS SOUL-STIRRING DISCOURSE FROM THE TEXT, "RISE, TAKE UP THY BED AND WALK."

ATTENDANCE WAS 4,500; COLLECTION $129.25

Sunday School Class of Seven Boys From New Durham Among Those Who Give Their Hearts to Christ—Choir Presents Clifford A. Braider With Gold Watch and His Wife With a Beautiful Bouquet.

"If some of you people here tonight are going to be saved, you have got to change your hitching post, cut loose from your old companions and play quits with your besetting sins," said Rev. Dr. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle last night when he delivered one of his strongest, soul-stirring discourses from the text, "Rise, Take Up Your Bed, and Walk." "The best hymn that I know for some of you to sing is 'Asleep in Jesus, Blessed Sleep.' You are more concerned about your automobile, bridge whist and countless other pleasures than you are about your soul's salvation. Is it nothing to you that nearly two thousand people have walked down these sawdust aisles and given their lives to Christ."

At the close of the sermon which seemed to grip everyone present, more than one hundred persons, young and old, accepted the invitation of Dr. Biederwolf to either become Christians or reconsecrate their lives to Christ. Numbered among these was a Sunday-school teacher and his class of seven boys, who had driven to the Tabernacle from New Durham. The boys, the oldest of which was about fifteen years, walked down the aisle together, accompanied by their teacher, thereby signifying their desire to lead Christian lives. The sight was one that stirred the vast assemblage of nearly 4,000 people.

It was announced that last night was to be "surprise night," and it was in a way that the majority knew nothing about. Just before Dr. Biederwolf began to preach and at the conclusion of the song service, Ralph Martin, a member of the choir, stepped to the platform and, after a few appropriate remarks, presented Clifford A. Braider with a handsome gold watch, and his wife with a large bouquet.

The gift to Mr. Braider came from the large choir as an appreciation for his untiring efforts in organizing and training the chorus choir. Mr. Braider was so completely surprised that all he could say was: "When I say that I thank you from the depths of my heart, that only half expresses my feelings." Mrs. Braider also thanked the choir for its kind expression, after which there was loud and con-

WIN VOTES WITH TEA AND NOT BEER

Mrs. Feickert Tells Suffragists How to Get New Members.

The 100,000 members of the New Jersey Equal Suffrage League are pledged to make their membership 200,000 before the coming of a new year, and they are going to tempt prospective suffragists with pink tea, instead of with beer, as the men do, they announce.

The membership campaign was decided on at a meeting held in Orange, yesterday, and Mrs. E. F. Feickert, of Plainfield, president of the league, told the members how they could persuade others to join. She urged that the summer leisure hours be put in for the cause, saying that porch chats, with both parties comfortably seated in easy rockers, should be given over to the league this summer. She also urged members of the league to be more conspicuous at public gatherings, especially those of a patriotic nature, and to give teas for those not members of the league in winning them. Mrs. Feickert pointed out that male politicians won votes with beer, and she believes tea will be just as effective with women.

NEW YORK NOTES HIPPODROME TRIP

Herald Tells of the De Luxe Train for Monday Night.

Even New York is taking notice of the Monday night trip arranged by the Daily Press so that Plainfield people can see the Hippodrome show as is shown by the followig from this morning's New York Herald:

"Plainfield, N. J., is out for de luxe train service from this city after the theatre—long after the theatre, that is, so Plainfield's playgoers can hear and see a little of the attractions without worrying themselves blind from the rise of the curtain as to whether they will be able to get a bite of supper and still make the midnight train, or two bites of supper and make the 1 o'clock train.

"So a regular Broadway train, with perhaps a parlor car or two, specially chartered, will await the pleasure of some two hundred and fifty residents of Plainfield and its environs on next Monday after the performance of the 'second edition' of 'Hip, Hip, Hooray,' at the Hippodrome. Some progressive spirits of the neighboring State arranged the excursion to prove to the world and to the railroad that Plainfield folk would stay up really late at night if they were let.

DR. BIEDERWOLF WILL ADDRESS KING'S DAUGHTERS

The Plainfield City Union of King's Daughters will hold its annual meeting at the First Baptist church, Tuesday, May 9, at 2:30 o'clock. Dr. Biederwolf will lead the meeting and the National Quartet will render several vocal selections; Mrs. Brake will speak and Mr. McEwan will lead the singing. A feature of the meeting will be an address by the State president of King's Daughters, Mrs. Charles Menet, of East Orange.

A meeting of the trustees of the City Union will be held in the Day Nursery building at 502 West Front street, at 9:30 instead of 10 o'clock, Thursday morning, April 4. At 11 o'clock of the same morning the business portion of the annual meeting will be held. The annual reports of the Union will be submitted at the meeting to be held on May 9 in the First Baptist church.

DEATH SUMMONS SENATOR WELSH

Father of Mrs. Chalmers L. Crist Died Suddenly Last Night at German Valley.

WAS WELL KNOWN HERE

Served in State Senate and Assembly—Prominent in Morris county politics—Member of Masons and Elks—Funeral Tuesday.

Many Plainfielders were shocked today to learn of the sudden death of former State Senator Jacob W. Welsh, father of Mrs. Chalmers L. Crist, of Park avenue, which occurred suddenly last night at his home in German Valley. Even the immediate members of the family did not exect the demise, although Mr. Welsh, who was in his sixty-fourth year, had been failing for some time past. Cause of death was assigned to infirmities brought on by advancing years. He had visited Plainfield on many occasions since his son-in-law took up the practice of dentistry in this city, and both he and Mrs. Welsh, who survives him, made many acquauintances.

Besides his wife and Mrs. Crist, the deceased leaves one son, John C. Welsh. The funeral will be held at the late home in Grman Valley, Tuesday morning, at 11 o'clock. He was prominently identified with the Masonic Order and the Elks, and the service will be conducted by his brother Masons.

ANOTHER BIG AUTOMOBILE WORKS TO BE LOCATED IN PLAINFIELD

American Motor Corporation, of New York, Through E. F. Feickert, of State Trust Company, Acquires Land on West Front Street—Complete Plans Will Be Announced Next Week.

Plainfield is to have another big automobile works. Negotiations have been under way for the sale of the property on Front street, near Grant avenue, well known as the circus grounds, to the American Motor Corporation of New York, and it is authoritatively stated that, through the efforts of E. F. Feickert, vice-president of the State Trust Company, the deal has been completed, and the announcement of plans of the company will be made within a very few days, possibly on Monday. The property has long been owned by John E. Dunn, of West Front street, and nearly every circus and carnival that has visited the city in the last few years has used it.

It is stated that the company will make a pleasure car to sell at $1,000, and eventually will employ thousands of hands in its works in this city. Mr. Feickert, when seen this morning, refused to make any statement regarding the matter. He has completed the arrangements single-handed, and from the few who know of his success he received much congratulation this morning. It is probable that definite plans for the building to be erected will be made public before another week passes.

The first rumor that a big plant was coming to this city was heard a few days ago, when local people who are planning to give a carnival under the auspices of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, endeavored to procure the lot for use the latter part of May. They were told that the property would probably be sold, and that it could not be promised, so they selected another site further out Front street, toward Dunellen. An agent for the Cook and Wilson circus which is to exhibit in this city on May 19, was equally unsuccessful, because of the prospective sale, and this show will be given on Rose street, at Arlington avenue.

Representative of Playhouse Brought Another Hundred Fine Reservations to Plainfield Today—Special Train Will Stop at all Local Stations—Seats on Sale Tonight—Only Special Tickets Good on Train.

For the accommodation of those who wish to procure tickets for the Hippodrome performance next Monday night, the Daily Press office will remain open this evening until 10 o'clock, and a chart of seats, in charge of C. A. Goettler, of the Hippodrome staff, will be available for those who wish to take advantage of the special offer which is beig made by the Daily Press. As has been told, this newspaper has arranged with the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the New York Hippodrome for a big special train theatre party on Monday night to view "Hip, Hip, Hooray!" the spectacle which has created such a furore in the New York theatrical world this winter. The train will leave Dunellen at 5:54, Clinton avenue at 5:57, Grant avenue at 6:00, Plainfield at 6:04, Netherwood at 6:08, and Fanwood at 6:11, returning to Plainfield from Liberty street at 11:45. The price for the round trip, including a $1.50 seat at the Hippodrome in desirable parts of the house, is but $1.75 from Plainfield and Fanwood and $1.80 from Dunellen. Seats can be selected at the Daily Press office at any time until 5:45 Monday night, and provision will be made to sell late comers on the train, although the best seats cannot be guaranteed at that time.

LOCAL AERO IS FASTEST IN U. S.

New Speed Record Made in Sloane-Day Tractor Yesterday.

THOMPSON THE PILOT

Walter Wellman, Aeronautical Expert, Timed Flight—Aviator to Drop Bombs on Home of Henry Ford in Detroit.

Flying in a Sloane-Day biplane, made in Plainfield, DeLloyd Thompson, with a passenger, yesterday set a new world's record for a mile flight. The exhibition was timed by Walter Wellman, explorer, journalist and flying expert, and while not yet reported to the Aero Club, will probably go down as official, thus making the Plainfield machine the fastest in the world.

Mr. Thompson flew a mile over the Hempstead course in 33 and 1-5 seconds. The previous record for a mile was 36 and 3-5 seconds, made by Glenn Martin at Los Angeles.

Thompson's passenger was Marian Tichner, who saw him in a recent flight and told him she would like to do something daring.

The aviator suggested that she might make an ascent with him, in which he intended, if possible, to break all records with two persons in a machine. Miss Tichner consented and the Hempstead field was selected as the scene of the attempt.

Thompson, the young woman and Wellman went to the course shortly after noon.

It was somewhat hazy at the time, but the airman said the weather was not too bad for the flight, and he quickly made his machine, a Sloane-Day tractor biplane, ready.

The flight was made from a point which marks the beginning of the one mile course. Wellman and several other aviators were on hand when Thompson's machine shot into the air. The explorer agreed to time him.

The biplane shot quickly out on the course, and when the end was reached, Wellman announced that Thompson had broken the world's record. After his timing he piloted about in the clouds for some time.

Henry Woodhouse, one of the governors of the Aero Club, said last night that the attention of Thompson's feat had not yet been officially called to the club, and he did not know whether it would be registered as the new world's record.

"The fastest time known to the International Aeronautic Federation," he said, is "five kilometres in 2 minutes 15 seconds, made by Lieut. Henry Bier in Austria on October 1, 1912. I am not certain what fraction of time would be the difference from that claimed for Thompson.

"A two-passenger record for faster time also is held in Austria. This was made by Charles Nieuport, who covered five kilometres in 2 minutes 52 seconds."

Mr. Woodhouse said the matter of the new record probably would be taken up officially today.

"Of course," he added, "the time he makes must also be regarded as official before we can recognize it. I do not know just what Mr. Wellman's status might be as timer.

Thompson flew over New York several days ago and dropped "bombs" to show how easily the city could be bombarded by an enemy. He said last night that within a few weeks he would go to Detroit and drop bombs on the house of Henry Ford just to show him that the country needs a lot more aeroplanes and other things for defense.

In all these flights he uses the made-in-Plainfield machine

PLAN ADDITION FOR GRACE CHURCH

Need of More Room in Chancel Responsible for Extensive Improvements.

MAY COST $20,000

Changes Will Provide Commodious Space for Handsome New Organ Made Possible Through Donation of Parishioner.

Insufficient room in the chancel of Grace P. E. church to properly conduct important services, especially the mid-day communion, has come to the full realization of the vestry and plans are now under way to make extensive enlargements. The tentative drawings have been prepared by an architect, and it is estimated the work will aggregate a cost of $20,000. The first collection to secure this amount was taken last Sunday, the parishioners responding with generous contributions.

A member of the church has already sufficient funds for a new organ, and, with the improvements as planned, there will be an excellent location for this instrument. Just when the work will be commenced cannot be stated at this time.

According to the tentative plans, the rear wall of the chancel is to be pushed back fifteen feet, the roof raised, and certain structural changes provided to receive the improved organ. This will leave the chancel no wider than it is at present. But the additional depth is so distributed that one set of choir benches on either side is removed, and the two remaining benches lengthened, thus giving width to the chancel aisle for the approach of communicants, and adding fifteen seats for the accommodation of the choristers. The sanctuary behind the altar rail is to be enlarged for the greater convenience of the clergymen serving; and a passageway or exit from the chancel will be made on either side, so that communicants can comfortably and readily return to their pews without the confusion, congestion and delay now so marked, in the later services. The estimated cost to do this, to make these actual physical changes, use all the present equipment in furniture and leave opportunity for memorial gifts to beautify the chancel in the future, is placed at $13,000. To complete the work with wood panelings, altar, and lighting as the artist shows in his drawing, will require another $7,000.

HOLLOW TILE BARN TO BE BUILT ON HARMONY ST.

Jacob Voehl, of Grove street, has plans out for the erection of a modern barn on his property on Harmony street, the borough. The structure is to take the place of the frame buildings destroyed a short time ago, and located back of the bakery at Somerset and Harmony streets.

According to the drawings now in the hands of local contractors the barn will have a main structure of hollow tile two and a half stories high. It will have accommodations for both automobiles ad horses. Against the barn on either side will be wagon sheds one story in height. The main structure will be fifteen feet four inches square.

IN THE SUBURBS

Plans are now being figured on by Dunellen contractors for the proposed new house of Leslie Latham, to be erected on Prospect avenue, that place.

The Kirby house on Dunellen avenue has been rented to Mr. Smith, the new proprietor of the Park Hotel stables, who has already moved in.

Ground for a new house which he will build for himself has been broken by Frank Burdick, of Dunellen, on the north side of Walnut street, east of Washington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Corvin Apgar and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Benson, residing at present in the Gray flats, Dunellen, at the junction of North and Lincoln avenues, have hired the Michael T. Moynihan house on Front street and will take possession as soon as the alterations and improvements now being made there have reached a point where they can do so.

John H. Schneidler and wife will move at an early date from their home on Washington avenue, Dunellen, to the house on Front street owned by Mr. Schneidler and formerly occupied by Edgar Shively and family.

ONLY ONE PERMIT GRANTED THIS WEEK

Total Estimated Cost of Buildings for the Month, However, is Now $42,185.

Despite the optimistic outlook of last week, a decided slump took place in activities at Building Inspector Doane's office since last Saturday. Only one lone permit was granted, this being the sum total of the applications made. The permit was issued in favor of Mrs. Rosie Frucht, of Sixth and Division street for the erection of a two-family house at 514 Division street, the site being directly in the rear of Mrs. Frucht's home. The building will be of frame construction, measuring 24 by 24 by 40½ feet. The estimated cost is $3,200. All interior improvements will be installed. The general contract for the work has been given to Louis Cohen.

The addition of the cost of the Frucht structure makes a total for the month of April to the present time $42,185 worth of permits. For the year since January 1 the total is now $318,456. Reports from contractors in various parts of the city lead to the belief that a large number of plans now being figured on will be presented at Inspector Doane's office within a fortnight, starting May off with rousing good figures. Work in the house trades is excellent at this time, and Agent William Lunger, of the Buildings Trades Council, is frequently in a quandary to supply contractors with men. While most of the Plainfielders are not engaged on local jobs, the scarcity has been brought about by the erection of munition plants at South River, Kenilworth and other nearby places.

YELLOW PINE NOW IN GREAT DEMAND

General Increase in Building Operations Results in Heavy Shipments in March.

Prices for yellow pine, according to the expressions of the shippers, indicate that the trend, while not uniform, is generally satisfactory to the market. Encouragement was given by the report of building operations for March from 114 cities, which showed a total increase over March, 1915, amounting to more than $13,000,000. The increase for the first quarter of 1916 over the same period of 1915 shows an increase of more than $35,000,000, and the result is that the pine trade gets a share of the benefit.

The car situation is reported improved, but the supply is still far short of requirements. With the relaxation of the embargo at the Eastern ports still better accommodations are anticipated. The shortage of cars has been emphasized because of the inability to ship by water at reasonable rates, or, for that matter, to get carriers by water.

The March report of the Southern Pine Association shows an excess of production over shipments, which were 421,851,317 feet, or 88.08 per cent. of the 490,263,781 fee produced. Demand for the month, however, exceeded shipment and amounted to 98.52 per cent. of production. The cut of identical mills in the first three months amounted to 1,291,075,505 feet, as against 1,072,702,180 feet in the same period of 1915 and 1,139,936,410 feet in 1914. Shipments were 1,085,466,315 feet 1,025,837,072 and 1,122,008,629, respectively.

DEDICATES NEW TERMINAL OF P. S.

$6,000,000 Station in Newark is Built on Historic Ground.

The $6,000,000 Public Service Terminal, 80 Park place, Newark, which is to be opened tomorrow for car operation, was dedicated last night to the part it is to take in solving transportation problems, by President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, in an address at the Park Place Theatre, adjoining the terminal.

Mr. McCarter spoke before a joint meeting of the company sections of the railway, gas and electric companies. The theatre was filled with officers and members of the organizations and their friends. Preceding the address, a concert was given by one of the bands of the railway company.

It was a fortuitous circumstance that permitted the dedication of the terminal structure on the eve of the celebration of Newark's 250th birthday anniversary, declared Mr. McCarter. His address embodied a condensed history of progress in the field of transportation in this State and of the development of traction, gas and electric service from first activities to the time public service was created, in 1903.

Reference was made by the speaker to the historic associations of the site on which the terminal stands. On it stood the home of Elisha Boudinot, a patriot of Revolutionary times and a judge of the New Jersey Supreme Court; and there General Lafayette was entertained by a distinguished company in September, 1824. Mr. McCarter urged his comrades of Public Service to see to it that nothing be permitted to be done to sully so exalted a shrine.

"It will at least admit of placing double the number of cars upon the streets of the city during rush hours without causing any further saturation of congestion that existed before additional tracks were installed for the purpose of re-routing. Furthermore, it will provide for all time a proper and adequate home office for the corporation and its three operating subsidiaries. I think I may say without fear of over-statement, that it is the most advanced and unique facility for the relief of congestion caused by surface railway traffic that has yet been devised. From it, cars will radiate on frequent headway to practically all the cities of the State within a distance of fifty miles.

"Without extending this address beyond reasonable limits, I can not recount in any detail what has been acomplished by Public Service during its life. It is sufficient to say that, by necessary additions to gas works; by the construction of the most modern generating stations and sub-stations, and by the complete rebuilding of a dilapidated and antiquated railway system, we stand prepared to give the people of New Jersey the service in these three great public utilities to which they are entitled, in an efficient manner and at reasonable rates."

London, April 29.—"The pope," says a Daily News dispatch from Rome, "deplores the disorders in Dublin and has requested Cardinal Logue to ascertain whether any clergymen were implicated.

"The pope is determined besides resorting to exemplary disciplinary measures also to make public condemnation of the disloyalty and unpatriotism of any clergyman concerned."

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doans Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No. 1, Plainfield, says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventive of any serious trouble."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wahl had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.- Adv.

HELD AS SLAYER IN JERSEY CITY

Alleged Murderer Is Caught In Newark.

VICTIM PROTECTED WIFE.

Frank E. Kenney, Politician, Was Shot Down While Resenting Insult to His Bride—Italian Caught After Chase Through Streets—Tried to Draw Gun, Say Police.

Newark, April 29.—Michael Rombolo, self confessed murderer of Frank Kenny, an employee of the Jersey City department of public works, in that city a week ago today, was captured here and then turned over to the Jersey City police.

Commissioner of Public Safety Frank Hague of Jersey City made the actual capture, but was assisted by the local police.

The capture was effected at the point of Hague's revolver after Rombolo had been chased through South Canal street and the Canal street playgrounds by Hague and Lieutenant Quinn of Chief Long's staff. Hague and Quinn were a few feet apart when Rombolo made a stand and attempted to draw a revolver from his overcoat pocket. A jab in the neck from the muzzle of Hague's gun took the fight out of him, and he quietly accompanied his captors to local police headquarters.

Kenny was killed on the evening of April 21 while resenting an insult to his wife on Union street, Jersey City, on which thoroughfare the Kennys lived.

Rombolo, in admitting the killing, said he shot only after Kenny had punched him in the jaw and called him a "wop." Mrs. Kenny claims her husband was murdered while running toward her after Rombolo had addressed her by saying, "Hello, chicken!"

Those who remembered seeing Rombolo in the neighborhood of the shooting before it happened noticed that he wore a diamond ring on his left hand. This ring was in a manner responsible for his capture.

Search of the Italian colony in Jersey City revealed the fact that a boarder answering the description of Rombolo had been absent from 199 Boyd avenjue, that city, ever since the shooting. The house was watched, and yesterday two men, one bearing a note to the boarding mistress asking for Rombolo's clothes, visited the house. They were taken into custody and said Rombolo lived at 117 South Canal street, this city.

Hague immediately got into communication with Chief Long and last night came here with Collins. Detectives Harris, Quinn, Ryan, Conlon, Donnelly and Schroeder of the local department were detailed by the chief to try to make the capture, and the whole party went to South Canal street.

MAN KILLED IN RUNAWAY.

Team Driven by Elizabeth Men Takes Fright Under Railway.

Elizabeth, April 29.—Henry Walters, forty-two years old, of 98 Salem street, this city, was instantly killed and James Palmer, twenty-five, of 98 Salem street were mortally injured when a team of horses which they had driven to Newark took fright at a piece of paper and ran away.

The animals became frightened as they turned from beneath a bridge of the Lehigh Valley railroad into Frelinghuysen avenue and ran several blocks before they crashed into a curb, throwing both men against a building.

BRIBED TO PLACE BOMB?

Paterson Man Offered $3,000 to Wreck Du Pont Plant.

Paterson, April 29.—Frank Piracci, who used to live at 55 Jersey street, this city, but is now employed and lives at the Du Pont powder works at Haskell, reported to the police at headquarters here that he had been offered $3,000 to carry a bomb into the plant. Piracci was much excited.

The police are in doubt as to whether the offer was made as a joke or was seriously meant. Detectives Eyres and Pirolo were detailed on the case.

ROOSEVELT NEGRO WINS.

Waiter Beats Manufacturer For Delegate In Atlantic City.

Trenton, April 29.—Complete returns for delegates from the Second New Jersey congressional district in the Republican primaries show that William F. Cozart, a negro waiter in a hotel of Atlantic City, with the declaration as a supporter of Theodore Roosevelt after his name, won in the primary as one of the five delegates over Richard M. Moore, a glass manufacturer, of Bridgeton.

Repeat Wedding Ceremony.

Burlington, April 29.—When Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Robinson celebrated their golden wedding anniversary the Rev. John M. Lyons of Germantown, Pa., father of the bride, repeated the original ceremony by which he married them fifty years ago at Montowese, Conn. Several hundred guests witnessed the ceremony at the reception in the First Baptist church. Several purses of gold were presented to the pair.

EXPECT ATTACK ON COAST OF BRITAIN

French Regard Lull as Merely Preliminary.

Paris, April 29.—It has been unusually quiet all along the French and British fronts, the only exceptions being artillery bombardments of varying violence. The lull is regarded merely as a period of preparation in which the Germans are getting ready to resume their attacks with renewed violence.

A difference of opinion exists among the French military critics regarding the sector which will receive the next German attacks. One view is that General Petain has shown himself so completely master of the situation at Verdun that the attempt to break through there will be repeated, if at all, only as part of a far more extensive scheme for a general assault along the whole Anglo-French front.

One military writer predicts that this gigantic blow will be delivered in conjunction with an attack by the German fleet on the British coast, the whole forming, as he terms it, a "last desperate bid for victory." As preliminaries of such a general attack he points to the Zeppelin raids on the English coast, the raid on the same coast by German battle cruisers, the outbreak in Dublin and other parts of Ireland, the renewal of activity along the British front in Flanders and Artois, the feints at attacks in the Verdun region and the closing of the Swiss frontier.

A writer in the Echo de Paris says that, while attacks at the British front may be expected, it is likely that the heaviest blow will be delivered on the Russian front against Riga by both land and sea and against Dwinsk.

SEE OVERTHROW OF CARRANZA

Collapse of Government Near, Is Report.

PEOPLE NEAR STARVATION

Embassies at Washington Fear For Nationals—First Chief In Danger of Death For Admitting American Troops—Scott and Funston In El Paso For Conference.

Washington, April 29.—Dispatches received here have created grave apprehension in regard to the Mexican situation.

The reports were to the effect that the Carranza government was on the verge of collapse and that conditions in and around Mexico City were more threatening than they had been at any time since the overthrow of Porfirio Diaz.

Fearing that harm might come to their nationals in Mexico if the source of the information became known, the diplomats receiving the reports have requested that their names be not disclosed. It is known, however, that at least one of the ambassadors concerned turned over to the state department a full transcript of the information he had received.

This report declares that all Mexico is on the verge of an uprising against the Carranza government. It states that while the primary cause of unrest lies in the complete demoralization of all forms of industry, in the scarcity of food and the worthlessness of the Mexican currency, resentment against Carranza for permitting the American forces to enter and remain in Mexican territory is the particular grievance upon which the enemies of Carranza are pinning their hopes for a general outbreak against his rule.

Villa National Hero.

Villa, the report shows, is fast assuming in the eyes of the Mexican populace the figure of a national hero. Availing themselves of this fact, intriguers at the national capital and in the very household of Carranza are plotting for his overthrow. It is said that Carranza is in imminent danger of assassination.

In the meantime, the reports go on to state, the food shortage in various parts of Mexico, not excepting the capital, is growing daily more serious and pestilence is beginning to take its toll from the ranks of the starving. Carranza currency has dropped to the unprecedented level of a ratio of 100 pesos to $1 in American gold.

Hostility against Americans is reported to be growing, and of particular concern to the diplomatic corps in Mexico City, the report states, is the fact that foreigners of other nationality are not spared the ill feeling.

Despite this information, the state department continues to issue bulletins containing digests of reports received from American consular representatives in various sections of Mexico picturing conditions as improved.

With the approach of the Scott-Obregon conference at Juarez officials here are manifesting a lively interest in the reports from El Paso, albeit they still persist in discounting as unjustifiably sensational anything in these reports which tend to predict an unsuccessful result from the conferences.

Officials refused to comment on press reports from El Paso quoting General Obregon as flatly stating that his principal purpose in agreeing to meet General Scott was to demand a withdrawal of the American expeditionary force.

In deciding to send General Scott to the border and to arrange for the conference between him and General Obregon the administration has hoped that the interview would be largely confined to an interchange of views which might bring about closer co-operation between the two governments in a military way and thus persuade Carranza not to press his formal request for a withdrawal.

Conference May Be Fruitless.

The diplomatic questions involved were to be left to the respective state departments to dispose of. If it is true that General Obregon means merely to press for a withdrawal it is admitted here that from the American standpoint the conference might not only be fruitless, but embarrassing.

The state department gave out the following summary of consular reports from Mexico:

"The department is in receipt of telegraphic advices stating that it is reliably reported that since the arrival in Torreon of General Jacinto Trevino conditions have greatly improved in the Laguna district. Good order is said to have been restored in that part of Coahuilla and the eastern part of Durango.

"In these sections many Villistas or revolutionary bands are reported to have surrendered to the de facto government. It is further reported that in General Trevino's district the people are calm and friendly toward Americans and other foreigners.

"Guaymas and Topolobampo and the west coast are reported quiet."

Farm In Family 169 Years.

Bennington, Vt., April 29.—When the body of Miss Helen C. Scott, eighty-three, was taken to the old Bennington cemetery the continuous occupancy of the Scott farm and house by Samuel Scott and his descendants for a period of 169 years came to an end.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society will be held next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the chapel. The subject will be India and Siam.

The Christian Endeavor services of the First Presbyterian church will be discontinued until the end of the Beiderwolf campaign.

The Westminster Guild will hold its next meeting at the home of Miss Ruth Wean, 923 Park avenue, Monday night at 8 o'clock.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, APRIL 29, 1916.

On Saturdays the editorial column of the Daily Press is conducted, at our request, by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is S. Frederick Smith, director of music in North Plainfield Public Schools.

A PLEA FOR CREDITED MUSIC IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Years ago music in the public schools consisted of the singing of songs, chiefly to give a form of entertainment, appropriate to the seasons or patriotic occasions. During the more recent years supervisors and directors of music have realized their opportunities in the value of better tone production, more song material and a larger knowledge of the theory of music, technique or grammar of music, music fundamentals or whatever it may be termed, consequently systematized work in tone production and sight reading is being taught with more or less success according to the requirements and amount of time given to the work.

There is immense educational value in the technical drills of reading music at sight, as well as in the refining and elevating influence on the future lives of children. There are few homes today without music, and the school room gives us a wonderful opportunity to raise the standard of the home music.

Successful school music means a great deal to every community, and always receives the support and co-operation of both parent and school authorities. More music in all forms is being put into school life, violin and piano classes given by outside teachers in the school after school hours, piano players and victrolas for appreciation courses. But this is not sufficient. The class room study and work done during school hours should be credited and ranked in importance with other subjects. Only then will the best results be obtained.

The music department of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association drew up an outline of music for elementary and grammar grades, and a high school course which has been adopted in various places. In this outline only the minimum amount of music for the grades was called for, the privilege of increasing it remaining with the supervisor. In the high school a maximum amount of work was arranged. The fundamental principles, problems of pitch and time in this outline of music, can readily be made attractive and interesting to children. In fact much more so than many other subjects.

Quite a number of children, especially boys with changing voices, or the unfortunate monotones, look upon music as an unimportant subject, and a few years later regret their attitude towards it. Also through the lack of proper preparation in the grades few pupils are ready for a high school course when they enter. It is to be deplored that the full value of music training at this period is not properly recognized.

Most high schools give a small credit for music, whereas it should be established as a major subject with full credit, and required results with credit in the grades would help to make these conditions possible.

Here is an opportunity for the Parent-Teacher bodies to request from the State Board of Education recognition for music as a serious subject with credit in the grades as well as high school. To you, who are requiring the best in everything that the schools can offer, opportunities you did not have yourselves in your day, the appeal is made to demand that your children shall have the best in music, and under conditions which offer the most advantageous results.

S. FREDERICK SMITH.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

In a sermon by an evangelist, reported in a recent issue, there is a mis-statement which I hope you will permit me to correct. The critic of Mrs. Eddy's teachings repeats the outworn assertion, that "some of her followers expected her to rise from the grave a few days after her death." Needless to say, anybody who looked for Mrs. Eddy's reappearance in the flesh at any time since she passed away has met with disappointment. There has been some foolish speculation on the subject, but it has always come from those who seek to distort or discredit Christian Science, never from followers of Mrs. Eddy. Christian Scientists know of no reason why Mrs. Eddy should reappear in the flesh. Her true life found its expression in her work for the betterment of mankind, and that work is certain to go on as long as suffering and sinning humanity cries out for deliverance. Mrs. Eddy is present to Christian Scientists as much today as she ever was, because she lives in her writings, through which they have found better health and morals, and have learned how to love God and one's neighbor more.

DEATH OF SENATOR WELSH

Senator Welsh was born at Middle Valley, Morris county, March 19, 1853, and for many year was one of the best known dealers in wagons, harness, and farm implements. For twelve years he was director of the Clinton National Bank and was interested in other financial and commercial institutions. He served on the Township Committee for three years and was town clerk for a similar period. Mr. Welsh was elected State Assemblyman by the Republicans of Morris county and served three years in the sessions of 1898, '99 and 1900. During his term of office he was a member of some of the most important committees.

In 1901 he was elected Senator by a plurality of 709 over Thomas H Hoagland, the Democratic candidate. In 1903 he served as chairman of the committees on stationery, unfinished business and Industrial School for Girls.

When in Plainfield he was a frequent visitor at the local Elks' Club in company with Dr. Crist, and his genial disposition and keen sense of humor won for him many local friends. He was vitally interested in anything that pertained to the welfare of the State, and although he sought retirement from a political career in 1904 his name was never forgotten by the Republican party of Morris county. His long residence in that county and the ease with which he formed friendships made him one of the best known and best liked figures.

On the Spur of the Moment

The Artistic Temperament.

The folks, they all just gather round,
And stare at him without a sound,
In admiration rapt they gaze,
And love him for his winning ways.
And callers, they all hover near
And whisper, "Ain't he just a dear?"
It seems they can't get close enough.
They are sincere; it is no bluff;
It's worth a trip of many miles,
When baby smiles.

But they do not remain to gaze,
They scatter fifteen different ways,
They dash out to the open air,
Glad to escape, most anywhere;
They jump through windows to the ground,
And smash the glass with fearful sound;
They do a lot of funny stunts,
And all try to escape at once;
They make for far-off woody dells,
When baby yells.

So, Why Worry?

If you let your wife waste your money, you are a fool.

If you refuse to let your wife waste your money, you are a brute.

If you are affectionate to your wife in public, you are mean.

If you lose a lot of money, you are idiotic.

If you make a lot of money, you are a crook.

If you tango, you are frivolous.

If you don't tango, you are a back number.

If you are poor, you are no good.

If you are rich, you got it by robbing others.

If you die, you dissipate.

If you live to a good old age, you attained it through laziness.

Can't please everybody.

Spring Styles.

Gowns will button up the back as usual, no gown being really swagger unless it has 5,674 buttons. They are recommended especially to married women who have impatient husbands.

Red flannel chest protectors will be in vogue, especially in the pneumonia belt of northern states.

Ear muffs are considered passe by the smart set of polite society, but they are still being worn by those who don't want to hear what their neighbors are saying about them.

Statesmanship — Something that nobody in Washington knows anything about.

Clarinet—An instrument of torture.

How to Live Forever.

Eat nothing but stewed parsnips.
Drink nothing but cold water.
Go to bed at 8 every night.
Get up at 6 every morning.
Don't smoke, chew, or play poker.
Go to church every Sunday morning.
Split three cords of wood every day.
Walk 19 miles before breakfast.
Ride horseback two hours every afternoon.
Play golf the remainder of the afternoon.
Don't kiss the cook or anybody else.
Shun the public drinking cups.
Keep out of crowded cars.
Now comes the most important instruction, if you would live forever;
Don't die.

--Astor Theatre--

There have appeared on the stage in the last few years several big dramas in which a sensational trial scene in the court room was one of the big "punches." But in these various plays, the wit and repartee of the lawyers and persons on the stand was largely responsible for the effectiveness of the scene. When Henry Arthur Jones, the celebrated playwright, wrote his big drama, "Lydia Gilmore," he devised one of the most gripping scenes imaginable, the power of which lay in the situation, and not in the dialogue. For that reason the Famous Players Film Company has chosen "Lydia Gilmore" as a starring vehicle for Pauline Frederick, who has been so aptly called "Frederick the Great" by one of the screen reviewers. This Paramount picture, which is the attraction at the Astor Theatre today, lends itself admirably to screen adaptation because the strength of the play lies in the situations and not in the dialogue. Mrs. Gilmore, the role enacted by Pauline Frederick, is placed on the witness stand while her husband is on trial for murdering the husband of the woman with whom he has been intriguing. Mrs. Gilmore knows that her husband is guilty both of his unfaithfulness to her and of the murder of the husband. The prosecuting attorney, who is questioning her, is in love with her and knows that she is aware of her husband's guilt, but neither the judge nor the jury are inclined at first to believe him anything but innocent.

Miss Frederick's magnificent performances in "Zaza" and "Bella Donna," in which she scored great successes recently on the screen, are sufficient evidence of her wonderful ability as an emotional actress.

In addition to this wonderful picture, we will show the first episode of "The Girl and the Game," which will be an added attraction at this theatre every Saturday. We show nothing but first-run Paramount, Bluebird and other big Broadway features. Always a good show at the Astor, the "House of Quality, not Quanitity."

BIBLE SCHOOL TO MEET.

The regular Sunday-school session will be held at the Park Avenue Baptist church at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, but will be shortened on account of the Tabernacle meeting. In the afternoon all who can possibly do so will meet at 2 o'clock to march to the Tabernacle. Others will assemble at the latter place to attend the service at 2:30 o'clock.

MUSICALE AT THE HARTRIDGE.

The musicale to be given by the Sinsheimer Quartet will be at the Hartridge Auditorium, and not Miss Van-Boskerck's studio, as previously announced. The date is Thursday afternoon, May 11. The quartet will be assisted by Ethel Tozier-Hardy, pianiste in solo and trio work.

TAFT AT CHAUTAUQUA

a graduate of the Paris and Clermont Universities and an alumnus of Heidelberg and New York Universities. He has traveled extensively in Europe, North Africa and Mexico; is a contributer to many leading periodicals and is the author of several books in English and French. In his appearance here he will present his great lecture, "An Inside View of Mexico."

Dr. Euclid B. Rogers, of Springfield, Ill., a seasoned Chautauquan whose messages have had a strong grip on audiences in the West and Middle West, will lecture on "A Living or a Life.'"

The coming of Frederick Warde is particularly fortunate in this tercentenary year of the death of the Bard of Avon. He will present a lecture recital on "Shakespeare and His Plays."

The program is particularly rich in music.

Miss Sparkes is an English girl whose singing was first brought to a wide public notice through the efforts of King Edward and Queen Alexandra of England when she was singing in a local church in her home town, Cowes, England. She was given an opportunity to sing in the great Covent Garden in London and immediately sprang into popular favor. She has been a favorite with American music lovers since she began her five-year engagement with the Metropolitan. She will have as assisting artists Marguerite de Forest-Anderson, flautiste, and Barrington Branch, pianist. Miss Anderson is spoken of by the London Times as "the greatest flautiste in the history of music." She has appeared on programs with Schumann-Heink, Nordica, Bispham and many other great artists.

Victor's Band and the Neapolitan Troubadours is directed by Signor de Carlo, a graduate of the musical conservatory of St. Cecilia in Rome, who has scored great musical successes in Italy, Turkey and Egypt. He has directed his band over the Chautauqua circuit in previous seasons and has demonstrated his ability in meeting the exacting requirements of the American Chautauqua audience.

Ole Theobaldi is known in Europe and America as the success of Ole Bull and Paganini. He has served as musician to the imperial families of Russia, Sweden and Denmark and has appeared by royal command before King Edward, Emperor William II. and King Humbert of Italy. As assisting artists he will have Florence Stitzel, soprano with the Chicago Grand Opera Company, and Mlle. Helen Kelere, pianist and accompanist.

Other musical numbers are the American Quartet, regarded as the leading male quartet in this country; the Dunbar Southern Singers, one of Ralph Dunbar's famous companies, and Geoffrey O'Hara, noted Irish actor, tenor and composer. One of Mr. O'Hara's most famous compositions is "Tennessee, I Hear You Calling Me." He will appear with Wing Tabor Wetmore, character impersonator.

A most interesting and unusual number in the list is Arthur Delroy, president of the New York Psychic Club and exposer of fakes. Mr. Delroy has appeared in some of the largest colleges of the country, including Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, and in many large summer resorts.

Special plans have been made for the boys and girls in a morning Chautauqua in which they will enjoy games, picnics, a story telling hour and a score of interesting things. This Junior Chautauqua will be in charge of a trained play director, whose duty it will be to see that the boys and girls are given a big time while the Chautauqua is in session.

The committee's plan is to make the Chautauqua as much a community affair as possible, and they will begin a thorough canvass for the sale of season tickets about a month before the date, and an efficient advertising campaign will be carried on throughout the surrounding country.

- Proctor's Theatre -

The management of Proctor's Theatre are continually on the lookout for the best in photoplay entertainment, and with that object uppermost in mind, they will furnish the patrons with an abundance of extraordinary entertainment for quite some time to come. They have made arrangements whereby Theda Bara appears today in "Carmen," as produced by the famous William Fox Company, while on Monday they will present Geraldine Farrar, the noted prima donna, in the Paramount version of this same production. The management on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 8, 9 and 10, will offer Charlie Chaplin in his burlesque on "Carmen," the sensational four-reel comedy masterpiece that has created the greatest furore in the annals of filmdom. In addition to Theda Bara in "Carmen" today, Edmund Breese appears in a powerful Metro production entitled "The Lure of Hearts Desire;" and Harry Watson as "Musty Suffer," and Mutt and Jeff in "The Trenches," will provide an abundance of hearty laughter. A novel attraction which will appear every day next week, starting Monday, is the big local photoplay, "It Happened in Plainfield," which all have seen in the making the first half of this week, and which will appear in completed form at every performance next week. The cast consists entirely of local people, and the scenes entirely of local surroundings. It will prove a treat indeed to see yourself and neighbors in this wonderful attraction, and doubtless Proctor's will be the "Mecca" for all classes of theatregoers throughout the entire week. On Monday, in addition to Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen," and the local photoplay, "It Happened in Plainfield," Frank Daniels, Sis Hopkins and Ham and Bud will disport themselves in comedy features written especially around their eccentric personalities. On Tuesday, Douglas Fairbanks, acknowledged to be the most popular of Triangle stars, appears in an exceedingly amusing comedy drama entitled "The Habit of Happiness." "It Happened in Plainfield" will also be on Tuesday's program and added features will include "A Bathhouse Blunder," a rip-roaring Keystone funny film, and the ninth episode of "Mary Page."

CAPSTICK NOT OVERJOYED AT GERMAN-AMERICAN PRAISE

Washington, April 29.—No haste or enthusiasm yesterday was shown by Representative John H. Capstick, of the Fifth New Jersey district, to answer a letter from the German-American Alliance of Elizabeth extending the support of its 2,300 members to him from re-election because of his vote for the McLemore resolutions.

The letter eexpresses the thanks of the GermanAmerican Alliance for Mr. Capstick's vote, and says he may count on the support of the members of its twenty-four component organizations.

For the present, Mr. Capstick has nothing to say on the subject, but said he might have a statement to make in a few days. It is understood that expressions of disapproval of his vote have been received from other elements in his district.

A. C. ESTES TO SPEAK.

Alfred C. Estes, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., will speak tonight at the Madison Y. M. C. A. The association at the latter place began a five-day campaign to raise $16,000 for its needs, yesterday, and the first day saw $3,556 raised.

The sewing society of the First Presbyterian church will hold its regular meeting in the chapel on Monday afternoon at 2:30 instead of Thursday, May 4.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

What Happened To a Lazy, Lazy Girl.

"Cock-a-doodle-do," he called.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

SOON as the children cuddled down as quiet as mice daddy began: "When a girl told her mother how a good fairy had covered her with gold this mother thought how nice it would be for her lazy daughter to also get riches. So she told her lazy daughter to go and sit by the well and spin. But the lazy girl did not spin enough to make her finger bleed. So she put her hand in a thorn bush, rubbed some blood on her spindle, threw it into the well and then jumped in after it.

"Like her sister, she awoke in a beautiful meadow and walked till she came to an oven. 'Take us out or we shall burn to cinders!' cried the loaves. 'Do you think I will dirty my hands for you?' asked the girl, walking on.

"Then she came to an apple tree. 'Shake us! We are all ripe!' called the apples. 'An apple might fall on my head,' said the lazy girl, going on.

"At last she came to a little house where lived Mother Holle. From her sister she had heard about the old woman's big teeth; so she was not afraid and agreed to do Mother Holle's work. The first day she was very obedient and busy, for she expected lots of gold in return, just as her sister had been rewarded. But the next day she began to dawdle about her work and shirk part of it. The third day she was even more idle, and after that she began to lie in bed mornings and even refused to get up at all. Worse still, she neglected to make Mother Holle's bed properly and to shake it so the feathers flew about like snowflakes. So Mother Holle told her to go.

"The lazy girl was delighted and thought, 'Soon I shall be covered with gold!'

"Then Mother Holle led her to the broad gate, and just as she was passing through, instead of a shower of gold, a great bucketful of black pitch came pouring over her.

"'That's in return for your help,' said Mother Holle, shutting the gate tight behind the lazy girl.

"So the lazy girl had to go home all smeared with pitch, and when the rooster perched on the well saw her he called:

"'Cock-a-doodle-doo!
Your lazy daughter's come back to you!'

"But try as both she and her mother might, they could not get the black pitch off. So it stuck to her as long as she lived," daddy finished the bedtime story.

THE CARE OF HEALTH OF THE WOMAN WHO EARNS HER OWN LIVING DAILY

With the coming of spring the woman who works for a living will find a noticeable change in her physical condition. The rigors of winter once over, she believes the warmer days will bring her renewed energy and strength, instead of which she finds herself tired, easily exhausted and generally played out at the slightest exertion. In many instances she is scarcely able to get through with her work, arriving at night weary and unusually spent with the day's labors.

"What can be the matter with me?" she anxiously asks herself. "There seems to be nothing definite, and yet I am far from well. The winter, with its colds and coughs, was bad enough, but this feeling of always being tired is infinitely worse. I must see a doctor."

And so she hastens to her family physician, relates her condition to him in detail, is surprised and, it must be confessed, somewhat aggrieved that he takes her symptoms so calmly, and she is somewhat relieved to hear her malady diagnosed as "spring fever."

"Oh, I thought there was something serious the matter," she exclaimed in surprise.

A Serious Matter.

"But it is serious," corrects the doctor. "You women, and especially those who work, don't pay half enough attention to this general lassitude which arises in the spring. You dismiss it as general laziness, and go on in the same manner as before. Now, let me tell you that this is all wrong. When Nature flashes this danger signal, if you don't heed her warning you are apt to run into physical disaster. It isn't natural for any healthy woman to feel exhausted after a day of work such as she is accustomed to, and when she finds that the same amount of labor is costing her a double amount of energy she wants to take measures right away, without further delay, to remedy this condition.

"There is a general false impression abroad that once the first warm days arrive the body of which has been subject to the severities of winter is going to pick up strength immediately and to thrive on the sunshine. Unfortunately, we find quite the reverse is true. Instead of feeling energetic and strong we are tired and weak. Instead of being able to do more work, we try our best, but accomplish less.

"The reason for this is that all during the winter poisons have been accumulating in the body. The close indoor life which most of us lead during the cold days is far from beneficial, and because of lack of exercise and fresh air our blood becomes filled with poisonous particles.

"As spring advances we feel the effect of this accumulation. And the remedy lies in getting rid of these poisons as speedily as possible. This is accomplished through exercise, fresh air and diet. Also through a reliable tonic. Our grandmothers knew what they were about when they insisted upon the sulphur and molasses bottle being brought into play every spring, for while it is an unpleasant dose it is decidedly beneficial. Iron is easier to take and it is essential in the spring time.

However, tonics will do little good unless a good deal of exercise and fresh air are taken and a diet adhered to.

"I suppose you will say you haven't time for fresh air and exercise. That is the usual plaint of the working woman. But I tell you if you want to be well you must make time. Get up early in the morning—it will do you good these warm days—and follow out the directions I am about to give you.

"Upon rising, put on a warm wrapper. Go directly to the open window and there spend five minutes in breathing deeply. By this I mean breathing which reaches your diaphragm, not only your chest, emptying these organs and filling them to their fullest capacity. Few women know how to breathe correctly, or if they know how, few take the time and trouble to do so. After this take a few simple exercises, such as touching the hands to the floor without bending the knees, throwing the arms high over the head and lowering them slowly while breathing deeply, etc. This puts the body in a glow. Then take a cold bath.

"If you are not used to this start by taking a tepid bath and gradually day by day allowing it to become a trifle colder. Rub vigorously with a coarse towel afterward. Before dressing take a cup of hot water, not so hot as to hurt the stomach, but comfortably warm. Dress and eat a sensible breakfast of fruit, eggs or cereal, not both unless you relish them, cocoa or hot mik—no tea or coffee in the spring time—and hot toast. After this walk ten blocks in the open air before taking the subway for business.

"At the noon hour eat a salad of fresh vegetables rather than meat, or substitute fish, which is particularly good for the system at this season. The diet should consist of much fruit, fresh vegetables with lean meats and fish. No pastries, rich gravies or candies.

"After the day's work walk part of the way home, at least ten or twenty blocks, all the time breathing deeply to air the lungs."

NEW HIPPODROME TICKETS

seats in the theatre near their friends, and use their commutation or trip tickets. This is impossible, as the railroad will not accept anything but special tickets on the special train.

The Hippodrome representative returned to Plainfield today, and brought with him one hundred more desirable seats for Plainfield people. There are some excellent locations left on the first floor, and in the second, third and fourth rows in the balcony. These will be disposed of following the rule of first come, first served; and persons who have not procured their tickets would do well to visit the Press office tonight.

When the arrangements for the show were made with the Hippodrome management, the Daily Press was not informed that the performance would be the first night of the "second edition" of the show for this year. This announcement was made last night and attracted the attention of not a few people who have seen the show already, but are planning to go again. All of the best features and principals are retained, and a number of new and interesting acts added. Sousa and his band will play a number of new airs; Charlotte has arranged a new skating number, said to be more remarkable than the one she has been presenting all winter, and stunts have been added to the remarkable acrobatic acts. Toto the clown will pull off a number of laugh-provoking gyrations that have never been done by him before, and Nat Wills has some funny new telegrams to read to the audience.

"This skating feature of the Hippodrome and the idea of 'Flirting at St. Moritz,' with its sensational ice-ballet was not a sudden inspiration of mine," said Charles Dillingham, the manager, the other day. "I have been a real enthusiast over ice skating for years. It is the cleanest, most beautiful of our American winter sports. But we have not developed it here as we might have done, and I thought it would provide a strikingly new stage feature as well as encourage wholesome outdoor sport. Berlin developed ice skating into a theatrical entertainment, and it occurred to me to bring over its best exponents and give them the neutral, international environment of the prettiest Swiss village, St. Moritz. But I will admit that my most sanguine expectations have been exceeded by the vogue of this ice-ballet. Every time I read, or hear somebody say that the Hippodrome novelty has launched a new chapter in American outdoor life, or laid the foundations for a renaissance of ice skating in this country, I wonder if my friends are over-enthusiastic. It must be so, however, for all the sport historians of the country are saying so, and society, fashion, and athletics endorse their statements. 'I builded better than I knew.'"

MARTINE IN FAVOR OF REDUCED POSTAGE

Urges Rate of OnOe Cent Per Ounce Rate on Local Delivery of Letters.

Washington, April 29.—"Legislation fixing a rate of 1 cent per ounce on all local delivery letters if enacted at this time will mean much to the average patron of the postal service," said Senator James E. Martine, of New Jersey, today, in answer to a query as to whether the time was opportune for Congress to consider the passage of such a measure.

"A cheaper rate of postage on drop letters would do much in the way of stimulating general business conditions," continued the Senator. "However in considering this important matter we should keep in mind the fact that the present rates are not fixed on an equitable basis. There is no sound argument offered to justify a charge on a local letter equal to the charge made on one that must be transported to a distant point and delivered. Under the existing scale of rates a patron pays no more to send a letter across the continent to Alaska, Hawaii, and the Philippines, and even to England and Germany than he does to send a letter to his next door neighbor. In fixing rates of postage more attention should be given to what it actually costs the Government to handle the various classes of mail.

"Action at this time would be pleasing to every patron of the great service and particularly to the small merchants who would naturally find the mails a more valuable medium for the development of a more extensive business. Reductions in the rates have never caused a falling off in the revenues. In fact the results have been just the opposite. With every cut in the rate there has immediately followed a tremendous increase in the volume of mail, thereby taking care of any possible loss in the annual revenues.

"Several bills are pending now proposing a reduction in the local rate. Regardless of the pressing legislation made necessary by the European war, I believe some definite action should be taken toward giving the people of the country a lower rate of postage. It is perhaps well not to grant a universal 1 cent letter-rate just at this time yet the local rate can be extended to the people now without any embarrassment."

Senator Martine is a member of the Senate Postal Committee. Although he is not the author of any bill proposing the 1 cent rate yet he has always been a staunch friend of the proposition and has continually urged the creation of the rate on local delivery letters. The regular postal appropriation bill is now being considered by the Senate Committee and it is understood that efforts are being made to include the local letter provision in it.

Home-Made Hard Soap

Try this and save more than one-half on soap:

Put in a crock of can of lye. Pour on it one quart water. Let cool.

Melt one-half cupful borax in water.

Mix one-half cupful each kerosene and ammonia together.

Have five pounds clean grease (any kind) warmed and in a granite pan.

Have a clean stick.

Pour in the cooled lye, then the ammonia and oil and borax, stirrong with the stick until all is well blended.

Pour into a strong cold box. In twenty-four hours cut in squares, having almost three dollars' worth of soap for a few cents.

FOR WASHING DAY.

If collars, cuffs, pieces of lace, etc., are threaded on a piece of tape or string, and tied on to the clothes line, the ends of the cuffs and collars will not be pulled out of shape. There will be no ugly clothes-pin marks, and pieces will not get lost in the wash.

Do not throw away water in which rice has been boiled, as it makes a good starch, if a little blue water is added to it.

When wringing and mangling tablecloths, towels and sheets, do not fold them always in the same way week after week, but fold them alternately, one week by the hem and the next by the selvedge. This will make them wear twice as long.

Development of Measles

Measles develop about ten to fourteen days after exposure, are very contagious, and may be carried in the clothing as well as in other ways.

The disease begins with red, weeping eyes, nasal discharge, a dry cough and all the symptoms of a severe cold. It is particularly contagious at this stage.

It is accompanied by fever, loss of appetite and, on the third or fourth day, irregular patches of small dark-red raised spots appear, first on the face, neck and arms, and later on trunk and legs. There is also itching of the skin, especially during peeling.

Keep the child in bed until the fever is over and the temperature has been normal for three days. Guard the eyes carefully from strong light, and bathe them three times daily with boric solution. Cleanse the nose and throat from discharges, and do not permit mouth breathing.

The bowels should be kept open, as the disease is partly thrown off in that way. Beware, therefore, of checking diarrhea, unless it becomes very exhausting. Soothe the itching of the skin with cocoa butter or cold cream.

The diet for an infant should be milk; for an older child fluids during the fever and semi-solids later on. Isolate the patient until the temperature has been normal for two weeks and all discharges have ceased.

Even the mildest cases should be rigidly cared for; since eye, ear, nose and throat troubles often complicate or follow measles.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

McGRAW IS LOSING HIS POPULARITY.

In New York there is a general change of sentiment relative to the Giants. Manager McGraw is personally feeling the effect and no longer does the Gothamites fan idolize the irrepressible Muggsy. In fact, New York has floppped. The Yankees seem to be the big rage there now, and even in the comment of critics on practically every newspaper, McGraw comes in for some back-hand slams that cannot help but rankle the former championship leader. McGraw is changing. He still has a fighting spirit, but a different kind. He is losing out with his players, too, it seems, as quite a few of them have shown an inclination to leave the New York club, if they can, while it has always been the ambition of a major star to become a member of the Manhattan Nationals. McGraw has a fairly good team this year, maybe a little weak on the pitching end, but he does not seem able to get it playing consistent baseball. Then he does not have the strength in the substitute lineup. When one of his regulars fail he is obliged to use a third-rater in this place. McGraw has been caught off his guard more this year, relative to second string men, than any other manager, with the possible exception of Callahan. The public likes a winner, and just now the Yankees are showing class and causing comment. That is largely responsible for the change of sentiment in New York, but the personality of McGraw is no little factor. Perhaps the day of the great leader is past, his sun is setting, and soon the New York populace will be clamoring for a new manager as bad as did the folks of Pittsburgh during the last three years of the Clarke regime.

TAKE A SANE VIEW OF THE SUBJECT.

Just how long a certain group of knockers are going to be allowed to exist around these parts is a matter the promoters of the City Baseball League are vitally interestd in. No worthy project was ever attempted that didn't receive its verbal bumps from irresponsibles and in most cases each knock has turned out to be a boost. Those who took the initiative in the formation of the local circuit had no idea of depriving any individual or collection of ballists of an opportunity to earn a few dollars playing the game Saturday afternoons, but they did have the best interests of the sport at heart. Since the league has secured its firm footing considerable grumbling has been going the rounds between those who have been forced to perform for pleasure rather than pecuniary remuneration. A broader view would indicate the ridiculousness of this attitude for in time the organization will gain prestige that will warrant the paying of players and the pay will be considerably higher than they would be able to earn at the present time casting about on independent lots. Get in line with the boosters and you'll profit in the long run.

BASKETBALL RULE CHANGE SUGGESTION.

When the basketball moguls convene in summer session one of the interesting points that will probably come up will be the matter of having the man fouled try for the penalty point. It is understood that a large majority of the rule makers are inclined to favor this change and no surprise would be occasioned by its passage. The practice most teams make of developing one expert foul shooter who gleans all the glory from this phase simply because he has been drilled incessantly in it is one that should be discouraged. Why shouldn't the man who has been fouled have the right to attempt to gain a point? In a majority of cases fouls are of a personal nature and the new rule would accomplish a two-fold purpose. It would tend to show the man up who commits fouls and it would not bring the foul shooting responsibility on the shoulders of one individual. It is worthy of at least a trial and should prove its value as other innovations have done by actually being put to the test.

Here is the time for April showers and no one has broached the subject of an athletic meet for Parker Field this year yet. When are we going to begin operations for this classic; now or at the eleventh hour? Some are arguing that the many athletic features on the Newark anniversary program this year will detract from any interest that would ordinarily be manifested in a local meet but the promoter who has faced this brand of competition before it is classed as the healthiest advertiser and more likely to increase than to detract from any enthusiasm that might be evidenced.

Plainfield High School is represented at the Penn relays today by one of the largest squads of athletes that was ever sent from this place. Just how well they will do against the cream of high school athletic talent from all parts of the country is a matter that we can't foretell, but it is safe to conclude that they will show the best that is in them and we would not be among the surprised if they happen to romp home with a prize or two. At least we expect to see a former Plainfield High School athlete pull down a couple of awards.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Robert J. Fitzsimmons, former champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, loping down Park avenue yesterday afternoon decked out in a Prince Albert coat, an immaculate white vest, and a low rakish slouch hat—the last-named just like the ones rural detectives wear when they go gum-shoeing for safe-blowers.

Four young men with very noticeable expectant smiles on their faces, walking up North avenue late Thursday night carrying three "live" cases of beer.

Leo Zeisel endeavoring to break speed records on West Front street yesterday noon with a one-lung Indian motorcycle while holding both feet on the ground.

A group composed of Constable George York, Police Lieut. Maurice Higgins and Bert Littell standing at the corner of North and Park avenues waving their arms and excitedly telling a West End contracting carpenter that Judge Runyon knew more about the Bible and could deliver a better sermon than Dr. Biederwolf. Carpenter had previously made the statement that Dr. Biederwolf was the better of the two. [Editor's note.—Said carpenter once suffered a sunstroke from which he has never fully recovered.]

This one was overheard Thursday night at the Columbus Club:

J. J. Varley ((rushing up to Arthur A. Cannon and exclaiming): "Where have you been these past few days; haven't seen you in so long I thought you were over in Dublin fighting with the Irish reservists?"

Cannon: "Well, I haven't been over there, but maybe if the trouble keeps on I'll be going."

John J. Casey (from a corner of the room): "That's right, Art, they'll soon be needing a 'Cannon' over there."

TRIO OF CYCLISTS IN NEWARK EVENTS

Simon, Mortenson and Meyers Will Compete at the Velodrome Tomorrow.

As representatives of the Queen City Wheelmen, a cycling organization of this city, Holger Mortenson, William Simon and Harry Meyers, have sent in their entries to the management of the Newark Velodrome and will participate tomorrow in the weekly schedule of events. This trio competed at the Newark track two weeks ago and returned with excellent records, although handicapped by the lack of track equipment, being forced to use their road outfit on that occasion. All three have since secured their track material, however, and are in excellent condition for the events. Each will start in a number of the amateur specials.

Weather permitting another attempt will be made tomorrow to stage the race meet postponed from last Sunday. With ten races in all and the re-appearance of at least six of the so-called "outlaws," George Cameron, Harry Kaiser, the New Yorkers; Lloyd Thomas, Willie Hanley, the Californians, and the two Newarkers, Martin Ryan and Eddie Madden, the races should prove to be full of action.

Frank Kramer, the national champion, will clash with "Long Bob" Spears, the Australian, in the feature match at two-thirds-mile, while Marcel Dupuy, France's erratic sprinter, meets Frank Cavanagh, the Newark Irishman, in a similar match. Joe Fogler, the Brooklyn six-day star, will meet Michael Debaets, a Belgian "war baby" in an unlimited pursuit race ,and Eddie Root, another six-day favorite, will defend his money-making Brassard against Bobby Walthour, the veteran.

All of the professionals will start in a five-mile open and half-mile open and half-mile handicap A two-mile invitation race is also scheduled for the non-winning professionals in the other races. The amateur races consist o a half-mile novice, a one-mile handicap and a two-mile race.

MUCH MALIGNED MINNESOTA GIANT LITERALLY CUT "AL" REICH TO PIECES

FRED FULTON.

Fred Fulton, the tall Minnesota heavyweight, pounded Al Reich, the New York heavyweight, into submission in nine rounds at the Stadium A. C. at the Manhattan Opera House last night. Referee Bill Brown stopped the bout early in the ninth round, when both of Reich's eyes were closed and he was groping helplessly around the ring trying to get away from Fulton's incessant attack of left jabs.

Reich was badly defeated. His face was beaten and swollen, and blood flowed from a cut over his left eye. All the fight had long before been taken out of him, and he was weak and groggy when the referee saved him from further punishment. Fulton had one of the frostiest receptions imaginable. It seemed as if all thumbs were turned down. It was a case of tossing the victim to the lion, but Fulton refused to be the victim. Immediately he unlimbered a left jab that was about the best thing seen in heavyweight ranks since the days of "Kid" McCoy. That left was his big asset, and what he did to Reich with it is almost a shame to mention. In the parlance of the ring, he hit Reich with "everything but the bucket." His left was almost uncanny in its accuracy. Reich is supposed to be one of the best boxers in the heavyweight brigade, yet he looked against Fulton's left like a second-rate boxer against a Packey McFarland.

Fulton weighed 217 pounds. He is 6 feet 6 inches tall, but much of his bulk is over his waist. His physical make-up is frail when compared with that of a well-proportioned Hercules like Willard. Fulton's jaw was exposed for attack any time that Reich chose to shoot a punch over, but he failed to take advantage of the openings which Fulton gave him. When Reich tried to hammer in body blows, they had little effect.

FARMER A. C. TO FILL VACANCY IN LEAGUE

Will Take Over the Schedule of the Defunct Plainfield A. A. Aggregation.

At a meeting of the City Baseball League last evening, discussion of the disbanding of the Plainfield A. A. on the eve of the opening day celebration was the important topic. Although no definite action was taken in the matter, it is understood that the Farmers A. C. will take over the schedule of the defunct organization and will assume its place in the City League.

While Gifford Jones was not present at the meeting, he sent word that as he expects to take a position in Newark and will eventually move to that city, he does not feel that he can look after the interests of the local club. Just why the loss of Jones should mean the disbanding of a baseball team and the threatened disruption of a perfectly good league is an enigma. There are those who suggested that another manager be selected to fill "Dip's shoes," but the idea seems to have been looked upon with disfavor. According to information received from official sources, the players signed up by Jones are free to play with any other league team that desires their services. The Farmers have a team of their own and are not on the market for new material, although they could use some if they could get it.

Tommy Mullin, who was signed up by Jones, fully intended playing with the A. A. team. The Alberts boys were also ready for the opening gun; and any apprehension that Jones may have had in regard to inability to place a winner on the field is ungrounded. It is a fact that his hurling staff had agreed, previously, to perform elsewhere, but the rest of his team stuck to the ship.

While it is unfortunate that the Plainfield A. A. is no more, what little sorrow the fans must experience is offset by the announcement that the Farmers are ready and eager to take over the vacant berth.

The teams represented at the scheduled meeting last evening were the Tabs, Clinton Avenue, First Baptist and Netherwood, the last-named team being the one with which the Farmers will have to battle today. Inasmuch as the Netherwood team captured the flag last year and will raise the gonfalon at today's game, the entrance of the Farmer outfit into the league company will be an auspicious one.

PERTH AMBOY PACERS WILL OPEN SEASON

Mullin and Randolph to Be in Lineup Against Fast Passaic Outfit.

The Perth Amboy Pacers, with whom Tommy Mullin, Frank Hand, Cliff Randolph and Red Grimes perform, will open the baseball season at Perth Amboy tomorrow afternoon, when the fast Passaic outfit will call for a "defeat." The Pacers this year are owned and operated by Billy Pfau, who also holds the reins of the Washington team of the newly formed Pennsylvania-New Jersey League, otherwise known as the "Schwab League" or "Steel Circuit."

According to information handed out by G. W. Miller, secretary of the Washington team, Pfau will divide his charges into two teams, each section playing an exhibition contest tomorrow. Red Grimes will have charge of the band that remains in Perth Amboy, while Pfau will direct the lads who will meet the Degnon Grays in Long Island City. According to the same information, Pfau will compare the merits of the two divisions and will send the better of the two to Washington to play in the new league.

It is most likely that the team representing Washington will have as battery "Cliff" Randolph and "Nibs" Hand. The infield, which Pfau characterizes as worth a "million dollars," will be made up of Worth, Stinson, Mullen and O'Leary, a graduate of Villa Nova, and a newcomer in Amboy circles. In the game at Perth Amboy tomorrow, Randolph will not pitch, Harry Applegate having drawn the assignment.

WHEELER, OF PLAINFIELD, LOST AT LAKEWOOD

As a result of yesterday's play in the Lakewood Country Club's spring golf tournament, Sydney Sharwood, Merion, and James G. Batterson, Fox Hills, came through in the upper half of the draw and Waldo M. Paul, Charlotte, N. C., and Fred Herreshoff, Garden City, in the lower half.

In the fourth sixteen, first round, P. F. Miller, of Baltusrol, defeated T. S. Wheeler, of this city, 1 up, 19 holes.

Those who are in a position to judge are picking Waldo M. Paul as the winner in the semi-final and final rounds, which will be staged today. There are others, however, who believe, that Herreshoff's nerve will keep him in the running.

FARMERS STEP IN TO FILL THE GAP

Plainfield A. A. Retires From City League Leaving Vacancy For New Owners.

The Farmer A. C., which is managed by Amos Stites, has assumed the vacant berth in the City League and should make things interesting. The Farmers are a strictly local team and have been an amateur organization ever since infancy.

The team is one composed of young fellows of rare ability. They are lads who stick together and in fact, many of the Farmer victories can be attributed to the ability to stick together. In the pitching staff, the club finds its greatest weakness, although both Kachelries and Stites have to their credit many notable victories. Of the two hurlers, Stites seems to be the better but he has not had the experience that Kachlries has had. However, the two lads are capable of holding up the Farmer end of the pitching work. Behind the bat, the new leaguers have Morley and Anderson, the latter being the regular catcher and the former a pitcher when he is needed. The addition to "Tush'" Jaeger to the infield adds a tower of strength to that section of the team. Friele, Ryan and Campbell are all good men and are on a par with the present City League players.

It is very probable that the Farmers will present a "surprise" lineup this afternoon but after Monday evening's league meeting, the roster of the outfit will be known and any possibility of a surprise avoided.

CITY LEAGUE GAMES FOR THIS AFTERNOON

The City League will open its season this afternoon with the outfits playing as follows:

T. A. B. S. vs. First Baptists (West End Field).

Clinton Avenue vs. Hope Chapel (Soccer Field).

Farmers vs. Netherwood (Emerson Field).

"SPIRITUALISM"

Sermon, in part, of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Yesterday Afternoon.

"Spiritualism is but a system of lies and it arrays itself against the Lord of Heaven," said the Rev. William E. Biederwolf in his sermon at the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon. It was a severe arraignment of "Spiritualism," and the evangelist pleaded with his hearers to "stay out of its seances lest you bring on yourself the severe judgments of God."

"My friends," said the evangelist, "avoid this hellish heresy as you value your soul; for once put your hand into the hand of the witch of Endor and she will lead you finally to a denial of everything you now hold sacred concerning your faith and in the end will take you with herself, hand in hand, into the bottomless pit of perdition."

Dr. Biederwolf's sermon in part follows:

"I have frequently seen myself in good light, sticks and handkerchiefs pass through a curtain and yet an examination of the curtain did not show any changes in it whatever."

Who said that? Some brainless ignoramus?

"Twelve months have now passed since my boy died, in almost every week of which I have been cheered and comforted by messages from him who is nearer and dearer to me than ever before."

Who said that? Some adle-pated fanatic?

"I have seen a phantom form come from a corner of the room, take an accordion in its hand and glide about the room playing the instrument?"

Who said that? Some thick-skulled dunce?

"During a period of twelve years I have had communications with the spirits of those who have been for some time dead."

Who said that? Some brain-fuddled easymark?

"I have talked with the spirit of Katie King scores and scores of times, saw her form appear and disappear and photographed her many times."

Who said that? Some fool?

No.

Professor Alfred RussellWallace, the world-renowned zoologist and famed the world over along side of Charles Darwin for the so-called discovery of the Darwinian theory of the "Origin of Species," said the first.

William T. Stead, the noted journalist and scholar, said the second.

Sir Oliver Lodge, the great minded scientist, said the third.

Professor Richard Hodgson, LL.D., one of America's leading scientists, said the fourth.

Sir William Crookes, the greatest chemist of modern times, said the fifth.

Speaks Without Knowing.

And Professor James, the most eminent of America's recent psychologists, and Professor Hyslop, of Columbia University, and others of world repute, now dead, like Fichte, the philosopher, and Professor Hare, the first American chemist of his day, and Challis and scores of others of the most noted in every branch of science have committed themselves to the fact of this thing we call Spiritualism; until a large part of the scientific world is saying with Flammarion, the celebrated French astronomer, that "Any scientific man who declares spiritualistic phenomena to be impossible is one who speaks without knowing what he is talking about."

Now with an array of testimony before us like that, it is utter nonsense to say that there is nothing in Spiritualism. It is easy enough to Pooh Pooh, but that neither proves your own intelligence nor gets rid of the stubborn facts before you.

Science has made a fool out of herself more than once by merely thinking a thing was so and putting her "ipse dixit" on it before she had proved it, but when science can come across with the proof, she is under obligation to speak and we are under obligation to listen, if we've got anything to listen with.

We used to sneer at the mere mention of Spiritualism and call the whole thing a fraud and a fake from A to Z and the public was entertained, and so is it today, by traveling magicians who explained the tricks of the trade and performed for us practically all of the supposed spiritualistic phenomena in vogue.

I. IS THE WHOLE THING A FRAUD AND A FAKE?

Well, you can put it down as a dead sure thing that about nine-tenths of it is just that thing, and a bigger set of liars and fakers never lived than the majority of these mediums and clairvoyants and clairaudients and slate-writers and table-tippers and other ghostly manipulators.

Three Black I's.

Some one has said there are Three Black I's that go with Spiritualism, and these will give you a comprehensive reason why you should shun it as one of the most dangerous and unholy heresies of the day.

1. The first Black I is Insanity.

Dr. Winslow, the Oxford lecturer on mental diseases, says the prevalence of madness owing to Spiritualism is on the increase.

It stands to reason that it is ruinous to the mediums. Sir William Crookes himself says, "After witnessing the painful state of nervous and bodily prostration in which many of the experiments have left the medium fainting, pale, breathless, I cannot doubt but that the violence of physchic forces means a corresponding drain on the vital forces.

Judge Edmonds in a lecture in behalf of Spiritualism admitted all this in so many words. He said, "There is a fascination about consulting with the spirits of the dead that has a tendency to lead people off from their right judgment and to instill into them a fanaticism that is revolting to the natural mind."

2. The second Black I of Spiritualism is Immorality.

No system of teaching that advocates free love and pours contempt on the divine ordinance of marriage can intelligently claim anything else than immorality as its natural outgrowth.

I know that some of them teach that the unmarried state is the higher condition for this life and they talk about a spiritual marriage by which they are united in wedlock to some spirit in the other world. If I am not mistaken we have on record a ceremony for such a marriage already in the United States.

They talk about "elective affinities," and "spiritual matches," and "affinital relations." No matter how many times you are married here, every person has an affinity who will be their spouse through all eternity.

3. The Third Black I of Spiritualism is Infidelity.

But we will be more specific.

What It Denies.

7. Spiritualism denies the Inspiration of the Bible.

The author of "Outlines of Spiritualism for the Young," says, "To assert that the Bible is a holy and divine book, and that God inspired the writers to make known His divine will, is a gross outrage on and misleading to the public. The truth is the Old Testament is neither more nor less than Jewish history. The New Testament is made up of traditions and theological speculations by unknown persons. A book so full of errors requires to be read with care."

2. Spiritualism denies the Scriptural doctrine of Prayer.

If prayer is answered it is not because it was offered to God in the name of Christ, but as Mr. Wallace, in his essay on Modern Spiritualism, puts it, "the men who pray most frequently, most earnestly and most unselfishly attract towards them a number of spiritual beings who sympathize with them and who, when the necessary mediumistic power is present, will be able, as they are often willing, to answer the prayers."

What a poor exchange! All this balderdash, for the rich promise of our Lord and the sweet experience of the child of God in regard to the blessed privilege of prayer.

3. Spiritualism denies the existence of hell and the personality of the Devil.

In the "Outlines," quoted a moment ago, it is said, "All spirit people of wisdom, knowledge and love say there is no burning hell,—no fearful devil." In a spiritualistic book entitled, "Whatever Is, Is Right," the writer says, "There is no devil and there are no evil spirits." To the Spiritualist the devil is merely an abstract principle of evil. How absolutely opposed to the teaching of the word of God is all this we do not need to be told.

4. Spiritualism denies the Scriptural doctrine of the Holy Spirit.

It teaches that God is dual annd that the Holy Spirit is the motherside of God. One of their most noted writers says, that Holy Spirit means nothing more than holy breath and that Jesus meant no more than this when He made mention of this supposed holy personality; while Gerald Massey says that the "other Comforter" that Jesus promised to send was quite naturally the spirit of a departed loved one comforting the bereaved here on earth!!!

Where It Leads.

Multitudes who are trifling with Spiritualism have no idea where its pernicious teaching is leading them.

5. Spiritualism denies the Scriptural doctrine of the hereafter.

The Word of God says, "Now is the day of salvation," but Spiritualism extends this day beyond the grave and out into the other world.

There are seven spheres into which the spirits of the departed go. The spirits of the wicked dwell in the lowest sphere in places of darkness and misery until repentance begins to take hold on them and then they rise into the sphere above and so on until they dwell as pure spirits in the higher regions.

Can a Christian believe in such bombastic nonsense?

6. Spiritualism denies the Christian doctrine of the Atonement.

Salvation, it always proclaims as a thing of personal merit. Oftentimes in a seance one of these devilish spirits representing himself as a spirit of the higher sphere will tell of his visit to the lower sphere to awaken and help the unrepentant: But what do they tell them? Not, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," even if such a thing were possible then, but "'Repent, Look up, Strive, Be Sympathetic, and helpful to your fellow spirits in darkness,"

7. And lastly Spiritualism denies the Deity of the Lord Jesus Christ.

He was a Social Reformer; He was an honored Teacher, but He was not the Son of God only in the sense that any other man can be.

The notorious Gerald Massey, the poet Spiritualist, wrote, "I do not find that Christ claimed for Himself more than He held out as possible for others. When he identified himself with the Father it was the oneness of mediumship. He was the great Medium or Mediator."

The best they can do for your Lord is to make a medium out of Him!!! Dr. Wisse declares that, "All testimony received from advanced spirits only shows that Christ was a Medium or Reformer in Judea; that He is now an advanced Spirit in the sixth sphere; but that He never claimed to be God and does not at present."

This is Spiritualism and what it thinks of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Could blasphemy, could profanity go further!!

What blasphemous daring!!

What demoniacal contempt!!

Avoid It Always.

My friend, avoid their hellish heresy as you value your soul; for once put you hand in the hand of the witch of Endor and she will lead you finally into a denial of everything you now hold sacred concerning your faith and in the hand will take you with herself, hand in hand, into the bottomless pit of perdition.

They talk about the rapping of the spirits, but if "all the raps it has ever heard" from the discarnate demons of the other world and the incarnate devils of this world "could be gathered GALLEY THREE—AFTER SERMON together in its own head in one thundering rap of annihilation" the better it would be for both heaven and earth.

It is an affair of darkness and what fellowship can a child of light have with the powers of night? "Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of Demons."

It is a system of lies and it arrays itself against the Lord of heaven. Stay out of its seances and don't tamper with it lest you bring yourself the severe judgments of God.

It is an adulterous, damnable, soul-destroying religion. You don't need any raps from spirits blessed or damned. The gentle knockings of God's Spirit are enough for His child. Listen and you can hear Him rapping now. Then lift up the voice of your soul and say, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth," and He will tell you all you ought to know for "When He the Spirit of truth is come, He will guide you into all truth."

"My, God, My God!" cried a Spiritualist, who was once a Christian, "can I ever get back my faith?"

Yes, you may get it back. Go alone with God—you don't need any medium—and listen to the whisperings of His blessed Spirit and He will guide you home.

"TAKE UP THY BED AND WALK"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

Text, "Rise, Take Up Thy Bed and walk."—John 5:8.

There are some fellows who won't go into the Kingdom of God at all unless they can go in headfirst. But God never said: "My son, give me thy head." He said: "My son, give me thy heart." You tackle this thing of becoming a Christian with your head alone and you'll have a head-on collision about one minute after you get started. If nothing else will do you but head work, about the best thing that could happen to you would be to run your old head up against some of the solid and mysterious facts of God and get a little horsesense knocked into it, and then maybe you'd call your heart up alongside of your head and move on the way God meant you to.

If ever there was a hopeless case it was this man at the pool of Bethesda. They discovered this pool on the way not many years ago close up by the way temple area—a huge intermittent spring, and when the waters welled up they thought an angel had come down and done it—maybe he did. I don't know—but anyhow they thought just at that time the water had a miraculous healing power.

There was a portico, a pentagonal peristyle, around the pool and it was crowded every day with patients, and this poor fellow I'm telling you about had been lying there for thirty-eight years, a hopeless paralytic with his dreamy eyes fixed on the healing waters he couldn't reach. It was an intermittent spring and the waters only boiled up for a few minutes at a time, and I suppose he had tried a thousand times to get there just in the nick of time, but always someone less helpless than himself had beat him to it.

He had waited there so long that despair akin to utter imbecility was written all over his face, and one day a magnetic looking stranger came along and asked him if he wanted to be healed. He said to him: "Wilt thou be made whole?" and I can hear the poor fellow begin to talk while the hope that was dead within him commenced to revive, and he says: "Why, yes, man that's what I'm lying here for. I have been coming here for thirty-eight years to be healed, and don't I look like I need it? I have lain here gazing on those healing waters, and I've seen others healed, and I know it can heal me, and yet here I am. Am I willing to be made whole? Why, of course I am, but I have no man to put me into the pool when the water is troubled. Now, stranger, you stand by and when the water is troubled get me in quick, if there's anything I can ever do for you, all you've got to do is to let me know. And while he was talking his eye met the stranger's gaze, and there was a tenderness in it he had never seen in any human's eye before, and he had a countenance such as he had never before seen any mortal being bear, and as he looked the stranger spoke again with a voice that seemed to thrill the helpless limbs with vigor and Jesus said.: "Take up thy bed and walk!"

Rise? How could he rise? If he could rise he would not have been lying there for eight and thirty years But he did rise when Jesus told him to, for when he made the effort, though utterly helpless, into his lifeless, crippled limbs quicker and more powerful than the current of the mightiest dynamo passed all the energy and might of the living God Himself.

Oh, my brethren, here is a great truth: "To them that obey Him He is the author of eternal life."

Can Do the Business.

And so I come to you with the message of Jesus Christ tonight. I don't care who you are or how far away from God you've been; if you want to be made whole Jesus can do the business for you. You say you've always been troubled with doubt and the way is dark. RISE and the light will shine and Christ will lead you out. You say your temptation is bitter and your passion is too strong. RISE and the chains will snap and Christ will set you free, and God's might will take the place of your weakness.

There are hundreds of you in this city and in this Tabernacle, poor, palsied, paralytic, hellbound souls who need Christ as much as ever did that poor fellow at the pool of Bethesda, but the great trouble with so many of you is that you are not willing to test the reality of religion and put to the proof the thing that Jesus says.

In some parts of the West the stockmen build a wall around the big pool of water to keep the cattle from wading in and making the water muddy. Then they build a platform over the pool and put a trough at one side of it. The trough can't be seen from the outside. One day an old ox reared up on his hind feet and looked over the platform, and said to the rest of them: "There ain't a drop of water in it," and Haeckel and Spencer and Andrew Carnegie say: "There's nothing in it," but an old ox thirsty for water says to the rest: "Come on," and he goes around the wall and walks out on the platform and the weight of his body forces the pure gurgling water up into the trough and he drinks and is satisfield. Yes, they say, "There's nothin it," but you let the poor sinner walk out on the promise of God and the water of life will spring up in his soul and he can drink and see that it is good.

Oh, my brother, do you want to know God. Do you want to be made whole? Do you want a faith that will satisfy you while you live and when you come to die; then hear the great Christ of God saying to you, now, RISE! And God help you to take Him at His word.

One reason why we have so many cross-grained, cantankerous, paralytic, no-account backsliders in the church is because they made provisions for a relapse when they took the cure.

Jesus wanted this poor fellow to realize that he was fixed up for keeps and that he didn't expect him to take a few feeble steps and then lie down again.

Going Back.

It was sad enough, God knows, to see that poor paralytic lying there on his dirty bed, but it would have been a good deal sadder to have found him there the next day after Jesus had met him and poured his poor, palsied body full of palpitating, pulsing, red-corpuscled health. And the saddest thing in the universe is to see a soul once touched with the glorious health of Jesus go hobbling back to Bethesda and lie down on a bed of paralysis.

One day last July I saw a large vessel launched from the Cramp shipyards in Philadelphia—one of the largest they ever put out. As she shot down the greased runners she seemed to be a living, breathing thing, throbbing with a mighty ambition for the sea.

It's great to see the way they do it. They take two long runners at an angle of twenty-three degrees and on top of them place two others with grease enough between them to start a soap factory. They bolt them at the upper end and then on the top of the runners the ship is built, first the keel and then the ribs of steel, and then a million bolts grip fast the mighty sheets of iron that make her sides. And as they rise from keel to deck everywhere the titanic thing is stayed by timber props until, as you walk beneath it, you seem to be wandering among a forest of branches of trees. Next goes in the heart—deep down in its breast—giant engines of 10,000 horsepower, whose mighty throbbings are to laugh the fury of the sea to scorn. And when the stacks are raised and the decks are laid, promenade and main, and all the rest, the hour has come for launching. The flags of every nation, Old Glory above them all, stream from stem to stern. At the stem of the vessel rises a stand where distinguished guests assemble. Some favored girl is there to break a bottle of wine over its nose—she's going to christen it. Where the fool custom of using wine came from I don't know. You might as well burst a bootle of booze over your baby's head at the baptismal font. When the Tennessee was launched Miss Warfield christened her with a bottle of water—me for Miss Warfield.

Bumping Down the Props.

What are those thundering, thumping sounds? It's the music of battering rams swung by a jolly host of brawny built toilers bumping down the props. Everybody is on the "qui vive." Every window is crammed; every roof is crowded and every pier is packed.

And now listen. Someone is sawing timber. Those top runners on which the great ship is resting and which are bolted down only at the top are being sawed in two. The band begins to play. The crowd holds its breath and the mighty monster of the deep, as if anxious to get away, as the saw has nearly done its work, tears the fingers from the bolted end that holds it back. The bottle smashes! A voice says: "I christen thee 'Great Northern!'" and the old greyhound of the ocean shoots down the greased planks to the music of the band and thousands of shouting, loved ones on the deck are shouting gracefully as a seagull dips down from the skies.

And now in fancy I see that boat putting out from the wharf for the sunny climes of other lands. The flags are flying, the bands are playing, loved ones on the reck are shouting "Good-bye! God bless you," and the journey is begun. All nature seems interested in the trip; the skies smile and the shining sun kisses the ocean's face and turns its ripples into silver and its feathery foam into gold.

But just outside the bar the winds rise, the air grows dark and the hurricane comes. The ocean is lashed into fury and the proud, strong ship begins to show its mettle. She rolls and tosses and rides waves until her twin screws buzz in midair, but she sticks her steel nose into the black banks of the scowling waves and plows on.

Breakers Ahead.

But a cry is heard: "Breakers dead ahead!" shouts the captain, but it's too late. They said she couldn't sink, but when she ran her proud steel nose into that mountain of rock just bulging up through the surface of the sea she gave a deepseated groan and, trembling like a thing of life, she settled down on her side and went down to a watery grave.

And how sad it is! And how it makes your heart ache! And how you sympathize with those whose loved ones went down! Maybe some one you loved was on board, and how sad it is. But oh, it's sadder than that when it's the shipwreck of a soul. You started out full of joy; you came down in a meeting like this maybe and gave your heart to Christ, and you thought and everybody else did, you were going to sail well across the sea of life. But just a little beyond the bar and things became unsettled—temptations came—old companions got about you; your old lust stood up before you again and it was too much for you, and you went down and today you're away from God and back again in the old life of sin where you used to be.

Now why is it? It's because you don't take up your bed. You leave the thing in a way that makes it easy to go back.

John Culpepper tells us that one time the church officers had one of his members up for drunkenness The fellow's name was Johnson, and he was very penitent, and said he was ashamed of his own weakness, and Mr. Culpepper told him he was not surprised at all, and that seemed to hurt the fellow's feelings, and he said: "Brother Culpepper, I thought you believed in me and was expecting me to hold out," and Mr. Culpepper said: "Johnson, I did believe in you and was expecting you to hold out, but the first time I saw you in town after you had joined the church you hitched your horse to the same old hitching post that you had tied it to for years, just 15 feet from the barroom where you've spent thousands of dollars and gotten drunk hundreds of times, and I said to myself then: 'If old Johnson didn't change his hitching post he'll be drunk again in six months.' If you had been afraid of yourself and afraid of the saloonkeeper and afraid of your old associates, and afraid of the Devil, and tied your horse way around yonder to the Methodist church horserack and asked me or Bill Hayes to go down town with you for the first few times I would have expected you to make the steep grade." And I tell you that old hitching post explains the difficulty with about nine tenths of the old backsliders you find in the church today.

Must Leave the Old Life.

You've got to cut loose from the old life, and the farther you can get away from it the better it will be for you. We prayed till midnight with one fellow who wanted to be a Christian, but he didn't want to give up his cigarettes. How much do you suppose he would ever have amounted to as a Christian if he had stuck to that senseless, fool habit?

Now that's the thing in your life more than anything else that's been keeping you away from God. Is it the booze on your sideboard, the card table in your home, the Christ dishonoring crowd you've been training with? Well, do you think for one minute you can become a Christian and stay one and not say "Good-bye" absolutely to that thing? There's no power in the universe can save some people unless they make a clear cut with the world. Get a new hitching post; get rid of the trifling, godless crowd you've been training with; change your track and your drive; say "Goodbye" to the old life and the dirty deeds of the flesh. Be a man and be true like you know you ought to be. Don't be a mollycoddle.

If I'd walk up to you and say: "I understand you're a dirty liar and people wouldn't believe you if you swore to the truth on all the Bibles in the country," what would you say? Would you say: "Yes, yes, I know I am; but then, you see, I'm only human, and you must not expect too much of me."

If I'd walk up and say: "I understand you're a miserable old deadbeat, that you've skinned every merchant in town and nobody can trust you because you're nothing but a low-down thief," what would you say? Would you say: "Well, I I guess it's all so; but then you know you can't expect anything of a man: I don't profess to be perfect."

If I'd walk up to you and say: "Look here, you old libertine, they tell me you're leading a double life and that half the men in this town have forbidden their wives to speak to you," what would you say? Would you say: "Oh, well, I'm only human and I have my faults and this one is one of them, but you must not expect too much of me."

Must Produce the Proof.

No; if I'd walk up to you and come across with something like that you'd have your fighting clothes on in a minute and say: "Look here, you prove what you say or I won't be responsible for what happens; I don't allow any man to call me a liar or a thief or a libertine. Come on with your proof."

And you'd be right. Then, say, my brother, why don't you take the same stand about everything that's mean and low and trifling and un-Christian and be as true as your ideals and as true as your vows. When you start on the Christian way cut absolutely loose from the other way and be a Christian man, every inch of you. Pitch your ideals high, and, God helping you, keep on going after them.

But above all, my brother, begin at the place of your strongest temptation, at the place of your besetting sin and play quits with the devil there. Roll up your bed.

And then what? WALK!

That's the cost of your cure; not of getting it, but of keeping it. Some people say they're Christians, but they don't deliver the goods.

The most appropriate hymn for some of you to sing is: "Asleep in Jesus, Blessed Sleep."

Of course, God expects a Christian to be on the job helping him bring this old world around to Christ. When a farmer has a hired man he doesn't want him to sit around singing praises to him and telling him how he likes his meals and his bed, but he expects him to hustle around and slop the hogs and do the chores and take a hand out in the field, and God isn't interested in your hallelujahs one rap unless you get on the job and make good on your shouting. Two fellows went up the Mississippi river trying to see which one could blow his horn the loudest, and one of them made his blow so loud it exhausted all the steam and stopped the boat. Nothing doin'. It was all blow and no go.

Be of Some Use.

Have you been healed? Have you taken up your bed? Then walk or you'll get paralysis again and have to go back to Bethesda. If you don't use your legs they'll shrivel up and a man's soul will atrophy just as quick as his legs. A Christian is a good deal like a top. When it hums it stands erect; when it slows up it wobbles; when it stops it falls. Are you humming or are you wobbling or are you down and out? If you are then Christ is at the pool today saying to every soul that needs to hear His voice: "Rise, take up thy bed and walk." He's been walking round about and through old Plainfield ever since the first settler threw up his cabin in the valley, but thousands are dead and gone and thousands are living yet who have never heard His voice because their ears were filled with the hum of other things. But He's here today as never before, riding in the street cars, calling at the public schools, out in the factory, whispering to the merchant, the banker and the doctor and the lawyer as they turn the dial on the safe: "Rise, take up thy bed and walk." And may God help you to hear his voice and obey before it's everlastingly too late.

Will you rise tonight?

You say: "I can't understand how."

I say: "You don't need to understand how."

You say: "I'll try to get up some other time."

I say: "Now is God's time for you."

You say: "If God intends to save me He'll do it in His own time and His own way."

I say: "This is God's time and this is God's way. Will you rise?"

You say: "No."

Then there's nothing for your poor palsied soul to do but to lie there on your bed of sin and indifference and unbelief, and rot in its disease. But I beg of you don't do it. Don't damn your soul by your stubbornness. But rise, take up your bed and in God's name walk.

I could picture the awful doom of a soul tonight that dies on its bed of sin and the appeal would be a legitimate one. When I appeal to your self-interest I don't appeal to your selfishness. It's not selfishness for a man to run out of a burning building. It's not selfishness for a man to get out of the way of the oncoming judgment of God. God says: "Free from the wrath to come," and the man who runs is not a coward. But I'm coming to you tonight with the other appeal. And I say to you one and all alike: "Come and serve; come and suffer; come and be saviours." And let us see not only what God will do for us but what God will do through us in making this old sin-sick world a little more like God meant it to be when He first put man into it.

Choose Your Side.

You remember the story Prescott tells us in his history of the Conquest of Peru about Pizarro. Mexico had yielded under the hand of Cortez and a small company of brave followers, and Pizzaro thought that an experience like that might be repeated in Peru, of whose fabulous wealth he had heard such glowing reports. But they were called upon to suffer such indescribable hardships that his soldiers were about to desert him, and just then came ships from the homeland to carry them back to safety. Pizarro told them plainly they might go back if they wanted to. Then drawing his sword he traced a line from east to west on the sand, and pointing toward the south he said: "Men, before you lies toil, hunger, drenching storms, disease and possibly death; but there is victory and great wealth and glory behind you in ease and pleasure and safety. On that side lies Peru with its perils and its riches; on this side is Spain with its comfort, but eternal disgrace. Now men, choose whether you will go on to Peru; as for me I will go on." And he stepped across the line. In a moment his faithful lieutenant was by his side and said: "I too." And then came another and another until the whole of his brave little band was at his back and with them Pizzaro swept on to a conquest which has ever since been one of the marvels of succeeding generations.

Oh, my brother, I know there's a heaven to gain and a hell to shun. I know there's weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth, and I know there's joy and happiness with the redeemed among the walks of God's glory-lit world, but not for these reasons do I bid you come tonight. But I sound a trumpet call and bid you come and fight with Christ against the powers of iniquity and claim this world for God. I do not say there are no scars, but there's a great aching heart of humanity crying for help, and I call you in the name of Christ and say: "There's a duty to perform; there's a victory to be won and heroism to be shown" and I know that will appeal to you. Then come and be a saviour of humanity, and in so coming you will find that you have saved your own soul with a salvation more glorious than ever you thought was possible. And if you'll come, come now, and take my hand and let us tell God about it.

Prior to the sermon, the National Male Quartet sang "Just Outside," and "Mac," the Scotch singer, known as the "Song Evangel," sang with much effect "A Stranger Stands Outside the Door." Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, who read the scripture lesson of the evening, took occasion to remark that Mr. Braider, who had been honored, got his training in his church, and was still a member, although Dr. Anderson had stolen him away to play the organ in his church. However, he wished to say that Mr. Braider deserved all the honors bestowed.

Dr. Biederwolf, before beginning to preach, remarked that he had been informed that 90 per cent. of the employes of the International Motor Company's plant who were present last night, had decided for Christ; and he added this speaks well for the character of men employed by that concern.

Dr. Biederwolf closed his discourse with one of his strongest appeals to the unconverted, as well as the church members, and he urged all to join in the great work of helping to bring others to Christ. He said: "A Christian is just like a top. When a top is humming it stands up straight; when it begins to run down it wobbles and when it stops it is down and out. Do you want to be that kind of a Christian?" declared the evangelist in his most appealing voice.

The appeal for the collection early in the evening was made by Harry Gee, a member of the finance committee, and he took occasion to tell the large audience that it was enjoying a great privilege and one which it should appreciate to such an extent that it should respond with a generous collection.

RESENT PLAN TO ELECT BRYAN

Mississippi Congressmen Don't Want Him as Delegate.

Washington, April 29.—Members of congress from Mississippi were incensed at the suggestion that William J. Bryan may be elected a delegate to the St. Louis convention by Mississippi Democrats. It became known that Bryan's admirers in the Sixth district of Mississippi are discussing plans to elect him a delegate and that Mississippi newspapers have taken the matter up.

Representative Collier of Mississippi said that Mississippians should resent the move and prevent it from gaining headway. He believed Bryan would not have the courage to accept as delegate from Mississippi after his defeat in Nebraska, even if his friends should elect him.

WESTERN PROMOTERS OFFER MORAN A $20,000 PURSE

The latest offer for a fight with Frank Moran as one of the principals was received by Ike Dorgan, his manager, yesterday in a telegram from Tulsa, Okla., in which a representaive of three wealthy sportsmen guaranteed Moran a purse of $20,000 for a fight with Carl Morris on May 30 in Tulsa. The telegram stated that the promoters of the bout had secured the Tulsa racetrack for the holding of the fight, and were prepared to carry the matter through.

Jim Coffey is training in the hope of landing this engagement in case Moran rejects it. Although Dorgan is holding out for the guarantee plus a percentage of the gate receipts for his boxer, it seems that Moran is the greater attraction, as it was stated in the telegram that the promoters were sure they could meet all the demands of the Moran management.

LAST REHEARSAL OF "MYSTIC ROSE"

Prof. Skilling Highly Pleased With Work of the Principals.

The last rehearsal of the full company for "The Mystic Rose," the mammoth and spectacular Japanese-American comic opera, which is to be produced for three nights, beginning with next Monday, at the Plainfield Theatre, under the auspices of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, previous to the full dress rehearsal in the theatre, was held last evening. Professor Skilling, the composer and conductor, was highly pleased with the work of all the principals, as well as the specality numbers and the chorus. Mr. Skilling feels perfectly confident that with the help of the final dress rehearsal, which will be held previous to the opening performance, at which time the full orchestra will be present, the production on Monday night will be as finished as though the entire cast had been appearing in the opera before the public for several days.

Those who have had an opportunity to witness the rehearsals are simply carried away with the excellent stage work and the wonderfully catchy music of "The Mystic Rose." The women who have been acting as chaperons to the two hundred and fifty little girls who appear in the "Flower and Buttery" ballet, and thus have had an opportunity to watch the children perfect their parts, are praising this feature to the skies. In their opinion, those who attend the opening night will encounter the most pleasant surprise they have ever experienced, as nothing approaching this feature has ever been presented in Plainfield.

Other specialty numbers which have made very decided hits in every city in which "The Mystic Rose" has been presented, the The Boola Boola Boys singing "Under the Mango Tree," the Geisha Double Sextet, in a dancing speciality, and the song, "A Japanese Ideal Dream," the Dancing Tea Girls, who also render "In the Flowery Land," the Tourists' Double Septet, who contribute a dancing specialty in connection with the song, "You're the Girl Worth While," while the specialty act of "The Robbers' Trio," composed of Joseph C. Martin, Harry N. Blimm and Edward J. Harding, Jr., is sure to be a scream.

A very large number of reservations have been made and the committee requests that those who have had seats laid aside call for them tonight or early Monday morning. The sale for Monday is large, but some choice seats can be had, provided not more than two or three persons wish to be seated together.

PRESIDENT HIBBEN COMING TO DINNER

The Princeton Club of Plainfield has been fortunate in securing as its principal guest at its annual dinner, President Hibben of the University.

This is the first time for many years that the president of Princeton has attended the dinner of the local organization. The president of the club, Samuel T. McCarter, Jr., will act as toastmaster, and the speakers, in addition to President Hibben, will be Mayor Calkins, representing Harvard; Edward M. Stevenson, president of the Yale Club; S. M. Shoemaker, Jr., president of the Philadelphian Society of Princeton, and Mr. Richardson, of the class of 1910, who has recently returned from the trenches in France and whose story, as told already to some of the New York Clubs, has proved a most interesting and thrilling one.

The chairman of the dinner committee, Joseph Vandeventer, has perfected the arrangements for the dinner, which promises to be one of the largest in the history of the club.

"All these attacks were repulsed," the French War Office announced this afternoon.

"In their assaults the Germans tried all the methods with which they are wont to seek victory.

"The fighting was terrific on both banks of the Meuse,' acording to the communique. It opened on the west bank with a grenade attack on the French trenches protecting Hill No. 340, one of the key positions on Verdun's northwest front. This attack was repulsed. Then came a violent bombardment of the defensive lines at Avocourt, Esnes and Hill No. 04. When the conflict extended to the east bank, the Germans halted a violent bombardment of the French positions near Thiaumont farm to make an attack with liquid fire. Having prepared for this development, the French were also able to repulse this assault.

JOHN LEAL WILL RETIRE IN JUNE

After 35 Years as Teacher He Will Be Succeeded by C. D. Wardlaw.

CORPORATION FORMED

Commodious Property at 1038 Park Avenue is Purchased, Where an All-Day School Will Be Conducted.

Negotiations that have been under way for several months reached a conclusion today permitting announcement to be made of an important change in the conduct of Leal's School, one of the oldest and best known private educational institutions in this vicinity. John Leal, the founder and principal at the present time, will retire at the end of the present scholastic term and the work will be carried on by an incorporation under the name of the Wardlaw School. C. D. Wardlaw, of Berkeley avenue, who has been associated with Mr. Leal for many years, is president and principal of the incorporated company and the other officers are A. I. Nichols, of Fanwood, treasurer and business manager, and W. D. Hartshorne, of Philadelphia, associate principal. The capital is placed at $16,000, divided into seventy shares of common and ninety of preferred stock.

The retirement of Mr. Leal, which comes after thirty-five years of consistent service, will result in numerous changes for the future policy of the popular school. The present main building on West Front street is to be given up entirely and the classes will be moved to the former Lowe property at 1038 Park avenue, which has recently been purchased. With the alterations to the present residence there the site will be ideal for an institution of the standing that Leal's has always enjoyed. The changes will include the placing of well lighted and well ventilated class rooms, according to the strictest hygienic principles, a modern gymnasium and all the conveniences needed for congenial surroundings, commensurate with mental study. The grounds have a frontage of 150 feet on Park avenue and extend 400 feet to Arlington avenue, giving a sufficient area for two tennis courts and a splendid playground for the younger boys. Alexander Milne, who is a graduate of Leal's, has the contract for all the improvements to the building.

The Wardlaw regime policy of the school will be all day classes for boys from the earliest ages to college preparatory. The curriculum will include academic work, industrial arts and elementary science. The athletic portion of the day's routine will be an important features, Mr. Wardlaw believing that healthy bodies mean active and vigorous mentality. General play and athletic will be held in the afternoons to refresh the young minds after morning study. For several years past some of the Leal classes have been conducted in the former Boone property on West Seventh street and this department will also be transferred to the new location. There will be no junior or senior classes for the present.

Mr. Wardlaw, the new head of the institution, needs no introduction to Plainfield people. He has been an important factor in the conducting of the Front street building for many years and beside this has been active in local civic affairs as the head of the Netherwood Residents' Association. His education was completed in Trinity College, University of North Carolina and Columbia University. His teaching has a thoroughness that has made it distinctive with Leal graduates and he has the faculty of being able to select properly fitted assistants. His teaching corps at the Wardlaw School will include W. D. Hartshorne, A. I. Nichols, manual training; George W. A. Lyon, languages; Mrs. Charlotte C. Wardlaw, arts; Miss Abbie S. Hague and Miss Emma B. Ragland. There will be an advisory board of four college professors, and President Flavell Luther, of Trinity College, and President Edward K. Graham, of the University of North Carolina. The others will be from Columbia.

In the thirty-five years that it has been in existence, Leal's School has graduated hundreds of young men from prominent Plainfield families. The courses have been so thorough and efficient that students have readily been admitted to the leading universities of the country after certificate presentation. Many of the graduates in Plainfield have made names for themselves in the business and scientific world and with such a worthy predecessor as Mr. Leal it is safe to assume that the Wardlaw School will enjoy a still more successful career.

SOLDIERS CORNER 12,000 OF REBELS

Bloody Fighting Results in Capture of Buildings—Postoffice Shelled.

London, April 29.—12,000 rebels have been cornered by the King's soldiers sent to put down the riot in Ireland, according to an official report received here today. The rebels are made up of 10,000 Sin Feiners and 2,000 of Larkins' citizen army. They had established headquarters in the Postoffice Building, the Four Courts and other buildings in the heart of Dublin. The Postoffice building was shelled by a British warship and seriously damaged, but is still occupied by the rebels who have machine guns and appear to be well armed.

Severe fighting occurred in the Irish capital late yesterday afternoon when British troops attacked and captured the strongly intrenched positions of the rebels in Stephen's Green. The square itself is enclosed by an iron railing. Entrance is gained only through comparatively narrow gates, at which the Sinn Feiners had built high barricades of overturned autobuses and trucks.

Government troops rushed the barricades in a massed attack and after fifteen minutes of furious hand to hand fighting broke through the gate. Inside the square the rebels had thrown up shallow trenches, protected by sand bags. From behind these they poured fusillades at the British troops streaming through the gate.

LOCAL BOY BADLY HURT AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

George Cregar, fourteen years old, of 422 Spruce street, this city, was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital at noon today in a semi-conscious condition as the result of an acident at South Plainfield shortly before 12 o'clock. The boy rode to South Plainfield with the driver of a Standard Oil truck, and was sitting on the front seat while oil was being delivered at the Lehigh Valley Railroad station. The horses became frightened by a passing train and suddenly bolted, throwing Cregar to the ground.

The wheels of the heavily-loaded truck passed over the boy's chest and abdomen, crushing them badly. He was placed in an automobile by Robert Hamilton and hurried to the hospital, where it was said that his condition is serious.

POSTPONE MEETING OF PLAINFIELD RIFLE CLUB

The meeting of the Plainfield Rifle Club has been postponed from May 1 to May 8 owing to the fact that the performance of "The Mystic Rose" will be given on the former date. Then, too, it is probable that a military officer from Governor's Island will address the assemblage one week from Monday evening.

Although the meeting has been postponed, the charter member list will close this Monday evening. It is expected that over 150 charter members will be enrolled before that time. Applications are being received daily, and checks accompany the applications. Senator E. R. Ackerman joined the Rifle Cub today and expressed himself as being pleased with the project.

Owing to the fact that the membership of the club has grown to such large proportions it has been deemed necessary to hold meetings outside of the Frost building. It is very likely that the next meeting will be held in the Queen City Hotel.

MANY FRIENDS ATTEND MRS. GAUB'S FUNERAL

The funeral of Mrs. Fredirika Gaub, whose death ensued Wednesday morning following an operation, was held at her late home on Duer street yesterday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, several of whom came from distant points to be present. These included Jacob Gaub, of Cincinnati, a son, and Mrs. Harry Dunham, of near Wellsville, N. Y., a daughter. During the obsequies, Miss Etta Raybert rendered three of the deceased's solos, "Lead Kindly Light," "Face to Face" and "Nearer My God to Thee." There were many handsome floral tributes Jnoticeably among them a set piece from the family, marked "Mother," and another from the grandchildren, marked "Grandma."

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery ,the pall bearers being John, Jacob, Anton, William and Edward Gaub, five sons, and William Feaster, a close friend of the family.

GEORGE EDWARD STILLMAN.

George Edward Stillman, of 827 West Sixth street, died at noon today, following a two weeks' illness. He was sixty-six years old and is survived by his wife. He was a cousin to former Corporation Counsel William M. Stillman. The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

TO HOLD A BANQUET.

The I. C. T. Young Men's Club of Plainfield is to hold a banquet in the near future, entertaining as their guests the Young Ladies' Club of East Orange. The officers and men are hoping to make this occasion one which will long be remembered.

You've wished for it—We have made it

A player-piano so good and reliable as to be your most treasured possession at a price you could afford to pay.

Being thrifty and sensible, you have avoided the lure of "Sales instruments," of cleverly worded "Club offers" and the hundred and one smooth propositions that look good in print only.

Instinct has told you "better no player-piano at all than a cheap unreliable one"—and right you are. Therefore, you avoided instruments of which you never heard before. Because just as the name over your doorbell tells "here is an honest family"—just so with the name on your player-piano.

You know what the name CONWAY on your instrument means—you know that it stands for reliability and value.

And right here in this year of 1916, the piano industry's greatest revelation offers to you a fine, reliable and proudly named player-piano at YOUR price.

Quantity production has scored a triumph—this time in the piano industry as it already has done in the automobile industry.

The CONWAY-PRINCESS Player-Piano—the instrument of the music lover at the people's price—the marvelous Player action that has brought fame to instruments of a price you could not hope to pay.

That very instrument—and remember the name—is yours to own and enjoy at $375.

Come and see it here—play it yourself. It will be your most cherished possession for years and years to come.

FIRE IS RAGING IN DUBLIN NOW

Flames Spreading Through Sackville Street.

REBELS STILL HOLDING OUT

Revolt Spreads to South and West Galway and Enniscorthy Appear to Be Centers—Killarney, Clonmel and Gorey Are Disaffected—Casualties as Officially Announced Are Few.

London, April 29.—According to reports received here, a serious fire is raging in Sackville street, one of the principal thoroughfares of Dublin.

In various parts of the city sniping parties perched on the roofs of buildings continue to aggravate the government troops who are trying to put down the rebellion which started last Monday and which appears to be still raging fiercely although the government officially expressed confidence that its extinction is only a matter of time.

The Four Courts, situated on the northern banks of the Laffy, half way between the royal barracks and Dublin castle, south of the river, are still firmly in the hands of the rebels. Fires are raging in several parts of the city, causing great damage.

The rebellion has spread to the west and south of Ireland. This fact, already officially announced, was reiterated by the official press bureau in a statement which specifies the districts in which disturbances have broken out.

Centers of Disturbance.

"The principal centers of disturbance," says the statement, are County Galway and Enniscorthy."

County Galway is one of the largest Irish counties and lies due west of Dublin on the west coast, Galway, on Galway bay, being the principal city. Enniscorthy is a city in County Wexford, due south of Dublin twelve miles from the city of Wexford, which is situated on the southeastern coast.

"Disturbances are also reported from Killarney, Clonmel and Gorey," continues the official account. Killarney is a city in the southern part of County Kerry, in southwestern Ireland. Clonmel lies in County Waterford, in the southeast of the island, not far from Wexford, while Gorey is a small town near the east coast, slightly to the northeast of Enniscorthy.

The official statement adds:

"Other parts of Ireland appear to be normal. The general trend of reports received indicates that the disturbances are of a local character."

New casualties in Dublin, as officially reported, were two officers killed and five wounded. This brings the total number of officially reported casualties up to twenty-one killed and thirty-two wounded, if Lord Lansdowne's figures announced in the house of lords are taken as a basis.

The Evening News put the total casualties at forty-two killed and forty-six wounded. Today's figures added to these would bring the totals to forty-four killed and fifty-one wounded.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.
